ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH FINAL

COUNTY COUNCIL
VOTES FOR MORE POLICEMEN, FUND FOR REVALUATION

Record $9,233,216

Budget Approved —
Preliminary OK Given to 6-Cent Increase in Taxes.

Plans to enlarge the St. Louis county police department and to start a parcel-by-parcel revaluation of real estate were made today following approval of a record-breaking $9,233,216 county budget for 1956.

The County Council passed eight appropriation bills yesterday, and gave preliminary approval to a 6-cent tax increase required to finance expanded operations.

The 1956 budget calls for expenditure of $658,018 more than last year. A bill to increase the tax rate from 66 cents for each $100 of assessed valuation to 72 cents was perfected, and will come up for final passage next Wednesday.

Proceeds of the tax increase will go into the general revenue fund, which must be expended by $520,253 to cover appropriations to finance general operations during the coming year.

The county council appropriated $4,728,235 for the general revenue fund; $1,739,903 for the county hospital; $1,348,000 for the special road and bridge fund; $557,986 for the health center; $428,741 for park maintenance, and $320,351 for debt retirement and interest on bonds.

All the appropriation measures were passed by a vote of 6 to 0 except the general revenue bill. Two Democrats, Councilmen Thomas C. Dunne of the First District and James H. McNary of the Second, opposed this measure, as well as the bill to increase the tax rate.

Passage of the appropriation measures means that approximately 900 workers in the park, highway and hospital departments will get a paycheck this week. The semi-monthly payroll last Monday had to be skipped because of the council's delay in appropriations.

Pay for Others Held Up.
Pay for some 500 other county workers will be delayed until Feb. 2 because their wages come from general revenue, and the appropriation for the general revenue fund was passed without sufficient votes to make it immediately effective as an emergency measure.

The general revenue appropriation provides $594,970 for the full year of operation by the county police department, which began functioning last July. In appropriating $36,000 more than the amount originally recommended by County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews, the council provided funds for adding 17 men to the force of 93 and purchasing seven more automobiles.

Included in the general revenue appropriation is $250,000 for the first year of operation by the county police department in revaluation of all real estate in the county. Last year the council authorized a restudy to cost $355,000. Although two real estate firms, Roy Wenzlick & Co. and Doane Agricultural Service, have been designated to carry out the revaluation, no contract has been executed as yet.

A suit to test the county's authority to hire private firms to do this work is to be filed shortly by the county counsel's office, and it is hoped that a decision can be obtained by next July. Preliminary work for the study will be undertaken now, but the full-scale revaluation will be held up pending the outcome of the suit.

Under the county charter, expenditures in 1956 may not exceed receipts of 1954, plus any surpluses, and 90 per cent of the revenue from any new tax source.

SOVIET UNION REMOVES
PREMIER OF LITHUANIA,
IN OFFICE SINCE 1940

RUSSIA today removed Premier Mechislav Gedvilas, who has ruled Lithuania since it was incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940. No reason was given.

An official announcement said Gedvilas was replaced by Moteyus Shumauskas. Gedvilas, a 54-year-old ex-school teacher, has been a member of the Communist party since 1934. He led the underground partisan movement in the German occupation of Lithuania in World War II. Gedvilas also was a member of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet and an alternate member of the Soviet Communist party central committee.

TWO-INCH SNOW BRINGS BREAK IN
46-DAY DROUGHT

It Is Blown In From Southwest — Three Inches Fall in Outlying Areas.

A two-inch snow, blown in by a storm from the southwest, covered St. Louis last night, slowing traffic and breaking a record drought which had continued for 46 days.

The snow, which fell to a depth of three inches at Webster Groves, Richmond Heights, Belleville and other outlying areas, was expected to end today. Colder weather was forecast tonight, with a low of zero to 5 degrees above expected in the morning.

Homeward-bound motorists found the going slippery last night. The snow, which began falling in fine flakes at 5:10 p.m., had covered the streets by 6 p.m.

Street Crevices Covered Ice.
Worst driving conditions existed between 6 and 7 p.m. as crews of street and highway employees throughout this area worked feverishly to cover icy intersections with a mixture of salt and cinders.

Skidding automobiles lost traction at hilly intersections. Traffic on intersections such as Hampton and Oakland avenues, Hampton and Watson road, and U. S. Route 67 and By-Pass 40, in the county, was stalled as far back as four blocks in the worst part of the storm.

The snow continued falling steadily until 3 a.m., then resumed at 5 a.m. to fall intermittently the rest of the morning. Workbound motorists were driving cautiously today but did not encounter as severe difficulties as were experienced last night.

The Public Service Co. reported its buses and streetcars operated on normal schedules during the night, but were delayed during this morning's snow. The snow, which began falling about 7:30 o'clock, because of automobiles which stalled at intersections.

Skidding vehicles caused serious injuries to two pedestrians today. Francis Singer, 55 years old, 3905 Labadie avenue, suffered a fractured leg and head injury when struck by a Public Service Co. bus in the 3000 block of North Vandeventer avenue. Theodore Jackson Jr., 11, 1917 Bremen avenue, suffered a fractured leg when struck by an automobile in the 3800 block of North Twentieth street.

Firemen were called to an unused ballroom at 1203 South Grand boulevard today when the weight of snow on the roof caused it to collapse. Rubble fell on nine wheelchairs used by a basketball team of paraplegics and amputees.

The snowfall, first substantial one this winter broke a drought lasting nine days longer than the previous record dry spell of 1883, but amounted to only 20 of an inch of precipitation. Although only a small amount of precipitation, it was more than twice that recorded in December.

'Money' Crops Affected.
Paul M. Bernard, county farm agent, said the snowfall by itself will not be of material benefit to farmers. "If it is followed by other snow or rain, he said, it may be the difference between a crop and no crop at all."

The farmers' winter "money" crops, wheat and pasture, already have been seriously affected by the drought. Even with continuing precipitation the county winter wheat yield, which was 459,000 bushels in 1954, will be reduced by one-third.

The Russian Orthodox Church of Our Savior here had a new item about a traditional rite of the "Blessing of the water" — in Russian, "Voda Kreschenia." It came out in the News Palladium as "Vodka." Many parishioners telephoned to correct the error. So the paper's church editor ran a new item to correct the error — and again "Voda" came out "Vodka."

The telephone calls this time flooded the switchboard: "Please explain that we bless water, not whisky."

The paper corrected it the right way and carried the note: "Two proofreaders and three editors proofread this story."

CIVIC, BUSINESS
LEADERSTO MEET WITH MAYOR ON CHARTER DRIVE GO ON; 40 DEAD

But Democrats Predict Speedy Approval of Substitute Measure Before Aldermen Because 'Heat' Is On.

A meeting of St. Louis civic and business leaders was scheduled today with Mayor Raymond R. Tucker to plan an initiative campaign for revision of the city charter, as Democratic aldermen predicted speedy passage of a pending bill calling for the election of charter freeholders May 8.

Rebellious members of the Democratic majority in the Board of Aldermen were reported to be expressing vigorous complaints about being required to "take the heat" for the politicians in the charter controversy, indicating that support is growing for board approval of the new freeholder measure.

Mayor Tucker, whose charter freeholder proposal was killed by the aldermen last Friday by a vote of 20 to 7, was scheduled to confer with a small group of St. Louis leaders in his City Hall office at 4 p.m.

15 Expected to Attend.
About 15 persons were expected to attend the initial meeting to discuss the formation of a larger sponsoring committee for the initiative campaign to force an election of freeholders, if the aldermen fail to act.

It was reported that Tucker is determined to proceed with this method of getting the election of 13 citizen-freeholders to modernize the charter, unless the Board of Aldermen passes the pending measure without damaging or restrictive amendments.

If the Board approves the measure promptly, the Mayor is expected to sign it and drop plans for the circulation of initiative petitions. One of the aldermen who now predict passage of the new freeholder measure is Anton Niemeyer, chairman of the aldermanic legislation committee, who introduced the substitute bill last Friday. The measure will be referred to his committee at the board session tomorrow.

Committee to Confer.
Niemeyer said he will confer with members of his committee to decide whether they want to decide it promptly, so that the measure can be passed at a special board meeting Saturday or early next week. He said Democratic majority members of the board may hold a caucus to decide if a special meeting should be held to pass the measure.

Niemeyer, who voted against the Mayor's bill last Friday, said he intended to vote for the substitute measure. Alderman Alfred I. Harris, Twenty-second Ward Democrat, who also opposed the Mayor's charter proposal, has announced that he will vote for the new measure.

He told a Post-Dispatch reporter he will support the Niemeyer bill because it gives the Board of Aldermen the authority to set the date of an election on the charter revisions recommended by the board of freeholders. Under Tucker's proposal, the freeholders would have had that power.

Niemeyer and Harris expressed the opinion the new bill would be passed as soon as it is sent to the Board of Aldermen.

Report Dyer Has Switched.
It was reported also that City Treasurer John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, had dropped his opposition to the passage of a freeholder bill, and had informed some of the aldermanic leaders of this before the board met last Friday and killed the Mayor's bill.

Dwyer, who had been a leader in the political effort to defeat the charter measure, was said to have changed his position after Attorney General John M. Dalton ruled in an opinion that a board of freeholders could recommend no changes in the city's so-called "county" offices.

These offices include Dwyer's, and control the only patronage available for the politicians. Dwyer was told last Friday morning that he was "too late" in speaking for passage of the Mayor's bill, because the majority of the aldermen were so angry with proponents of the measure.

The Russian Orthodox Church of Our Savior here had a new item about a traditional rite of the "Blessing of the water" — in Russian, "Voda Kreschenia." It came out in the News Palladium as "Vodka." Many parishioners telephoned to correct the error. So the paper's church editor ran a new item to correct the error — and again "Voda" came out "Vodka."

RED INFILTRATION
BOMBAY RIOTS

Officials Believe Communists Are Trying to Set Up 'Parallel Government' Under Cover of Disorders.

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 19 (AP)—Rioters, looters and arsonists surged through Bombay again today, continuing the four-day outburst of violent protest against making the city a separate state.

An official government broadcast said at least nine persons were killed by police firing into mobs today. Additionally, one policeman was stoned to death by rioters and several members of one family were attacked and killed in their car, other sources reported.

The government report increases to at least 40 the number killed in disorders this week in Bombay state.

Officials said they believed the Communists were trying to set up a "parallel government" under cover of the rioting. Left-wing strongarm men were reported infiltrating the demonstrations from the Satara district. A "parallel government" was set up in the district during a 1942 nationalist outburst against British rule.

Responsible citizens made ready to defend this city. S. K. Patil, Bombay leader of the ruling Congress party, announced a "peace brigade" of responsible citizens would be organized to help the police combat the flaring outbreaks.

Worst in Recent Times.
Observers said the continuing outburst was the most serious in recent Indian history.

Operating in gangs, the rioters spread havoc over a wide area in this second largest city in India. One report said a group of citizens fought a pitched battle at noon with a mob near Bombay's central railway station.

The rioters broke out Monday in protest against the government's plan to reorganize the Indian states along language lines. This would make Bombay city a separate state under New Delhi. Leaders of the rioters demand the city be the capital of a separate state of Marathi-speaking people.

A police post was burned before dawn as a curfew failed to halt the violence. Police poured in from outlying districts to relieve local officers who had fought the outbreaks for 72 hours but the violence spread rapidly.

Indian army troops were called out to guard strategic electric and water power installations but they had not intervened so far to help restore order because city officials had not requested it.

Unofficial reports said 25 persons were killed and several hundred wounded yesterday, a government radio broadcast today put the number of dead at 10.

Several persons had been reported killed earlier in Bombay state, three in Bombay and four at Belgaum.

Hundreds Battle Police.
The biggest concerted attack came last night in the Sewri slum area, where hundreds of Marathi-speaking Indians battled police. Crowds of demonstrators opened simultaneous attacks at 10 p.m. and police said they opened fire each time.

Marathi language groups made up about half of Bombay's nearly 3,000,000 population. The other major language is Gujarati. A dozen languages and hundreds of dialects are used throughout India. The government of Prime Minister Nehru seeks to make Hindi the official language for the country eventually.

In New Delhi, a Government spokesman said federal authorities were helpless to move in unless Bombay authorities asked army intervention.

Official sources said Prime Minister Nehru would make no decision concerning intervention until he confers with Morarji Desai, chief minister of Bombay state, who took a train for the capital to talk with him.

Five Legislators Quit.
Five members of the Congress party resigned from the state legislature yesterday in opposition to the Government's language plan. The state cabinet itself was reported split on the question.

Sabotage between Bombay and Poona paralyzed rail communication between the major west coast and central and southern India.

American Evangelist Billy Graham, now in visiting India, spent six hours wandering around Bombay yesterday. He said he saw streetcars stoned, automobiles burned and an elderly shopkeeper beaten with sticks for keeping his store open.

Chilean Volcano Erupts.
SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Lisma, 10,040-foot volcano and winter sports center in the Andes range of southern Chile, erupted last night. Lava spewed from two craters. It was said to have blocked two bridges and isolated 200 persons in the Calbuco section.

PRESIDENT NOT DECIDED ON RUNNING BUT DOESN'T
BAR ENTRY IN PRIMARIES

TERMS DULLES BEST SECRETARY OF STATE HE HAS EVER KNOWN

Refuses to Say if U.S. Was Near War 3 Times or if Decision Was Made to Bomb Manchuria.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—President Eisenhower raised the question of "unfortunate expressions" in Life magazine's interview of Secretary of State Dulles but declined to get into the controversy over whether this country had been at "the brink of war" three times in recent years.

He voiced complete confidence in Dulles, describing him as "the best Secretary of State I have ever known." He said he had not read the article in last week's Life and asserted that he would not discuss in detail a privately written article and thereby making it a "paper," obviously meaning an official document, "which should be most carefully and properly written."

He said he was not going to discuss anywhere "present, past or possible future decisions and materials that come before the National Security Council, because it is not proper to do it and those papers are privileged and must remain so."

A 'Necessary Act.'
The magazine's exclusive interview, obtained by James Shepley, chief of Life's Washington bureau, quoted Dulles as saying that the Administration's policy had prevented war three times in Asia and that in diplomacy "the ability to get to the verge without getting into war is the necessary art."

The interview stated that the President had decided on the tactical use of atomic bombs on Communist bases in Manchuria if hostilities were resumed in Korea.

At his crowded press conference today, the President was asked by the Post-Dispatch whether he had reached a decision to use atomic bombs in the three instances mentioned by Dulles in the Life article.

First observing that he had not read the article, he said he had read about some of the allegations supposed to have been made. He said that he had complete faith in Mr. Dulles, who had given his life in work for peace.

Relations With Allies.
The Life article, which said the United States at different times was prepared to enlarge the areas of hostilities in India, China and Formosa, had raised questions in many foreign offices about this country's intentions and has started a sharp controversy in Congress.

The Post-Dispatch's second question was whether there was an understanding or arrangement to inform our Allies and Congress that we had reached a decision to use atomic bombs in the three instances mentioned by Dulles in the Life article.

U.S. ENVOY SAYS RED CHINA USES DISTORTION AND PERVERTS FACTS

Calls Peiping Statement
Attempt to Gloss Over Failure to Release All Americans on Mainland.

GENEVA, Jan. 19 (AP)—United States Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson charged last night that Red China "distorts and perverts the facts" in accusing the United States of blocking a Chinese-American agreement to settle their disputes by peaceful means.

Johnson was commenting on a 2500-word statement from Peiping envoy Wang Ping-nan, who has been negotiating with the American Ambassador here for the last six months.

Some officials in Washington believed the Chinese statement was the first step toward breaking off the talks, but the Ambassadors held their thirty-third negotiation meeting today and scheduled another for Jan. 25. They reported no progress in their negotiations for resumption of force in the Formosa area.

Chinese Charge.

The two envoys engaged in a bitter exchange yesterday when Wang broke the secrecy of their talks after 24 weeks. He issued a statement asserting agreement by the United States and the Chinese Communists to use peaceful means of settling disputes was blocked by United States insistence on putting Formosa in the American area of self defense.

Johnson retorted that Wang's statement distorted the facts of their negotiations.

Wang had restated Peiping's claim that "the liberation by the Chinese people of their own territory of Taiwan (Formosa) is China's sovereign right and internal affair."

The Communist envoy declared our side absolutely cannot accept that the United States has "inherent right of individual and collective self-defense" in Formosa.

The statement, which broke an official blackout on news from the talks, called for speedy conclusion of a joint pledge to use peaceful means in settling disputes. It also called from agreement to hold further talks to arrange (1) the lifting of the United States embargo on American trade with Red China and (2) a conference between Secretary of State Dulles and Premier-Foreign Minister Chou En-lai.

United States officials generally have been cool to news from the talks, holding it would amount to recognition of the Red Chinese government.

Johnson said Wang's statement "to some extent reflects the progress that it has thus far been possible to make in seeking a commitment by the Chinese Communists to renounce the use of force to achieve objectives."

Distortion Charged.

"However, by partial quotation and misinterpretation, the statement distorts and perverts the facts with regard to our discussions concerning the exact wording of such a commitment."

Johnson also blasted the Red statement as an "attempt to gloss over the stark failure of the Chinese Communists to fully carry out their commitment of Dec. 10 expeditiously to release all Americans on the mainland of China desiring to return."

Wang had charged the United States with trying to prolong the talks and delay progress by insisting on the liberation of 13 American civilians still held in Communist Chinese jails.

Johnson expressed disappointment that the Communists "have again chosen to resort to propaganda regarding the talks between Ambassador Wang and myself."

"At the beginning of our talks," he said, "we agreed that progress would best be achieved by promptly announcing our agreements and refraining from publicly airing our disagreements."

ROBBERS WITH $7500 SEIZED BEFORE THEY LEAVE BANK

SWANSEA, S.C., Jan. 19 (UP)—Two young men attempted to rob the bank of Swansea today, but were captured before they could leave the building.

Lexington county Sheriff H. M. (Bill) Caughman said the pair were captured when officers surrounded the bank after two customers had given the alarm. When captured, the men had $6500 in a bag and $1000 in their hands, Caughman said.

Caughman identified the pair as J. R. Freeman, 23 years old, and J. W. Jackson, 26, both of Columbia.

Poujade Is Ousted From Bar Of French Assembly Members

Versions Vary as to Whether He Was Shoved Out by Socialists or Walked Out by Request.

PARIS, Jan. 19 (UP)—Anti-tax leader Pierre Poujade was ousted from the members' bar of the National Assembly tonight. But whether he was shoved out by angry Socialists or walked out by request depended on who was talking.

One report said he was pushed out bodily by the Socialists because he is not a member of the assembly and did not belong in the bar.

Another version was Poujade was not shoved. This one said he was challenged as to his right to be in the barroom. He is reported to have replied he did not know the rules, finished his drink and walked out, leaving his supporters and irate Socialists arguing furiously.

Earlier, a move developed to invalidate the election of some of his deputies as the newly elected Assembly met for 23 minutes in an atmosphere of bitter antagonism that threatened to confront France with a continuing series of Cabinet crises in the months to come.

In their seats as Assembly members, Poujade was largely a procedural member.

After the session, Poujade blandly walked into the Palais Bourbon—meeting place of the Assembly—and then past astonished guards into the bar reserved for members.

Poujade, a chunky smalltown stationery salesman who emerged as a national power with his anti-tax movement in the

Jan. 2 elections, is not himself an Assembly member.

The 594 assemblymen, with 32 to be elected later, met for the first time under the temporary presidency of their aged "dean," 86-year-old Communist Marcel Cachin, to begin organizing for France's next government.

Cachin, in accordance with long tradition, presided by right of age. In the traditional speech by the oldest deputy, he ripped into United States Secretary of State Dulles for three times going to the "brink of war."

Then, in a quavering voice, he called for a "popular front" government to include the Communists. But there was little likelihood of that.

The Assembly is divided into four hostile blocs, each too small to rule without co-operation from bitter rivals. The leading candidates for premier already have rejected inclusion of the Reds in any prospective Cabinet.

Today's first session was largely ceremonial and procedural. Following Cachin's first speech, the deputies began organizing into committees to validate their own elections before choosing a new speaker next Tuesday. The two leading candidates for that post are Socialist Andre le Troquer and Catholic Popular Republican Pierre Schneider.

Faure met with his caretaker cabinet for possibly the last time today to discuss urgent problems facing France—the worsening situation in Algeria, the international situation and a series of domestic problems.

PURCHASE PROPOSAL BY OLIN MATHIESON

Stock of McGraw-Hill Construction Concern.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 19—Olin Mathieson Chemical Co. proposes to purchase 40 percent of the common stock of F. H. McGraw & Co., a heavy construction firm with headquarters here, McGraw stockholders were notified today.

In two phases of the transaction Olin-Mathieson would pay $298,000 for 200,000 shares of McGraw stock, and give McGraw 16,400 shares of Olin-Mathieson common stock with a quoted value of $869,200, bringing the total to $1,167,000.

McGraw stockholders are to vote on the proposal at a special meeting Feb. 7. The plan was outlined to them in a letter today by Clifford S. Strike, president.

The transaction is contingent on the award by Olin-Mathieson to McGraw of a contract for construction of an aluminum manufacturing plant near Wheeling, W. Va., which is to cost about $900,000.

The stock that Olin-Mathieson proposes to hand over to McGraw is being traded on the New York Stock Exchange for slightly more than $3 a share.

CONDEMNATION OF ISRAEL VOTED BY U.N. COUNCIL

Unanimous Action Taken for Attack on Syrians — Western Version Approved.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Jan. 19 (AP)—The Security Council today unanimously condemned Israel for its Dec. 11 attack on Syria in which 56 Syrians and six Israelis were killed.

The action was on a Western resolution, sponsored by the United States, Britain and France, which was milder than a counter-proposal backed by Russia, but was nevertheless a clear-cut censure.

In the month-long debate which preceded the vote, all delegations in the 11-nation Council had declared themselves in favor of condemning Israel.

Precisely, the approved resolution condemned Israel for "a flagrant violation" of the Council's 1948 cease-fire resolution, of the Syrian-Israeli armistice and of Israel's obligations under the U. N. charter.

It also warned Israel that if it failed to comply with its obligations in the future "the Council will have to consider what further measures under the Charter are required to maintain or restore the peace."

In Doubt Until Vote.

It appeared even at the last minute that the Council would fail to reach a unanimous decision.

Soviet delegate Arkady A. Sobolev had insisted that the Council must leave out any reference to alleged Syrian interference with Israeli vessels on the Sea of Galilee prior to the Dec. 11 raid.

The Soviet delegate also had demanded that Israel be ordered to pay compensation for the loss of life and property. There was no reference to compensation in the approved resolution.

The debate was extremely sharp at times, with Israel charging Russia with undermining the Council's objectivity by taking an allegedly pro-Arab attitude.

The Western powers already had rejected a Yugoslav resolution aimed at compromising the differences between the Western-sponsored resolution and a much stiffer one submitted by Russia.

Plea for Objectivity.

President Says He Is Bearing Burdens of Office Quite Well

Notes He Has Followed as Closely as Possible the Routine Prescribed by His Doctors.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—President Eisenhower said today he thought he was standing up under the burdens of the presidency quite well, by closely adhering to the routine prescribed by his doctors.

Mr. Eisenhower commented on his health at a crowded press conference, his first meeting with reporters in Washington since before his Sept. 24 heart attack and the first press conference he has held since returning to the capital a week and a half ago.

He was asked if he thought, looking back on a week and a half in which he followed a full work schedule, that his health was up to the burden of his office.

Mr. Eisenhower replied that it would be premature for him to say that in specific terms. He said he had put in some intensive work days since returning, citing yesterday as an example.

But he added that he thought by following as closely as possible the routine outlined by his physicians he had gotten by very well.

Seems Fit and Sturdy.

The President appeared fit and sturdy as he answered questions during the 26-minute press conference. His complexion was ruddy and he spoke for the most part in a firm, occasionally resonant voice.

Correspondents who saw him frequently on his winter vacation in Key West, Fla., including this reporter, thought he appeared in good health.

Mr. Eisenhower returned from Key West Jan. 8 to resume the full duties of his office for an important trial period of four or five weeks. His doctors have said it will take that long before they can advise him on his physical reaction to a normal work load.

His response to the question on his health indicated he is following closely the routine prescribed by his chief physician, Dr. Paul Dudley White of Boston, who has advised, among other things, a daily rest period of about two hours after lunch.

Mr. Eisenhower told reporters no definite date had been set for his next medical examination by Dr. White. The middle of February has been mentioned as the probable time.

On the subject of health, Mr. France asserted that the Security Council "should draw objective conclusions, and we should not use them as a springboard for facile propaganda." The Council, he added, should not "be used to promote Eisenhower was asked whether he thought it "proper" for a White House official to conceal the serious illness of the President for hours and refrain from calling in other physicians immediately for consultation.

The question obviously referred to the fact that the President's heart attack occurred at 2 a.m. in Denver and was not announced until nearly 12 hours later.

The President said he was assuming this was a hypothetical question because Gen. Howard McC. Snyder was in close consultation with other physicians soon after the heart attack.

However, Mr. Eisenhower said it may have taken some time to determine whether the illness was a stomach upset due to bad food or a heart attack. At least, he said smiling, he was sure Dr. Snyder talked to other doctors as soon as it was daylight.

Mr. Eisenhower was asked what he thought should be done about the "failure" of the Constitution to spell out procedures in the event the Chief Executive is disabled but still living.

When one is closely confined to bed for a long time, as he had been, you think about a lot of things, and that was one of them, Mr. Eisenhower replied.

He said he believed there should be agreement on what the Constitution says about this matter, and Congress and the Attorney General should study the question closely.

250 Reporters Present.

Today's press conference attracted the second largest number of reporters ever attending an Eisenhower press meeting. There were 250 present, four fewer than at his first press conference as President, on Feb. 17, 1953.

Mr. Eisenhower, wearing a brown tweed suit and vest and a red tie, arrived two minutes after the scheduled 10:30 a.m. start, and the press conference ended two minutes before 11 o'clock.

His last press conference in Washington was held on Aug. 4, ten days before he left for a vacation in Denver. At that time, before his heart attack, he cited his health as one of the factors in his decision whether to seek a second term.

Before leaving Key West he held a short informal session with reporters.

particular interests in this area... so crucial to world peace."

Western observers had felt that Russia was using its resolution in an effort to win Arab favor in the Soviet cold war offensive in the Middle East.

FIRST ATOMIC CRUISER VOTED BY HOUSE GROUP

for Ships — Secretary
Thomas Perils to Formosa Point.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UP)—The House Armed Services Committee today approved, 21 to 0, the Navy's $1,400,000,000 shipbuilding program, including the world's first atom-powered surface ship.

It acted after Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas testified that peace in the Formosa area is possible only because of the strength of the United States Eleventh Fleet.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem., Georgia), said the committee vote was "historic" because the new program represents a transition from conventional to atom-powered warships.

"The days are not far distant," he said, "when the entire American Navy will be propelled by nuclear power plants."

The program includes an 11,000-ton atom-powered cruiser, estimated to cost $38,000,000. It also includes construction of six more atom-powered submarines and a start on an atom-powered super-carrier.

Thomas said there has been "no aggression" in the Formosa area in the last year "and I am hopeful that this may continue."

"However," he said, "there has been a constant buildup by the Communist Chinese both in airfields, airpower and naval forces. We must therefore continue to be ready, vigilant and strong."

Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said on his return from a world tour today that he saw no signs of an "immediate attack" on the Nationalist-held islands off the Red China coast.

Representative James E. Van Zandt, meanwhile, charged that the United States coast is "wide open" for a sneak attack by Russian submarines with guided missiles carrying atomic or hydrogen warheads.

CEYLON-RED CHINA PACT

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Jan. 19 (AP)—Ceylon agreed yesterday to take 35,000 tons of flour from Communist China to whittle down the Red Chinese trade debt with this British Commonwealth nation.

This is the highest trade deal between the two countries since the 1951 agreement under which Peiping is buying Ceylonese rubber in exchange for Chinese rice.

APRIL START DUE ON $10,725,080 IN COUNTY BOND ISSUE PROJECTS

Items Recommended by Matthews — Council Meeting Wednesday — Highways Are Biggest Proposals.

Start of construction on St. Louis county bond issue projects totaling $10,725,080 has been set tentatively for April, County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews said today.

These projects, selected from the 1955 bond issue of $39,712,000, were recommended yesterday by Matthews to the county council, which scheduled a discussion of them for its next meeting on Wednesday.

Expressing doubt that the necessary preliminary steps for construction of this year's projects could be completed earlier than April 1, Matthews said the council must approve the proposals, together with any changes it may suggest, and forward them to the Citizens Bond Issue Public Works Advisory (Watchdog) Committee for approval.

Approval Procedure. This body, he said, could return the list with its recommendations to the council within a week or two. The next step would be final approval by the council and passage of a resolution authorizing commitments for the sale of the bonds. Matthews expressed the hope the bonds could be sold in sufficient time to permit the county to advertise for construction bids by April 1, with actual work starting later that month.

A "strong possibility" that no tax levy would be necessary this year to meet initial interest and principal payments on the bonds also was suggested by Matthews. He said it was customary for bond houses in bidding on public improvement bond issues to offer a premium payment as part of the bid. The premium received on $1,750,000 in 1954 bond sales amounted to $80,000, he pointed out. If a proportionately larger premium is offered on the $10,725,080 in 1955 bonds it probably would meet the first payments, he said.

Largest items among the recommendations submitted by Matthews yesterday was $5,000,000 for the county's one-half share of the cost of rights-of-way for the Mark Twain, Daniel Boone and Ozark expressways. The State Highway Commission, which is already engaged in making such acquisitions, has indicated it will need reimbursement of the county's share by June 30.

Finance Proposal. Also proposed was a $3,790,080 item for financing 58 road and bridge projects and a traffic survey in each of the three urban and one rural areas into which the county has been divided for the purpose of apportioning projects. These districts were set up so that each part of the county would be represented in projects to be started this year.

Legality of the recommendation for the $100,000 traffic survey will have to be studied by the county's bond attorney, Matthews said.

The proposal would carry out a recommendation by County Planning Director M. Eugene Baughman as a necessary step in setting up a system of traffic control and relief. While the item was not included specifically in the bond issue proposals approved by the voters last Nov. 22, Matthews said he believed a traffic control study was actually a part of the county's highway program. It probably would be made by outside consultants, he added.

Other proposals include $675,000 for the county's one-half share of the cost of rights-of-way for the Mark Twain, Daniel Boone and Ozark expressways.

UTILITY'S TRUCK BELIEVED USED IN HOLDUP IS FOUND

Laclede Gas Co. Vehicle Apparently Stolen by 3 Who Robbed Home of $3500.

A Laclede Gas Co. truck, which apparently was used by three robbers in a $3500 Richmond Heights residence holdup yesterday, was found by Richmond Heights police today parked at Big Bend road and Wise avenue.

Employees of the gas company said the truck probably was stolen by the robbers from a parking lot at 3950 Forest Park avenue, where it had been left for repairs. The truck was not missed until today, however.

Neighbors saw the truck parked outside the home of Mrs. Sam Apostos, 7914 Park drive, during the period when robbers were leisurely ransacking the house after tying Mrs. Apostos with picture wire. Her 6-year-old daughter was sent upstairs.

Mrs. Apostos, whose husband is a professional bondsman and also operates Dublin Village tavern at 15 North Sixth street, said one of the men knocked at the kitchen door about 1 p.m., identified himself as a gas company employee and said he wanted to check the meter.

Went to Basement. She accompanied him to the basement, first putting two large dogs in a back yard pen at his request. After he inspected the meter they returned upstairs.

At the top of the steps was a second man, who apparently had entered through the back door.

"Who's that?" Mrs. Apostos asked. "I'm with you," the first man said. He then drew a blue steel pistol and said: "Be quiet. We're not going to hurt you but if you make any noise I'll shoot you."

Mrs. Apostos said she grappled with both men, but was quickly overpowered. The third robber then appeared and wrapped an ironing board cover over her head, tied her hands and feet with the wire and pushed her to the floor.

One of the robbers told her daughter, Cecile, to "go upstairs and get in bed and your mommy won't get hurt." The child complied.

While the first robber guarded Mrs. Apostos the other two ransacked the house, pulling out drawers and smashing two closed doors with a hatchet they found in the house.

From Apostos' bedroom, the men took $2000 and from Mrs. Apostos' room jewelry including a two-karat and a one-karat diamond ring and two platinum bracelets.

Once during the 45 minutes the robbers were in the place Mrs. Apostos tried to look at the clock. Her guard warned her to lie still or he would kill her.

She told him her husband was due home from the dentist and the robber replied: "If he comes home we'll take care of him too."

Tied by Child.

Before leaving one of the robbers pulled the cord from a telephone in the kitchen. They went out the back door and after a short time Mrs. Apostos called to Cecile who removed the wire from her feet and the cloth from her head. However, the child could not unwind the wire around her wrists. Mrs. Apostos called to a neighbor from the back door. The neighbor called police and assisted Mrs. Apostos.

Meanwhile, the robbers went to the truck in the driveway. They had some difficulty starting it and a neighbor reported one of the men returned to the house and apparently tried unsuccessfully to regain entrance.

MEAT CUTTERS, KROGER STORES SETTLE DISPUTE

200 Union Men Ordered Back to Work—Issue Concerned Duties of Women Wrappers.

Union meat cutters employed in 40 Kroger stores in St. Louis and St. Louis county were ordered to return to work shortly after noon today, following settlement of a dispute involving the duties of women meat wrappers, who are members of the same union.

The dispute involved complaints by meat cutters that meat wrappers were using electric power machines and serving customers in Kroger markets. The prescribed duties of the women are packaging, weighing and pricing meat displayed for sale, the union said.

The 200 Kroger meat cutters conducted several meetings at St. Louis House, 2345 Lafayette avenue, this morning. Returning from a "coffee break" at noon, the men were informed by Nick Blassie, president of Meat Cutters Local 88, that the Kroger company had agreed to comply with the same working conditions that are in effect in other companies' markets.

The Kroger stores had remained open, despite the absence of meat cutters.

Meat cutters at 30 National Food Center stores had registered a similar protest, but reported to their jobs this morning after the dispute was settled with Food Center.

The $49-a-week wage rate of the women meat wrappers is $39 less than the new rates for journeymen meat cutters.

The 2200 members of Local 88, meeting at 5:15 a.m. today ratified a new wage agreement granting journeymen an increase of $5.70 a week, and chief cutters $6. The new wage rates, in effect in all union retail meat stores and departments in the St. Louis-St. Louis county area, are $88 a week for journeymen, and $102 for chief meat cutters.

The previous wage agreement for union meat cutters expired last Nov. 1. Negotiations with management were conducted until a wage agreement was reached last night.

Paige Marries. LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 19 (A.P.)—Lager actress Janis Paige, 33 years old, was married to Arthur Stander, 39, the producer of her television show, "It's Always Jan," yesterday. District Judge Frank McNamee performed the double ring ceremony.

Needs at Fulton. Another striking example of the need for rehabilitation was the request for $2,481,300 of bond issue funds for the Missouri School for the Deaf at Fulton, where more than 180 deaf children are cared for.

Lloyd A. Harrison, superintendent, in his request to Jefferson City, said the money would be used for improvements in the physical plant to make safe fireproof structures for the children.

The main group of buildings at the school, built at various times from 1854 to 1907, "is completely obsolete and beyond repair," Harrison told Assistant Budget Director William B. McGregor, who is preparing a list of recommendations on allocation of the bond funds for Gov. Phil M. Donnelly.

Harrison proposes to raze these old buildings and replace them with new ones, if his request for funds is approved by the State Legislature, which reserved to itself allocation of the money.

The older buildings have been inspected by private and public agencies many times and have been declared "dangerously inadequate," Harrison said. "Rafters and timbers supporting the roofs are rotting dangerously and sashes and frames of the large old-fashioned windows are barely holding together."

Boonville Request. A total of $588,500 has been requested for improvement of the Training School for Boys at Boonville, including $130,400 for construction of a chapel building, containing both Protestant and Catholic chapels. This building is sought, W. E. Sears, director, said, to adequately house and emphasize an essential spiritual emphasis as a major part of the rehabilitation program.

He also asked for $225,000 for a new dormitory cottage. The Training School for Girls at Chillicothe requested $733,700, including $354,000 for a new dormitory and $221,000 for an addition to the school building.

The Ellis Fischel State Cancer Hospital at Columbia asked for only $88,000, which would be used to expand clinical facilities and correct fire hazards pointed out by the Missouri Inspection Bureau last spring. One of these safety measures would be construction of a smoke barrier from the basement through the sixth floor.

Needs at Mt. Vernon. A total of $2,000,000 was requested by the State Sanatorium at Mount Vernon. Of this amount, $645,000 is proposed for construction of a four-story addition to the hospital to provide more laboratory facilities, a chapel, medical library, classrooms, a pediatrics division and a new out-patient department.

M. H. McDaniel, superintendent of the Federal Soldiers' Home at St. James, which is operated by the Division of Welfare, asked for an appropriation of $333,500. Plans proposed for improvement there include construction of a new dormitory for married pairs to replace the present one built in 1907, which, McDaniel said, is a fire hazard.

Funds also would be used to construct a new residence for the superintendent. The house he occupies was built in 1903 and enlarged some years later. The St. Louis chapter of the National Association of Social Workers yesterday endorsed the $75,000,000 state bond issue.

Crowded School for the Blind Here Seeks Part of Bond Funds

Overload Put at 40 Pupils—State Institution Is One of 7 Small Ones Needing Aid.

By EDWARD H. THORNTON A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 19—Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia avenue, with 168 blind children living in overcrowded quarters, is one of seven small state institutions seeking a total of $7,225,000 from the proposed $75,000,000 state bond issue to be submitted to voters next Tuesday.

Robert H. Thompson, superintendent of the St. Louis school, said he has to place beds for the children "wherever we can find space. Our overload is 40 pupils," he reported. "We have 30 to 35 children in sleeping areas, which by all modern standards should not be occupied by more than 15."

Thompson has requested $1,000,000 in bond funds if the proposal receives the approval of the voters. With the money he proposes to build either a third story on the 52-year-old first and second floors, or erect a two-story addition across the front of the present institution.

With either of the two additions, he said, "we could take care of the needs of the blind for 10 or even 15 years." Construction of the addition, he added, would cost an estimated $960,000, leaving $40,000 for equipment needs.

School Built in 1904. The present school building was erected in 1904. The dormitory and hospital set-ups are obsolete, Thompson said, and staff housing facilities are inadequate.

"We have no facilities for married employees and none for house parents," he said. "It is well known that a happy mother has happy children under her care."

Restrictions in the bond issue make it impossible for the school to purchase additional land for another building, Thompson explained. On the five-acre tract, south of the present building, is the athletic field, on which blind children are taught to run and play. He said he did not want to sacrifice that important facility for a new building. Instead, he suggested the addition to the old building.

PRESS MOSTLY CRITICAL OF DULLES 'BRINK OF WAR' ARTICLE

'Boastful Exercise in Slanted History and Massive Hindsight,' Washington Post Says of Story

Baltimore Sun Defends Life Magazine Interview, However—Asserts Secretary's 'Tactics Have Contributed to the Maintenance of Peace.'

Following is representative editorial comment on the controversy stirred up by Life magazine's "brink of war" interview with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles:

Washington Post—Bragging seldom makes or holds friends. The paragraph to John Foster Dulles in the current issue of Life, written by James Shepley on the basis of consultation with the Secretary of State, is not distinguished for its understatement.

The effect is about as subtle as a bomb on London. The article portrays Mr. Dulles as a reckless gambler, a sort of military-madness Hairbreadth Harry who specializes in narrow escapes. "The ability to get to the verge without getting into war," it quotes him as saying, "is the necessary art."

This is a little like saying that the closer you get to war the better you serve peace, or that Russian roulette is a good game by which to steel your nerves and impress your adversaries. It assumes that Mr. Dulles, by some undisclosed omniscience, was able to control all the forces that governed whether the world would have been plunged into nuclear war.

Other nations will find the article highly offensive, and Communist propaganda will find it a windfall. Surely, if this is the theory on which American policy has been conducted, it would have been better left unsaid.

No one with a knowledge of diplomacy will contend that it is not necessary sometimes to take large risks. This newspaper also believes firmly with Mr. Dulles that it is desirable to let a potential enemy know precisely where we stand. But there is a difference between understanding risks as a necessity and regarding risk-taking as a virtue in itself.

There also is a difference between risks and threats that can be interpreted as bluffs. Moreover, if Mr. Dulles originated the doctrine of deterrence, as the article indicates, the Strategic Air Force must have been twiddling its thumbs between 1946 and 1953.

What our allies will find especially annoying is the implication in the article's praise of massive retaliation and other Dulles policies that this country, through some superior wisdom, has a right to incur risks for them without consultation. Their apprehensions will not be lessened by the article's concluding reference to Mr. Dulles's recent call for a revival of the American crusading spirit and missionary zeal of the last century.

What purpose is served by this boastful exercise in slanted history and massive hindsight? If it was intended as a political document to encourage the Republicans and impress the Democrats, it is likely to have the opposite effect.

Electroning of this sort will not advance the cause of bipartisan foreign policy. If it was intended to deter the Russians, the dismay it will create among our allies and in neutral nations will give the Soviet Union an undreamed-of opportunity.

Like the Duke of Wellington's soldiers, the article may not frighten the enemy, but it will certainly terrify our friends.

Secretary Dulles succeeded only partially in his effort to extricate his foot from his mouth. In his effort to explain the nauseating article in Life, he emphasized that it was not his own deliberate policy but the actions of the Communists that had led this country three times to the brink of war. With an after-the-fact modesty he disavowed some of the tone and "over-simplifications" of the article. He quite properly recognized that the efforts to prevent miscalculation on the part of potential aggressors are not partisan policy but national policy of long standing.

So far so good. What remains is the bitter harvest and the gift it has bestowed on Soviet propaganda through its appalling insensitivity and braggadocio, its distortions of history, its assumptions of omniscience. No one yet has explained why such an article was authorized, and Mr. Dulles's acknowledgment that the interview with the author had been recorded caps his own responsibility for the essence of what was said if not for the form.

Mr. Dulles's surprise at the reaction to the article tells a good deal about the sort of blunders he has imposed on himself. What seems to have been thoroughly messy handling of the affair by the State Department also reflects ultimately on the Secretary. In all Mr. Dulles's three years in the department, during which his good ideas and efforts at flexibility have been cluttered with a number of indiscretions, legalistic quibbles and instances of political trucking, it is impossible to recall any embarrassment more needless or more clumsily entered.

In the circumstances, nevertheless, it is possible to feel sorry for Mr. Dulles. He has been his own worst enemy; and no American can take pride in seeing his country or its chief spokesman in foreign affairs humiliated even through the official's own fault. The best which are, to say the least, an extreme example of how not to conduct diplomacy.

In supplying material for such an article Mr. Dulles apparently intended, by citing the specific cases of Korea, Indochina and Formosa, to emphasize the established American policy of "peace through strength" which excludes appeasement and seeks to prevent war by creating an approximate balance of power with effective retaliation means to deter Communist aggression.

But by the specific manner in which this has been done he has not only brought upon himself both domestic and foreign charges of "distortion" of history; he has also provided new grist to the mills of both the Communists and the European appeasement elements, and thereby unwittingly impaired the very policy he seeks to support.

For the American Secretary of State to be cast in the role of an "artist" juggling with the threats of war is quite contrary to the general policy enunciated by President Eisenhower—namely, that while we must maintain a strong defense posture we must "wage peace," not war, because in the atomic age there is "no alternative to peace." It is also contrary to the President's specific declaration in reference to Indochina what while each situation involves its own degree of risk, each such situation must be met on its merits. It would seem, therefore, that the presentation of the events and policies ascribed to Mr. Dulles require further and more official clarification.

Philadelphia Bulletin—Secretary Dulles had a bad time of it at his press conference on Tuesday. He deserved it. Whether it was bad advice or his own ineptness in public relations that led him to overstate in preparing the article which appeared this week in Life his part in it was doing a great disservice to himself, to his party, and to this country.

"I am not going to discuss the contents of the article," he said, "because that would make it into a sort of state paper. When I have State Prohibitions to make, I make my own speeches."

This is an excellent rule. The pit is that he did not adopt it earlier, for his assistance has already made the article into "a sort of state paper" subject to misinterpretation not only by his political enemies but by some of our allies.

We may be sure that Russian propaganda will be picturing the United States as ready to come as belligerent nation driving recklessly to "the brink of war"—as a matter of policy—and quoting the Secretary of State to prove it.

This has not been American policy, of course. It has not even been Mr. Dulles's policy. If the United States has stood three times on the brink of war, it has been only because Communist aggression came to the matter. Moreover, it could be a dangerous thing if the Secretary should be persuaded that the bombing count more than ideas in winning friends and influencing the course of the cold war in Asia and the Middle East.

President Eisenhower has labored long to build up in the world the true concept of the United States as a peace-loving nation. It is a diplomatic achievement of tremendous value—and has particular relation to the American foreign aid program. Talk of American threats of war is the most unfortunate kind of accompaniment to new appeals for more emphasis on economic action in the cold war. We trust that it will fade as a more effective foreign-aid program develops.

Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer—Some teen-agers have a game called "chicken," and based upon the idea that the last boy to dodge a danger is the winner. Those who jump first, of course, are "chicken." In young people this is related to juvenile delinquency. Secretary Dulles is apparently the first who has associated it with diplomacy.

His critics are properly concerned with a statement recently made by him in a magazine article in which he declared that:

"The ability to get to the verge without getting into the war is the necessary art." These "brink of war" statements come just at the time when Republicans have rejected indignantly statements by Adlai Stevenson and former Secretary of State Dean Acheson that this country has been conducting its foreign policy along the lines of "Russian roulette." That apparently was a "chicken" game supposedly played by Russian soldiers with a pistol in which there were bullets in some chambers and not in others. Non-chicken players took the chance that when they pointed the gun at themselves and pulled the trigger, the hammer would fall on an empty chamber. There seems to be little difference in the self-destructive idiocy involved in either game or between "brink of war" and "Russian roulette" diplomacy.

"Scaring easy" may not be the mark of a hero among juvenile soldiers or diplomats. But playing with the "brink of war," the edge of a cliff or the possible empty barrel of a pistol certainly is not a requisite of wisdom.

The art of diplomacy is not play on the brink of war but uninterrupted determination to preserve the peace.

New York Times—Secretary Dulles has to his credit so many notable achievements from the Japanese peace treaty to the completion of a world-encircling defense system of free nations, that it is regrettable to find him the center of an international storm aroused by some unwise remarks of his

Secretary Arriving for Press Conference

SECRETARY OF STATE DULLES walking down aisle of State Department auditorium Tuesday for press conference at which he was questioned on controversial article in Life magazine.

Dulles has had conversation in a busy three years. It also prints a map showing that he is the undisputed, unretired champion globe-trotter of our day, with more circumnavigations of the globe than all the travelers of the age of exploration.

This gives Dulles a peculiar niche of his own in the annals of diplomacy. He will always be remembered as the Secretary of State whose office was a Gladstone.

As if these claims were not enough, Dulles is permitted to advance a few in his own behalf. One is that his policy of "massive retaliation" was so effective as a deterrent to the hostile Communist world that it not assisted the progress of the three wars in as many years. Dulles cites Korea, Indochina, and Formosa as the examples.

It is a rare statesman who can salvage something out of three defeats and represent them as triumphs, but Dulles manages to do so. Korea, in the most charitable estimate, was no better than a draw, and the Communists certainly claimed victory. In Indochina, the northern half of Viet Nam was lost to the Communists, but Dulles says that it could have been won. As for Formosa, America would not now be forced to count upon a mere handful of Chinese friends, holed up on the island after being driven from the mainland.

If American foreign policy had not assisted the progress of the Communist conquest on the Continent of Asia.

But Mr. Dulles is not content to rest on these modest claims. Life quotes him as follows: "Some say that we were brought to the verge of war. Of course we were brought to the verge of war. The ability to get to the verge without getting into the war is the necessary art. If you cannot master it, you inevitably get into war. If you try to run away from it, if you are scared to go to the brink, you are lost."

Consider this doctrine, surely one of the most extraordinary ever enunciated by an American statesman. It assumes that the United States has stood to flirt constantly with war. Does any sensible American consider it a "necessary art" to go about incessantly seeing how close the country can get to the verge of war without falling into the chasm of war? Why is it necessary to do something so foolhardy? Sometimes somebody is going to miss his step, and we shall be in the soup again—for the fourth time since 1917.

Of course, this is standard Internationalist doctrine and Dulles is nothing if not an Internationalist. But for a hundred years wise and prudent American Secretaries of State followed an opposite course. They did not court war. When there was war somewhere else, it was their concern and responsibility to keep America out of it. Now according to the Hull-Acheson-Dulles dispensation, it is the country's mission to dance a jig on a tight wire over every war, and if we have a near-miss, as in Korea, and wind up in the middle of it, that is the inescapable consequence of practicing "the necessary art" of tempting fate.

If this is the Dulles doctrine, it can be stated more simply. It consists of Dulles leading by the borrowed chin of every fellow citizen. You may be sure that if the result should prove unfortunate, as it has more than once in the recent past, the Secretary of State will not be shouldering a musket to confront the consequences. No, from the depths of some bomb-proof shelter, he will be pondering the question of wherein and wherefore the "necessary art" went askew.

Detroit Free Press—The current year had hardly begun before Secretary of State Dulles cinched the 1956 foot-in-mouth award for his remarks, published in Life magazine, to the effect that peace had been preserved by leading this nation three times to the brink of war.

What he said, and admits he said, has touched off a storm of controversy, both in this country and abroad. Secretary Dulles's thesis is, of course, being distorted out of all shape by political opponents of the Eisenhower Administration. They have interpreted what Secretary Dulles said to fit their own ideas of what they would have liked him to say.

Secretary Dulles could have expressed himself in more diplomatic language, but the fact remains that what he said is essentially true. We have gone to the brink of war because it was our policy to try to achieve peace through strength; to end the "soft" attitude toward Communist imperialism which proved so futile as the policy of a previous administration.

And, to the credit of President Eisenhower and his Secretary of State, the former attitude has worked. We have had no wars, regardless of how close, on occasion, we may have appeared to be.

We can't argue that Mr. Dulles's language may have been inept; it might have been much better had he not talked about the matter at all.

After nearly three years as Secretary of State he ought to have learned how political capital is made of an unfortunate slip of the tongue.

He ought to know that it is particularly true in an election year.

Providence (R.I.) Journal and Evening Bulletin—The strongest single political claim the Eisenhower Administration can lay before the American people in this election year is that it has kept the country out of war. That fact is so simple, so self-evident and so vastly important that it would seem to require little embellishment or adornment.

Yet the Life interview, with Mr. Dulles's active co-operation, exaggerated the Administration's role in the recurrent international crises of the last three years; over-simplified the circumstances of those crises; and sought to portray their results, which were at best precarious compromises, as rousing diplomatic victories for the United States. What was far worse, the article did these things in the kind of truculent tone and blustering language that were bound to have—and indeed have had—these unhappy consequences:

1. To feed the fires of destructive partisan debate over foreign policy at home.
2. To irritate our Allies and alienate neutrals abroad.
3. To hand Communist propagandists fresh ammunition for their ceaseless campaign to misrepresent the United States as a reckless and trigger-happy nation.

Central thesis of the Life article was that Mr. Dulles, having "isolated one of the major underlying causes of war: miscalculation," had successfully applied this discovery in three distinct crises—Korea, Indochina and the Formosa Strait. On each occasion, according to direct quotations supported in substance by the Secretary himself, "we were brought to the verge of war."

Now it is perfectly true that a willingness to go to war in defense of our most vital national interests must be an essential part of American foreign policy. It is also true that that willingness, communicated to the Communists, played a large part in restraining them from all-out aggression in Korea, Indochina and Formosa.

But that is not, as Mr. Dulles and Life would make it appear, the whole story. If the Communists were deterred by our strength and our readiness to use it, so were we by theirs. That is why we settled reluctantly for stalemates in Korea, agreed gradually to the partition of Indochina and let it be known tacitly that we would not support an attack from Formosa on the Chinese mainland.

The simple truth is that it was not only American might and American courage that prevailed gradually on those three occasions. It was recognition on both sides that, as President Eisenhower himself has said, "there is no alternative to peace."

The genius of the President, and the great triumph of his Administration, has been to preserve the peace under such conditions without sacrifice of vital American interests. This is an enormously delicate and difficult process. Courage is one essential element in it. Braggadocio is not.

Des Moines (Ia.) Register—United States Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has been taking a drubbing in Washington, London and Paris for his claim to have looked war "square in the face" three times in the last two and one-half years and to have averted it by "strong action."

Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, lambasted him, British diplomats, ministers and newspapermen took out after him, French Foreign Office officials roasted him.

Most of the criticism has been based on summaries of what Dulles said, not on the full article in which they appear. The too hard to make the Dulles policies seem a brilliant success.

There are differences, there have been successes—but not on the sweeping scale Shepley makes out.

The wisest thing in the article, perhaps, is the quote from Dulles on the problems ahead—which look so tremendous to partisan foes of Dulles who are sure he is bungling them—for example in Asia and the Middle East.

"New problems are one mark of progress," said Dulles. "If you are not progressing you have the same problems."

Washington Evening Star—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is up to his ears in boiling hot water, and he has only himself to blame.

Mr. Dulles's troubles stem from an exclusive interview which he gave to Life magazine. Why he did this is anyone's guess. Presumably, however, Mr. Dulles thought it would be nice to start off an election year with a friendly article in a friendly magazine.

There is nothing inherently wrong with this. Mr. Dulles is not the first man in public life, nor will he be the last, to welcome a bit of publicity which he thinks will be helpful to himself and his party.

What is wrong, or, rather, what is incomprehensible, is that Mr. Dulles, or whoever acted for him in the matter, should have failed to realize that this particular article, far from being helpful, was certain to be harmful. Both in tone and content, the interview is damaging to our relations with our allies and should be embarrassing to Mr. Dulles.

The impression that the world will get from this is a portrayal of Mr. Dulles, in his own words, as a master of the art of going to the verge of war without getting into war—as a man who has thrice marched to the brink of war and who, if need arises, will march again. There are other comments in the article which imply that the French and British have not mastered this art, and there is one which suggests that the British backed out of an agreement for joint action in the Indochina matter.

It may be that Mr. Dulles is right in thinking that his "deterrent" policy saved this country from three wars. It would be quite understandable if he had said these things in private conversation. But it is incredible that the Secretary of State would consent to the publication, with direct quotes, of such views and comments.

To paraphrase an old saying, this is a deplorable way to run a State Department. Mr. Dulles is in serious trouble of his own making. He has marched to the brink of a diplomatic fiasco, and he is going to need all of his skill in extrication to keep from toppling over.

Milwaukee Journal—Secretary of State Dulles is under the hottest fire of his three years in office as a result of statements in Life magazine about his record as conductor of American foreign policy.

American and British newspapers, Congressmen and experienced diplomatic correspondents charge that Dulles distorts history. One paper accuses the Secretary of "massive hindsight."

Certainly there is evidence that other factors and individuals played important roles in keeping the world from war during the last three years. The names of Nehru of India, Eden of Great Britain, Mendes-France of France and others come to mind in connection with the very crises Dulles mentions. The Dulles thesis is that if any one of them accomplished something it was because he (Dulles) planned it that way.

Nowhere is there hint of a possibility that the Communists kept the peace because they were worn out by the fruitless war in Korea, were satisfied for the time with half of Indochina, were biding their day in the Formosa area.

Of greater concern even than historical veracity, however, is the Dulles's diplomatic philosophy.

There is a place in diplomacy for taking of risks and for letting a possible enemy know where you stand. But risk-taking is not a policy in itself; it is a matter of gravest necessity. When dropping of one atom bomb might set off world nuclear war, the thought of Secretary Dulles almost casually "walking to the brink" with the unknown American people in his charge is a frightening one.

This article on Dulles's theories offends allies and friends. It revives fears that the United States is warlike and that Dulles tends to act without consulting allies. The Communists, whose favorite propaganda pamphlet pictures Uncle Sam and the Statue of Liberty tossing atom bombs, will relish this propaganda windfall.

At home, the article has already started political warfare anew. The entire article, with its resounding, moralistic, boastful tone, is in incredibly bad taste. How can a responsible diplomat, still in office, broadcast to the world of the terrible risks he has taken, the enemies he has cowed, the friends who have failed him?

This is but the last in a series of Dulles's missteps, many of which have seriously harmed the American people, all of which have embarrassed them. Many Americans may well ask whether the United States should continue to be burdened with a bumbling and blundering Secretary of State.

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette—The furor that has been raised by Secretary of State Dulles's "brink of war" remark is proof enough that the remark ought never have been made. That it should have been published in an article whose purpose seems partisan—to tout the Republican Administration's conduct of foreign policy—is even more regrettable. This is a presidential election year, when it will be difficult enough keeping policies from mauling foreign policy without Mr. Dulles or the editors of Life inviting the attack.

Actually, in the context in which it appeared, the "brink of war" remark, while much too casual, is not so alarming as it sounds alone. Mr. Dulles is represented as thinking that all great modern wars were started because the aggressor miscalculated, because they thought they could get away with it. The point that he and the author of the article seem to be making is that in the intense struggle with world Communism, the United States must not be afraid to risk war in opposing Communist aggression.

In fact, Mr. Dulles claims that by letting the Communists know that we weren't afraid of war, the United States has three times forced the Communists to retreat or stop short. All three times, of course, occurred under this Administration.

Mr. Dulles's history is open to serious question, as his critics at home and abroad have been indignantly pointing out. But Mr. Dulles's worst fault, it seems to us, is talking out loud about attitudes that a Secretary of State should keep to himself, at least until he writes his memoirs in retirement.

We need many improvements in our foreign policy. But high among this is the need for less

Denver Post — It has been said of John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State, that he fancies himself as a shrewd political strategist. We do not know whether the President concurs in that view. But we can hardly imagine a more uninspired or a less timely act than Mr. Dulles' personalized review of diplomatic achievements, given authorized publication in Life magazine.

Mr. Dulles may have believed that the release of his own personal "white paper" would give his party ammunition for massive retaliation on Democrats in the present election year. Or perhaps the Secretary conceived of this as another way of warning would-be aggressors. Finally Mr. Dulles may have wanted to test public opinion (or condition it) on the use of nuclear weapons as an instrument of foreign and defense policy. For apparently the Secretary (with Mr. Eisenhower's approval) was not timid about shaking atomic energy in the faces of our enemy.

Now, what has been the result of Mr. Dulles' revelations?

First, it has raised the disturbing question whether Mr. Dulles sees no difference between "undertaking risks as a necessity and regarding risk-taking as a virtue in itself." The distinction may be clear in the mind of the Secretary; but in view of his highly subjective version of history, it may not be at all clear to our allies for whom Mr. Dulles seems willing to incur risks without consultation.

Second, if Mr. Dulles regards this as an opening salvo in the presidential campaign, he fired it into the faces of a Democratic majority without which he has no chance to obtain approval of a foreign economic aid program which he believes is necessary to meet Communist competition.

Third, and this is most important, Mr. Dulles now invites an intensive review of just what American military capabilities are in the light of this policy of belling up to war as a means of holding it. In precisely that connection, a series of jolting articles by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway started today in the Saturday Evening Post. Gen. Ridgway says that United States military strength is being falsely described; that we are cutting back our forces below that necessary to match our commitments; that we are relying too heavily upon nuclear weapons and are therefore being maneuvered into using them first, thus inviting the censure of world opinion.

Fourth, Mr. Dulles has, by most indirect means, purported to define, to explain and to defend policies which are solely within the jurisdiction of the President. It is not inferred that Mr. Eisenhower was not informed, or that he did not approve. But such a method of public information obscures and confuses the role of the President himself in making such decisions. He is insulated, therefore, against adverse criticism—though policies attributed to his Administration, and even boastfully asserted by his Secretary of State, find a negative reception among the people.

John Foster Dulles has toiled indefatigably and with not a little success in behalf of countervailing powers and world peace. But his own summary of hits and runs is so extravagant as to throw new light on his errors.

Louisville Courier-Journal — It was a British newspaper that headlined some recent comment on our Secretary of State: "The Incredible Mr. Dulles." But none of Mr. Dulles' previous performances are quite as incredible as the authorized story in Life of how we have three times been led—all unknowing—to the brink of war and back again by the intrepid Secretary.

The Life article, to begin with, is extravagantly laudatory. . . . It sets forth the occasions on which—without consultation or warning—world-wide atomic war might have resulted from Mr. Dulles' boldness, fearlessness, foresight or what have you.

Incredible instances bolster up this revelation. When Mr. Dulles packed up and stalked angrily from the Indochina peace conference at Geneva, leaving Eden and Mendes-France to the dreary task of rescuing a settlement from defeat, he had in reality arranged matters so that "Eden and Mendes-France found themselves able to bargain from Dulles' strength." As Walter Lippman points out, there was no strength, there was no victory and Britain and France did the best they could to end the fighting "on the basis of the military status quo." Where were Mr. Dulles' alleged threats of armed intervention supposed to lead, except to an alarming widening of an area of hostility that neither the American people nor our allies wanted or were ready for?

The Life article similarly credits Mr. Dulles with ending the Korean war by a threat to enlarge it and so frightening the Chinese that they consented to a truce. No record exists to substantiate such a claim; Mr. Dulles and President Eisenhower did indeed end the Korean war when it had reached military stalemate, but the conditions to which they consented had been just as readily available to Mr. Truman and Secretary Acheson. The latter, however, continued to hope that the United Nations could pull something better out of this aggressive war than the permanent division and indecisive result we actually got. We are glad the war ended. But it did not end on terms glorious for our side and it certainly did not end because Mr. Dulles flashed the lightning of his terrible, swift sword at the inscrutable Chinese. But, in customary fashion, the Secretary himself has now pulled away from many of the major implications of the Life article. His press conference on Tuesday brought out the thought that the famous "brink of war" statement "tends to emphasize over-simplification and special emphasis." We don't know what that means, but he added, all he really wanted to say was that one must take "a calculated risk for peace."

This, of course, is a fact. But stated in this way it is unlikely that Life would have thought it quite as impressive as the "brink of war" simile. And it is this seemingly incurable propensity of Mr. Dulles's to juggle phrases, to pick the alarming or the ambiguous or the actually misleading one and then to retreat to others less alarming but even more confusing than the first, that makes another of Life's tributes to him a little less than accurate.

Baltimore Sun — Perhaps there is some good reason for getting excited over the interview with Mr. Dulles, published in Life magazine, but if so it is hard to formulate it. Of course, there are good partisan reasons for attacking Mr. Dulles, whether he is right or wrong, but most of us will be content to leave such tactics to Senator Humphrey.

What Mr. Dulles says, in effect, is that on three different occasions the aggressive Chinese Communist government brought matters to such an issue that there was grave danger of large-scale war. The question before the Eisenhower Administration at each of these crises was whether it should back down or stand firm at the risk of war. Three times the decision, made by the President himself at Mr. Dulles' advice, was to stand firm and let it be known that we weren't bluffing. Three times, thus faced with straight-speaking, it was the Chinese who backed down.

The three issues were, of course, those of the Korean armistice negotiations, the Indochina crisis and the Formosa crisis. None of these issues has been finally disposed of. So it is not possible to claim that all danger of war has been removed.

But Mr. Dulles' firmness, backed by President Eisenhower, has given us peace for the intervening period, and it now appears that the Reds are less likely to take the desperate chance of provoking us to full-scale war.

Of course, those who do not like the prickly and sometimes blunt Mr. Dulles, and who get goose flesh every time he tells the harsh truth, will continue to criticize him. But, after all, his tactlessness has contributed to the maintenance of the peace.

Chicago Daily News — It is by no means a certainty that Adlai Stevenson will become President of the United States. But if he does, let us extend our sympathy to him in advance. He will find it very different to exercise the primary responsibility taken on the sidelines. Every new President discovers that.

Mr. Stevenson has just accused Secretary of State Dulles of playing "Russian roulette" with the national security. This is because Dulles says the Eisenhower Administration has three times taken the nation to the brink of war without going over the brink.

The first time was during the truce negotiations in Korea, then threatening to break up over the prisoner of war question. They did not break up, according to a Life article quoting Dulles and evidently approved by the Eisenhower Administration. The Chinese knew we would make real war, with no targets or weapons barred, if they started fighting again or stalled the truce indefinitely.

The second time Dulles says we went to the brink was when the French were routed in Indochina. Dulles claims that American willingness to fight what saved part of Indochina from the Red regime. This, he contends, kept the rest of southeast Asia from falling into Communist hands.

Our third trip to the brink was when Red China threatened to capture Quemoy and Matsu and attack Formosa. The Administration got Congress to support a declaration that the invasion of Formosa would mean war.

In all these cases, Dulles contends, advance knowledge of our intention prevented our adversary from making war, because our adversary knew the outcome would be too costly.

Our own opinion is that the Administration was right in Korea, wrong in Indochina, and right in Formosa.

Speaking of Indochina, we are reminded that it was a hot topic when Stevenson returned from his round-the-world trip in 1953, although it had not yet flamed into a full-scale crisis. Nevertheless, it was already evident that Red pressure, eased in Korea, would be directed toward Indochina. Secretary Dulles uttered a stern warning about the concern this would give the United States.

Speaking in Chicago on Sept. 16, 1953, Stevenson did not call this "Russian roulette." He said:

"Let me add here that I emphatically approve what our Government is doing to leave no doubt about our concern for the security and independence of Indochina, which is the gate to all southeast Asia." It was only later that Stevenson adopted the mild British line toward Indochina, just as he later did toward Formosa. His Formosan policy, so far as we can judge from his public utterances, would be to surrender not only the approaches but the island itself, to Red China for nothing.

It strikes us that Mr. Stevenson's softness on Formosa is more likely to bring on war than the firmness of President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles. We hope his election as President would not give Red China the courage to attack.

Springfield (Mass.) Union — It is easy to agree with State Secretary Dulles that "strong action" by the Administration can be credited with averting war three times in the last three years.

Had the Communists walked out of the negotiations under way in Korea, following President Syngman Rhee's release of North Korean prisoners who did not want to be repatriated, the United States would have renewed the war and extended it to air bombardment of Manchuria. This the Communists knew.

The Communists knew also that the United States had two aircraft carriers with atomic weapons in the South China Sea during the Indochina crisis, and an all-out attack by the Communists would bring them into play.

According to the Life magazine interview, Mr. Dulles is quoted as never doubting that President Eisenhower would have regarded an attack on Quemoy and Matsu as an attack on Formosa, for the defense of which a congressional resolution authorized the use of military forces.

There were those who wanted the United States to make unmistakably clear its intentions regarding Quemoy and Matsu, but Mr. Dulles purposely left the matter vague. While we wouldn't recommend vagueness as a guiding principle in American foreign relations, there was something to be said for it in this particular instance.

Like it or not, we know we are going to war if the Communists attempt to take Formosa. Whether we hold them off at Quemoy and Matsu or farther out in Formosa Strait is a military question. It could be decided now. But those who insist it should be ought to ask themselves whether it can be intelligently decided now.

Kansas City Star — By the novel method of releasing major statements through an exclusive magazine story, Secretary Dulles has revived speculation on the danger that a few little islands off the coast of China might involve us in war.

In a casual aside the Life writer, James Shepley, says, in parenthesis, "Dulles has never doubted, incidentally, that Eisenhower would have regarded an attack on Quemoy and the Matsu as an attack on Formosa."

If that statement is correct, of course, it means that Secretary Dulles says an attack on these islands would mean war. The United States is publicly committed to defend Formosa.

Early last spring the offshore islands were the cause of deepest concern in Washington. Few were alarmed over our public commitment to defend Formosa where the Red Chinese had little chance of a successful attack. The awesome question was whether we were so involved with Chiang Kai-shek that the President would have to order a United States defense of Chiang's offshore islands.

In the case of the Quemoy and Matsu, geography and a considerable part of world opinion could be expected to favor the attackers. For that reason the attack has appeared dangerously possible. And it may come this year.

We believe Secretary Dulles owes the American public and our allies a prompt clarification.

New York Herald Tribune — It is vital to distinguish between what Mr. Dulles actually said, and meant, and the interpretation placed on his thinking by the author of the Life article, James Shepley, and his editors.

Mr. Dulles, it has been learned, did not read the piece. He did not select the timing, which has troubled British opinion on the eve of Sir Anthony Eden's visit to Washington.

Nor did the Secretary of State choose that unfortunate example of condensation in headline writing which appeared on "Life's" cover: "Three Times at Brink of War: How Dulles Gambled and Won."

To be sure, the article was submitted to the State Department, and one major change (relating to the "verge of war" phrase) was requested. Life, however, said this correction came too late.

Mr. Dulles is firm, and rightly so, in holding to the thesis that the United States must accept risks to preserve the peace.

But the main point that the Secretary would undoubtedly make is that it was not American policy which brought this country to the brink of war, but Communist imperialism.

Confronted with a choice of retreating, standing paralytically still or meeting the danger face to face, the United States chose the last. President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles wanted to prevent war by preventing any miscalculation as to American intentions if the Soviet Union or its satellites pressed too far.

The article, and the material not directly attributable to Secretary Dulles, went beyond this statement of policy. It is plain that unfortunate implications have been drawn from the piece as it appeared in Life, and there is at least one error of fact.

The assertion that a British "change of heart" prevented the meeting of Western and Asian nations in Washington during the Dien Bien Phu crisis is, to the best of this newspaper's information, incorrect.

The British government indicated it would not participate in such a meeting, prior to the Geneva conference of 1954, and never changed its position. At worst there was a misunderstanding between London and Washington, not a breach of faith.

It is undeniable that the article has had unfortunate repercussions abroad and at home. British public opinion has been much exercised. More deeply troubled are such countries as Pakistan, Burma and India, where press comment has been especially hostile.

The article has given ammunition to Communist propagandists and Soviet apologists. It has revived talk in many countries that America is precipitous in action and moved by impulse rather than reasoned thought. To that extent it has impaired the splendid impression which President Eisenhower's dedicated devotion to peace created at "the summit" in Geneva.

This newspaper believes, therefore, that the judgment displayed in respect to this interview and the editing of the article leaves something to be desired. Matters of war and peace are delicate, in this world charged with hostility and doubt. They should only be dealt with in the most solemn and responsible form, particularly since the United States has undertaken such heavy responsibilities to forward the evolving cause of peace and freedom everywhere.

Richmond Times Dispatch — Popular magazines are always tempted to take a "feature" approach to contemporary history; to select facts to fit a narrative style and to publish the result under an "eye-grabbing" headline.

That is what Life did, under its front-cover "scarehead" of January 16:

Three times a brink of war—How Dulles gambled and won.

We have twice plodded through the long and meaty Life article by James Shepley, Chief of the Time-Life Washington Bureau. We suspect that those who condemn Mr. Dulles and Mr. Shepley either failed to read the article objectively or else were motivated by personal or political hostility toward Mr. Dulles.

Mr. Dulles is correct in his assumption that a cold war of indefinite duration will "zig and zag," following Stalin's strategy of "retreating now and then to buoy off a powerful enemy and gain respite," but that a shooting war can be prevented by a consistent policy of letting the political aggressor know that "he can't get away with it."

To do that you must, as Mr. Shepley quotes Mr. Dulles: . . . take chances for peace as you must take chances in war. The ability to get to the verge without getting into the war is the necessary art.

This is not "gambling," as Life's scarehead put it. This is what cautious businessmen mean by taking a "calculated risk." As to liberation of satellites, Mr. Dulles' policy, as quoted, is equally realistic:

Not by bloody uprisings, but by making enslavement so unprofitable that the master will let go his grip.

Unfortunately, Life "played" the story in such a way as to invite misinterpretation.

Hartford Courant — In a press conference devoted chiefly to those brink-of-war statements that sent a tremor around the world, Mr. Dulles has taken the edge off an unfortunate statement. That was the passage in the Life article that said: "You have to take chances for peace, just as you must take chances in war. Some say that we were brought to the verge of war. Of course we were brought to the verge of war. The ability to get to the verge of war without getting into the war is the necessary art."

Mr. Dulles now explains that these words do not really mean what they do mean, and that is surely to the good. He also stresses the fact—which most of the world would have taken for granted had this article never been written—that his foreign policy consists of far more than brink-of-war deterrence. There is also patience, a conciliatory attitude, and making peace "a vital force for justice and human welfare." Finally, his press conference helped to make clear what had been obscured by his verge-of-war phraseology in the original article. This is that the foundation stone of his policy is to let a potential aggressor know in advance the point at which we are willing to fight. To be utterly clear about this is the great lesson of this century of world wars and minor wars. Neither World War I nor World War II nor Korea would ever have started had Germany and North Korea known what they were getting into.

Scraps-Howard Newspapers — Secretary of State Dulles' interview in Life magazine has provoked cries of "politics" from the Democrats and "foul" from our friends abroad. Our enemies and the neutrals seem certain to claim the interview proves their accusations of atom-mongering.

The Eisenhower administration's stewardship of foreign affairs includes much worthy of praise. But Mr. Dulles' interview, we fear, will tarnish that record by trying to make something out of nothing—by rewriting diplomatic defeats into victories.

Everyone involved in the Indochina mess shares the blame. It was a terrible tragedy for the Free World and a major victory for Communism. It only enhances the Red victory to pretend otherwise now.

There never has been a full public accounting of what went on in those closing months of the war. American, British and French versions disagree. Even the many American versions are at wide variance, and now Mr. Dulles adds fuel to the controversy—in an article which hails him as the greatest secretary of state since Thomas Jefferson.

The American people contributed about two billion dollars to the lost Indochina struggle. The necessity now is for publication of all the facts—good and bad—so the people can judge on the basis of unbiased testimony.

ARMY RESERVISTS TO TAKE PART IN ATOMIC EXERCISE

Eighty-one members of the 102nd Infantry Division of the Army Reserve will leave St. Louis Saturday for Fort Sheridan, Ill., where they will participate in simulated atomic exercises.

The exercises, conducted by the Fifth Army, will not involve actual movement of troops in the field. Problems will be worked on maps with participants utilizing latest developments in atomic, chemical, biological and radiological warfare.

About 1500 Army Reserve, National Guard and Regular Army commanders and their staff officers will participate in the exercises.

KNOWLAND SAID TO BE READY TO ENTER PRIMARIES

Magazine Calls Him 'Avowed Candidate,' Leader of Old Taft Forces.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—Senator Knowland (Rep., California), was described in an article in Collier's magazine yesterday as an "avowed candidate" for the presidency and leader of "all those forces that once marched behind Robert Taft."

Political writer Theodore H. White says Knowland plans to enter presidential primaries in Oregon, South Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota as a "fundamentalist Republican; he will claim old Taft loyalties elsewhere too."

White writes of the difficult political situation in California where, along with Knowland, three other Californians—Vice President Nixon, Gov. Knight, and Chief Justice Warren—figure in speculation over the 1956 G.O.P. national ticket.

Eruption of Rivalry.

The article says no one can predict with certainty whether the California rivalry will erupt in the June 3 presidential primary there or on the national convention floor in San Francisco starting Aug. 20. It concludes:

"Only one prediction is sure: If Eisenhower's decision throws open the presidency, California will produce the noisiest political brawl since McKinley licked free silver."

Knowland's most recent statement to Washington reporters came last Sunday when he said he will wait "patiently" until Feb. 15 for President Eisenhower to decide whether to seek re-election before saving anything about his own hopes for the G.O.P. presidential nomination.

He refused to say what he would do if the President doesn't announce his intentions by Feb. 15. Knowland said he would support the President if the latter is a candidate. He favors an early decision by Mr. Eisenhower.

Knight Will File.

Knight has announced he will file as a favorite son presidential candidate in the California primary, but will be for Mr. Eisenhower if he runs. Nixon has made no comment about his personal political future while awaiting the President's decision. Warren has declared himself irrevocably out of politics.

While says in his article, "The Gentlemen from California," that the way California casts its 70 G.O.P. national convention votes, if Mr. Eisenhower doesn't run, may decide not only the presidency but control of "the prime new source of political power in America—the state of California." He adds the state, now second in population, is headed for first place by 1965, according to statisticians.

CHARGE OF SELLING LIQUOR TO JAIL INMATE DROPPED

A charge of selling liquor to a jail inmate, against Theodore O. Sutton, a candy salesman, was dismissed in Court of Criminal Correction yesterday after it was reported the chief witness could not be found.

Sutton, who lives in the 5600 block of Chamberlain avenue, was charged with selling gin to a City Jail trusty last summer. The trusty has since been released and efforts to find him were unsuccessful. It was stated. A nolle prosequi was entered by the Prosecuting Attorney's office.

A charge of selling intoxicating liquor without a license, on which Sutton was fined $200 in police court Aug. 8, also was dismissed in Court of Correction, to which the case had gone on appeal. The absence of Melvin Cain, the trusty, caused dismissal of the charge.

JACK BENNY WILL PLAY HIS VIOLIN TO AID CARNEGIE HALL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19 (UP)—Comedian Jack Benny last night said he had been invited by the New York Symphony Orchestra to play his violin at Carnegie Hall next Oct. 2 at a benefit to "save Carnegie Hall."

Benny, who uses his violin as a comedy prop, said the invitation came from conductor Alfred Wallenstein and it would fulfill a long-time ambition for him.

"I shall try to sound like I think I'm good enough to play with the symphony even though everyone in the audience knows I'm not," Benny said. "I have been practicing with the hope something like this would happen. It takes practice even to play lousy."

By the Associated Press.

A private real estate firm owns the 65-year-old auditorium and has been negotiating to sell it to a firm that wants to put up a commercial building on the site.

A group of well-known artists formed a "committee to save Carnegie Hall," with singer Lawrence Tibbett as chairman.

They hope to raise enough money to buy it and maintain its traditions.

POSTMARK: 'NORTH POLE'

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Moscow radio said yesterday the Soviet Union can now supply stamp collectors with letters postmarked "The North Pole."

The broadcast said the world's most northerly post office has been set up at two Soviet research stations floating on polar ice islands known as "North Pole IV" and "North Pole V."

measure that they were determined to kill it.

Many of them now, however, have decided that it was politically unwise to defeat the Mayor's bill, particularly since he probably would be able to force the election of charter freeholders to draw up a new charter. Many of them are anxious to "get off the hook" and vote for the new bill.

Another Democratic alderman who voted against Tucker's proposal but who now says he will support the new measure is Raymond Leisner of the Seventh Ward.

"Most Are Now Rebels."

"There is nothing as rebellious as a bunch of rebels," Leisner told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "And most of the aldermen are now rebels."

Alderman William A. Stolar, Twenty-eighth Ward Republican, one of the seven aldermen who voted for the Mayor's measure last week, said he will vote for the new bill provided it is not changed by "any amendments or gimmicks with ulterior motives."

He spoke last night at a meeting of the Twenty-eighth Ward Republican Club, which adopted a resolution endorsing the election of freeholders to draft a new city charter.

It was learned that a group of south St. Louis business men who favored passage of the Mayor's bill have volunteered to assist in any campaign to circulate petitions to set up a board of charter freeholders. They include Frank Bick, editor of the South Side Journal; Charles Houska, president of the Cherokee Businessmen's Association; and Milton Mantler, a druggist, who served on the recent city bond issue screening committee.

The South Side group also was reported ready to support a slate of qualified candidates for the board of freeholders, including former Alderman Mel Krah of the Tenth Ward, a Republican.

Krah, who was friendly to the Mayor's drive for charter modernization, was defeated last spring by the present Tenth Ward Alderman, James E. Geisler. Geisler promised to support a freeholder bill in his campaign, but voted against the Mayor's bill last Friday.

A plea for charter revision was made by Mayor Tucker last night in an address before a dinner meeting of the St. Louis Club of Printing House Craftsmen, at York Hotel.

The Mayor said the crux of the dispute was whether the charter should be revised by a board of freeholders, with power to overhaul it completely, or by piecemeal amendments proposed by the Board of Aldermen.

The latter approach, he asserted, would be as practical as "trying to modernize Ben Franklin's old wood press with a few scattered parts from a new high-speed rotary press."

PRESIDENT NOT
RUNNING AGAIN

preference in such matters, I would hope that the accident of my illness and necessary period for determining the degree of my recovery would not have the effect of every member of our party to express his preference for the presidential candidate of his choice.

(Here came the paragraph referring to his health.)

"The personal decision to which I refer will be rendered as soon as it is firmly fixed in my own mind. I shall strive to see that it is based as to my best judgment on the good of our country."

Mr. Eisenhower opened the conference by announcing he had written an answer to the New Hampshire official. He read the telegram in a firm clear voice and when he had finished he asserted that the statement was all he would have to say about personal political questions.

No Hint on Decision Date.

There was no hint as to the date on which Mr. Eisenhower's decision may become fixed in the President's mind. This date is a matter of the utmost importance to potential Republican candidates who want to get into the race as soon as possible if the President decides to retire at the end of his term next Jan. 20.

The President's action today in stating he had no objection to his name being entered in Republican primaries will tend further to freeze out other candidates who, it is thought, would not dare enter the lists against the popular President.

This policy affects particularly Senator William F. Knowland of California, the Senate minority leader, who has indirectly indicated he would withdraw about Feb. 15 before announcing his own decision. Knowland will seek the nomination if the President does not. The date was selected because Knowland felt the President would undergo a definitive medical check and make known a second-term decision about this time.

The President said firmly today, however, that no date had been set for the check. Several weeks ago Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall said it would not hurt the party if a decision was not made until early March.

Puts Nixon on Spot.

The effect of a delay is to give the Eisenhower wing of the party an added measure of control. The delay also postpones a decision on whether Vice President Richard M. Nixon will be President Eisenhower's running mate if the President should stand for a second term, and also on Nixon's own possible presidential candidacy.

The circumstances have put Nixon in a position from which he cannot move in furtherance of his ambitions while Mr. Eisenhower remains undecided, and Nixon is known to be worried about this forced immobility.

A major victory in the New Hampshire primary four years ago gave Mr. Eisenhower his first big official boost toward the White House. One of his most active supporters, Gov. Sherman Adams, became the assistant to the President and during the President's convalescence has been the top man in the executive department.

Mr. Eisenhower will make a political speech tomorrow night when he addresses a Republican fund-raising salute-to-Eisenhower rally in Washington, but the talk is not expected to contain a final answer on the second-term question. His words will be carried by closed-circuit television to other rallies throughout the country.

Other Subjects Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

Farm—Asked about the feasibility of bringing hogs under the price support program, Mr. Eisenhower called that too serious a question for a quick answer. He said, however, that he is in favor of moving cautiously on the whole matter of bringing perishable items under the price support program.

Water Resources—A reporter asked the President whether he planned any steps to put into effect recommendations in a report to him by a cabinet study committee on water resources. Mr. Eisenhower noted that he sent the report to Congress earlier this week, and added he also has aids at work analyzing the document.

Hoover Recommendation—Mr. Eisenhower said he was grateful to former President Herbert Hoover for his study of Government reorganization problems. The President was noncommittal, however, as to whether he agrees with one of Hoover's informal recommendations calling for appointment of an administrative vice president to ease the burdens of the Chief Executive.

Civil Rights—When he asked Congress in his annual message to create a bipartisan commission to investigate alleged mistreatment of Negroes in some areas, he had in mind a need for defining federal responsibility in the whole field of civil rights. He thinks the commission should find out where, if any, violations are occurring that the Federal Government has a responsibility to prevent.

Gas Bill—His position on the bill, now before the Senate, to exempt natural gas producers from federal regulation is the same as it was last year. The Administration endorsed the legislation in principle last year but has taken no firm stand on the bill itself.

Cooled Off By The Tame West

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Police told a former Californian, Bill Basham, the West isn't what it used to be. He was fined for showing off his .38 pistol in a shoulder holster in a bar.

PRESIDENT BACKS
STATE DEPT. HEAD

he was sorry he had mentioned the article, but he repeated his question.

The President, who had joined the laughter, said he had gone to Congress perfectly honestly to get authority to make the decision about Matsuo and Quomoy but the character of the attack (by the Red Chinese) would determine how he would make up his mind.

A New York Times reporter caused more laughter when he said he would like to ask a question not related to any magazine article: Would the President comment on the prospects for peace throughout the world?

Apparently welcoming this broad opportunity, Mr. Eisenhower said the question had to be put into perspective, that when he took office three years ago tomorrow the Korean war was still going on and that any decision to cross the Yalu river to bomb Manchuria might have shocked international opinion.

He continued that during this three-year period there had been growing pressure for a conference of heads of state at the summit and that while many people in this country doubted the wisdom of such a meeting the United States could not be pictured as a dog-in-the-manger and incapable of defending American interests.

We made every conciliatory advance, he said, consistent with our moral beliefs, and of course there were high hopes.

Situation Brighter.

These hopes, he said, had not been realized and there had been a great let-down since August.

But in comparison with three years ago, he said, the situation is not as dark as it has been in many areas, in fact it is much brighter.

The American policy of friendship to all and friendship among all is the reason for the present prosperity. He said a truce in Indochina had been achieved; that last year we expected to lose Iran; there had been a settlement in Egypt and Trieste and a Communist government on this continent (Guatemala) had been eliminated.

On the broad outlook, he said, there was no cause for complacency or for lack of fervor in trying to do better.

Ridgway Controversy.

By the Associated Press.

In regard to criticism by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Mr. Eisenhower said that if there were any misstatements in his 1954 State of the Union message they should be taken up with Secretary of Defense Wilson and Adm. Arthur Radford—not with the President.

This was in answer to a question about Ridgway's Saturday Evening Post article statement that as Army Chief of Staff he did not go along with the military cuts proposed in that message even though the message said the defense program had been approved unanimously by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Ridgway also contended, in the article, that he had been put under pressure to fit his ideas on Army needs into a "preconceived politico-military 'party line'" based on budgetary considerations. He said domestic politics was involved.

Mr. Eisenhower said such a thing would be contrary to the policies he has followed in his military career.

On the question of unanimity among the Joint Chiefs, Mr. Eisenhower said every section of a State of the Union message is sent to the department involved so that every item can be checked. And he said that if any error was discovered in the 1954 message the reporters should see Wilson and Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Wilson told a news conference Tuesday it is his memory that Ridgway was correct in claiming he did not concur in the decision on the level of Army forces for fiscal 1955.

61 COUNTIES TOLD TO BOOST ASSESSMENTS

Largest One Involved Is Jackson Where Average 10 Pct. Hike Is Required.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 19 (UPI)—Notices were mailed today to 61 Missouri counties to raise their real estate assessments to the average 30 per cent of market value minimum required by the State Tax Commission.

James M. Robertson, chairman of the commission, said the largest county involved was Jackson county (Kansas City) where an estimated 10 per cent average increase will be necessary.

The tax commission's latest action was a follow-up of its controversial order last year that increased the assessed valuation of property in 26 counties, including St. Louis county. Those 26 counties were acted on first because their assessments were the lowest in the state.

Robertson said about 27 additional counties already had voluntarily raised their assessments or were above the 30 per cent minimum before the tax commission started its drive. That meant that 53 Missouri counties and the City of St. Louis now have their assessments set sufficiently high to meet the state minimum.

Robertson said notices were sent to tax officials in 61 counties listing the level of their assessments at the present time and the amount of increase necessary. He said the local authorities have until June 20 to work out the increase, and stressed that the commission did not know, nor ever did, advocate a blanket increase on all property in a county.

Robertson said the notices to county clerks warned that if the assessments were not raised voluntarily, the commission would make the necessary adjustments to meet the 30 per cent minimum.

CANNON SEEKING 18TH TERM

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 19 (AP)—Representative Clarence Cannon of Elsberry, now serving his seventeenth term in Congress, filed today for re-nomination on the Democratic ticket.

The dean of Missouri's congressional delegation, Cannon will be 77 years old in April. He is chairman of the House Appropriations committee and for years has been House parliamentarian and also parliamentarian for the Democratic national conventions. No one has filed against him on the Democratic ticket thus far. His Ninth District is composed of 24 northeastern counties.

INDIA PRIESTS FORM UNION TO SEEK HIGHER WAGES

NEW DELHI (AP)—In the Jain temples in Ahmedabad priests numbering about 100 have formed a union to fight for higher wages and improved working conditions.

Contending they are employees of an industry, the priests have asked the Bombay state government to bring them under the minimum wages act and allow them to take their case before a state industrial tribunal.

The governing boards of the temples have rejected the priests' demands.

FREED AFTER WAITING 9 MONTHS FOR TRIAL

Prisoner Released by Judge When Dowd Office Fails to Produce Witness.

Freddie Morrow, 3100 block of Lawton boulevard, who was held in City Jail nine months awaiting trial on a larceny charge, was freed yesterday by Circuit Judge J. Casey Walsh, who dismissed the case because the circuit attorney's office could not find the prosecuting witness.

Morrow, a Negro, was charged with taking $170 from the Comfort Liquor Store, 2711 Franklin avenue, last April 6. The case was continued five times, once at the request of the state.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Edward P. McSweeney, who asked for another continuance yesterday, said the office of Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd was informed only about a month ago that the witness was missing. She was said to be somewhere in Arkansas.

"If this man were out on bond it would be different, but as it is he might be confined for another nine months," Judge Walsh said.

Walsh said. On Monday he had given the state two more days in which to find the necessary witness, a Negro woman who worked in the store.

FAILS IN URANIUM HUNT, FINDS IT IN OWN HOME

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UP)—Lester Weiss discovered a uranium "strike" in his own kitchen after traveling through several states in a vain search for the radioactive metal.

Weiss said his Geiger counter "rattled like a cocktail shaker" after he placed it near an orange-colored water jug which had been in the family for more than 30 years.

He said he discovered that pottery manufacturers had used a uranium compound for decades to put a thin orange glaze on some items.

The Atomic Energy Commission told him a substitute now is being used in place of the uranium, he said. But the material was being used by the pottery manufacturers until about a year ago, with small amounts of uranium being released to the manufacturers by the AEC, according to Weiss.

PENTAGON SEEKS TWO BILLION FOR NEW BUILDINGS

Air Force Would Receive More Than Half of Fund—Much of Program Abroad.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Defense Department asked Congress today to approve a new, world-wide military building program to cost $2,012,283,000, more than half of it for the Air Force.

The program, included in the 1957 fiscal year budget submitted this week, covers projects at 292 defense installations in every state except West Virginia, and at 42 in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone plus eight foreign countries and Pacific islands.

One feature of the measure is provision for the sale abroad of $150,000,000 of surplus farm products to defray the cost of some new military housing overseas.

Proposed military building, including land acquisition in the continental United States, would total $1,055,281,000. The overseas construction figure is $554,222,000 and work at classified and unspecified locations amounts to $402,780,000. Nearly $20,000,000 is earmarked for the construction of 3740 military family housing units in the United States.

Army Fund Smallest.
The Air Force is allotted $1,137,585,000 of military construction. The Navy ranks a poor second with $418,728,000 and the Army is down for $305,670,000.

The Government wants to spend $300,000 to house the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in an official compound equipped with a private communications network.

The program includes this amount to build a house for the chief and suitable dwellings for four of his close assistants on the Naval Observatory grounds in Washington.

The present chief, Adm. Arthur W. Radford, drew up the proposal with the President's approval. Radford now lives in an old Navy residence. His predecessor, Gen. Omar Bradley, lived in Army quarters at Ft. Meyer, Va.

Community Grouping.
Defense spokesmen explained that it was felt that the top military adviser to the President and the Secretary of Defense should live in a "small community grouping," surrounded by his personal staff and have exclusive use of a special communications system that will cost about $50,000.

Outside the continental United States, Alaska tops the list for new building with more than $44,000,000. Hawaii is allocated $6,824,000 and the Philippine Islands, $32,008,000.

California gets $169,687,000 of the building money, more than any other state. Florida ranks second with allocations totaling $72,669,000 and Texas is third with $58,374,000.

The program allots the Army Support Center in St. Louis $3,246,000 and Scott Air Force Base at Belleville, Ill., $3,296,000.

Grandview Air Force Base near Kansas City would receive $1,673,000, and Whiteman Air Force Base, Knobnoster, Mo., $615,000, if Congress approves.

MAN SEEN IN TAVERN ADMITS $180 BURGLARY

A tavern at 3902 North Twentieth street was entered by a burglar early today and $180 was stolen. Police later arrested William R. Greenfield, of the 900 block of Bremen avenue, who they said admitted the burglary.

Officers were called to the tavern by a watchman who reported having seen a prowler. Police found the front window broken and the burglar gone, but were given a description of the man and his automobile. Searching, they found Greenfield in his parked machine on Bremen near Twentieth street. Greenfield was slumped down in the front seat, police reported, apparently trying to hide. Officers broke a window of the locked car and found money on the seat, they said. Greenfield, 24 years old, was described as a former inmate of Alagoa Reformatory. The tavern is owned by Mrs. Baptiste Zykan.

HOMIE BUYING LESSONS RED PERIL, TURLEY DECLARES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—Home buying lessons the danger of Communism in the United States, Clarence M. Turley of St. Louis said last night in taking office as president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Purchase of homes is a non-inflationary force which creates new savings and increases the number of citizens having tangible roots in America, he declared in his inaugural address. Turley called on the 57,000 members of the association to support city governments in neighborhood conservation and urban renewal efforts.

EBREA DRIVE ON ILLITERACY

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 19 (UP)—The government launches a two-month campaign against illiteracy tomorrow in hopes of being able to eliminate the use of symbols on ballots for the presidential election next spring.

The nation's illiterates have been reduced to an estimated 25,000,000 out of a population of 22,000,000 as a result of earlier adult education programs. In 1948, there were an estimated 7,800,000 illiterates.

MENON OF INDIA TALKS TO NASSER FOR SECOND DAY

CAIRO, Jan. 19 (UP)—India's roving ambassador, V. K. Krishna Menon, met today with Egyptian Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser for the second time within 24 hours.

Menon insisted when he arrived here yesterday he was stopping only to "break his journey" and make the trip home to India less tiring. But within a few hours of his arrival here from London and Geneva, he was in conference with Nasser. Subject of their conversations was not disclosed.

Menon, who is recovering from an attack of appendicitis suffered last month in the United States, walked with the help of a cane as he entered the presidency today with Indian Ambassador Ali Yavar Jung. Earlier the two Indian diplomats met with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawsi. The discussions raised speculation that some Indian mediation move might be presented to ease Middle East tension.

Menon leaves tomorrow for Bombay.

G.M. STRIKE IN CANADA EQUALS 123-DAY RECORD

TORONTO, Jan. 19 (AP)—A strike of 17,000 workers in five General Motors of Canada plants in Ontario today matched the longest walkout—123 days—in Canadian automotive history. There were few signs of settlement in the near future.

Negotiators for the company and the United Auto Workers meet today in subcommittees to study local problems in each plant. Top-level talks were suspended yesterday after G.M. repeated a pre-strike offer of 17 cents an hour in pay increases and fringe benefits.

The strike now has equaled the 123-day stoppage at Chrysler of Canada in 1946.

CURTIS ASSAILS REUTHER'S BAR ON FORD STOCK OFFER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—Representative Thomas B. Curtis (Dem., Missouri), said yesterday Walter Reuther "owes an explanation" to union members and the public as to why he "turned down" Ford Motor Co.'s offer to sell stock to its workers.

Noting that Ford stock went on the market yesterday, Curtis told the House that last May company workers were offered "one of the most amazing bargains in history." They were given the opportunity, he said, to buy Ford stock at one-half the market price when it was offered to the public. He said the offer, "just as revolutionary as Henry Ford's dynamic wage scale set in the early decades of the 20th century," was "turned down by CIO president Walter Reuther as an inadequate 'wheel of fortune.'"

In Detroit a spokesman for the United Auto Workers said: "The offer of Ford stock was turned down because under the terms of the offer only a tiny minority of Ford workers would have been able to take advantage of it."

EX-CONVICT GETS LIFE FOR KILLING, ROBBING MAN

Paul Smith, a former convict, was found guilty of murder last night by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood and his punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

Police testified Lee Bunch, of Imperial, was found dead in the 5100 block of Enright avenue last June 18. His wallet containing $5 was missing and his pockets turned inside out.

Police said Smith at first denied the killing but later said he fought with Bunch to protect himself. Smith, 22 years old, a Negro, testified that if he did kill Bunch he did it in self defense. He admitted he had had a fight with a man earlier in the evening. He said his statement given to police was obtained under duress. Bunch, also a Negro, was 34. Assistant Circuit Attorney Theodore McMillan, who prosecuted the case, had asked for the death penalty.

More and more people every day are serving wine with their meals.

Pale Dry SHERRY
... an appetizer wine
Most popular before-dinner wine. Has a tangy, zesty flavor often called "apple". Serves as a palate cleanser. As a cocktail, with appetizers or with soup, most people prefer a dry sherry. With dessert, a sweeter sherry is preferred. Serve chilled.

Have you tried Sauterne or Rhine white table wines? Do so and see just how delightful your dinners can be. No time to it. Simply serve two wines - red and white.

SAUTERNE or RHINE
... white table wines
Golden-hued, medium-bodied wine. Delicate in flavor, ranging from dry to sweet. Best with oysters, fish, chicken, eggs, and light main-course dishes. Always serve well chilled.

BURGUNDY or CLARET
... red table wines
Deep red, full-bodied and dry (not sweet). A slightly tart wine, yet soft and pleasing on the tongue. Ideal with red meats, stews, baked beans, cheese dishes. Usually served at cool room temperature.

And it's inexpensive too if you serve Empire State Domestic Wines from the famed vineyards of New York State. They are simply delicious and more than hold their own with costly imports!

PORT for entertaining
... for dessert
Smooth, full-bodied wine, the color of rubies. Sweet, but with the fruit sweetness of the grape, and not "cloying". Serves small glasses of Port when guests drop in, afternoon or evening. Ideal, too, with dessert. It goes beautifully with cheese, nuts, fruit, also cake. Serve chilled or at cool room temperature.

M'Kay's Action on Mine Claims Called Unusual but Not Wrong

Forest Service Head Admits Secretary Had Right to Take New Samples in Al Sarena Case.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UPI)—Richard E. McArdle, chief of the Forest Service, said today he has no criticism of the Interior Department's procedure in granting 15 disputed mining claims in Oregon's Rogue River National Forest.

McArdle told a joint Senate-House subcommittee investigating the grants that the procedure had never been followed before "as far as I know." It is "not customary procedure," he said, to have the Bureau of Mines take additional samples of minerals on disputed claims.

Under questioning by Republican subcommittee members, McArdle said Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay had a right to call on the Bureau of Mines to take such samples in the Al Sarena mines case.

The Interior Department awarded the Al Sarena Co. title to the claims two years ago, overruling previous objections by the Forest Service.

McArdle said the Forest Service's protest was based on reports of Government mineral examiners that the claims did not show enough minerals to comply with mining laws.

The subcommittee delayed calling its own mining engineer to testify on the mineral worth of the claims in order to question McArdle for a second day.

Award of the claims followed an assay by a private firm showing more mineral content than the Government examiners had found.

Senator George W. Malone (Rep., Nev.) commented that "there is a great difference of opinion among mining engineers."

"Engineers that know their business generally don't work for the Government very long," he said.

McArdle estimated that some 962,000 board feet of lumber have been cut on the disputed claims. He said he has "no idea" how much money the timber brought.

McArdle estimated 1,650,000 board feet was cut on eight other Al Sarena claims which were not disputed.

MINE ENGINEER TO BE WITNESS

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—Congressional investigators plan to introduce testimony today that public land on which Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay granted mineral and timber rights was practically worthless from a mining standpoint.

The testimony, from a professional mining engineer, was expected to be heard at Senate and House subcommittee hearings on McKay's action in giving mineral patents in the Rogue River National Forest to a private firm, Al Sarena Mines, Inc., of Trails, Ore.

The patents permitted Al Sarena to cut as much timber as it wanted on 294 acres of public land in the Southern Oregon forest, in contrast to regular mining claims which allow prospectors to fell only a few trees.

Democrats have charged that the company actually was interested only in the valuable stand of Douglas fir and sugar pine and used the patent applications as a ruse to get timber rights. McKay is a former governor of Oregon.

George Holderer, a mining engineer who studied the disputed Al Sarena claims and reportedly found a low mineral content, was expected to be among today's witnesses. Holderer is a consultant to another congressional subcommittee on mines and minerals.

In the Al Sarena case, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management found the claims commercially unfeasible and therefore recommended against patents, but McKay and Clarence A. Davis, now Under Secretary but then department solicitor, overruled the protests of the two agencies.

Instead, they had the Bureau of Mines take new ore samples, which were sent to a Mobile (Ala.) assaying firm, the Williams Inspection Co. This company found the ore contained enough gold and silver to make it commercially profitable. On this basis McKay and Davis approved the patents.

The Al Sarena mine is owned by a Mobile family which has had many business dealings

SENATOR FINDS FLAWS IN U.S. TECHNICAL AID PLAN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UPI)—Senator Theodore Francis Green (Dem., Rhode Island), reported today the United States technical assistance program abroad is "handicapped by inadequate planning, lack of clearly defined objectives and unresolved dilemmas" in American foreign policy.

However, Green, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said the program is fundamentally sound and worthwhile.

"That mistakes have been made is neither surprising nor occasion for scrapping the whole enterprise," he said. He made the observations in a report on a seven-week inspection trip he made through 11 countries in the Far East, South Asia and the Middle East last fall. He suggested "a slight reduction" in the technical assistance program might prove beneficial.

EXPANDED PENSION PLANS AGREED ON AT MONSANTO

Agreements on expanded pensions and group insurance provisions for 7300 hourly employees at 14 Monsanto Chemical Co. plants were signed yesterday by the company and three AFL-CIO unions.

The new pension plan includes a company-financed benefit of $225 a month for each year of service, providing a monthly minimum retirement of $164.75 with social security, for an employee with 25 years service. A contributory plan also is provided, granting additional benefits. The minimum under the previous pension program was $120 month.

Minimum pensions for total and permanent disability were raised 33 1/3 per cent. Group hospitalization and insurance provisions were increased without additional cost to employees. Unions negotiating the agreement were International Chemical Workers, International Union of Electrical Workers and the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers.

ISRAEL APPEALS TO BRITAIN FOR MORE WEAPONS

Embassy Asserts Israel Will Resist Any 'Imposed Solution' in Mideast.

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP). — Israel made an urgent appeal to Britain today for arms. An Israeli embassy statement said the arms were needed for defense and as a deterrent to possible Arab aggression.

The statement was issued after an hour-long conference between Ambassador Elihu L. Loyd and Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd on the Middle East situation. The talks were held in the light of Prime Minister Eden's forthcoming Washington meeting with President Eisenhower.

The statement said that while Israel wants peace, it would strongly object to any suggestion of an imposed solution (in the Arab-Israeli dispute) and pressure in that direction of whatever kind. "It said nothing short of an adequate supply of defense arms could satisfy Israel's need for 'national security and survival.'"

Tough Talk.

Eliath was said to have done some tough talking to Lloyd, accusing "those powers which have assumed responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security" in the Middle East of "systematic evasion of their obligations." That was an unmistakable reference to the United States, Britain, and France who pledged jointly in 1950 to oppose any aggressor in the Middle East.

The appeal followed by a few hours an official statement by Britain that it has tried and will continue to try "to prevent an arms race in the Middle East."

The pledge was contained in a white paper on the export of surplus war materials. The white paper was issued following criticism of the recent shipment of surplus tanks and armored cars to Egypt. Most of the material originally was exported to Belgium and re-shipped to Cairo.

The document "deplored the fact that surplus war material originating in the United Kingdom has indirectly found its way to the Middle East."

But it added that "exhaustive inquiries" have satisfied Britain that the shipping have "in no way disturbed the balance between the relative strength of the parties concerned" in the region.

The white paper, which followed a speech by Eden last night endorsing the "deterrent power" of nuclear weapons in preserving peace, defined his government's general policy on the sale of arms.

This, it said, is primarily governed by political and strategic considerations. Only when these have been satisfied, it said, are economic considerations taken into account.

The white paper pointed out that under the 1950 agreement among Britain, France and the United States, this country has supplied and continues to sup-

Truman Says Attempt to Call On Eisenhower in 1953 Failed

Washington Star Asserts He Quotes Secretary as Replying That President's Time Was 'All Taken Up.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP). — The Washington Star says former President Truman confirmed today that he was once turned down when he tried to call on President Eisenhower.

The story by columnist Betty Beale says the affair will come out in the second volume of Truman's memoirs.

Truman is quoted as giving this account by telephone from Independence, Mo.:

"It was in the fall of 1953 at the time of the American Royal Livestock meeting. President Eisenhower was in Kansas City for three or four days. He was stopping at the Muehlebach Hotel in the same suite I used to stay in.

"I called him up and said I would like to call on him and pay my respects. That was what I ought to do because he was in my town. His secretary said he was too busy to see me."

The writer quotes the former President as saying the secretary was "a man" rather than a woman, and that his actual words were, "his (Eisenhower's) time is all taken up."

The story says Truman commented:

"That's something I never did to Mr. Hoover."

Truman, a Democrat succeeded by Republican Eisenhower in the presidency, was referring to former President Hoover.

Truman said he had been given "strictly limited quantities of arms" to the Middle East.

"Since the war, millions of tons of surplus, obsolete, and worn out material of every description have been disposed of in this country and in the various theaters of war abroad—both by ourselves and our allies," the white paper said.

"Most of the equipment was sold in 1946, 1947 and 1948. The process is still going on, and will continue as re-equipment progresses and service requirements change, but on a smaller scale as the large stocks left over from the war are now virtually exhausted."

ATOMIC POWER POOL FOR EUROPE TO BE PROPOSED

PARIS, Jan. 19 (AP). — Unofficial delegates from six European nations agreed yesterday to suggest to their governments the creation of a European atomic pool for peaceful uses.

Sitting as an action committee for a united Europe, the delegates voted to present identical resolutions to their home parliaments favoring a supra-national atomic energy commission to control the power pool.

The 33 delegates represent government and opposition parties and trade union members in the six member nations of the European coal-steel pool—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The foreign ministers of the six nations approved in principle the idea of an atomic pool at a meeting in Messina, Italy, last summer.

TELLS OF FEES PAID FOR MORTAR KIT JOB

Plant Head in Defense Fraud Trial Says He Agreed to Commission.

Vernon M. Huff, plant superintendent of Western Supplies Co., was scheduled to take the witness stand again today for continued cross-examination in United States District Court in the trial of two St. Louis county firms and their presidents, charged with defrauding the Government of approximately $12,000 on defense contracts.

Huff testified yesterday he conferred with John Mason Wilson, former president of Contractor Sales & Engineering Co., one of the two firms, about subcontracting for some of the work on a mortar conversion kit. He said Wilson, a defendant, at that time identified himself as an agent of Production Engineering and Manufacturing Co., the other defendant firm.

He testified Wilson showed him drawings of parts for the kit and he selected one that he said his firm was capable of manufacturing. Huff then testified that Wilson told him that the engineering and manufacturing firm would furnish services to him as a contractor and asked if he, Huff, would be willing to pay a commission.

Later, Huff said, he again talked to Wilson and at this time he bid $57.75 a hundred for the work he would perform on the firing pin mechanism. It was then, Huff testified, that Wilson told him that the commission for the services performed would be paid to Contractor Sales & Engineering Co. Less than $1000 was paid on the commission basis but the exact amount, Huff said, he could not recall. He said it was about 10 per cent of the contract.

Huff recited several services which he said the company received for the commission. In later contracts, after talks with Charles G. Emerling, the other defendant, the commission fee was eliminated, Huff said.

Arthur W. Altwater, former president of Western Supplies Co., testified briefly, saying that all negotiations were handled by Huff. He said he never talked with Emerling or Wilson about the work or contract.

Jack Steuby, president of Excelsior Machine Co., a firm that also had a sub-contract on the firing pin operation, told the court that Wilson had asked him if he was willing to pay a commission on some of the work.

He said he was and that it was customary to pay a commission or brokerage fee for getting work. He said he was billed for the commission by K. Stanley & Co. of Wichita, Kan. This he paid, he said.

The check was entered as evidence in the trial and was made out for $980.

Kills Father, 79, Over Romance.

KARASUYAMA, Japan, Jan. 19 (AP). — Police said farmer Noboru Suzuki, jailed on a murder charge, confessed today that he had beaten to death his 79-year-old father "because he had a girl friend my age and kept seeing her on the sly."

MEACHAM PARK CLEAN-UP URGED BY HEALTH CHIEF

A community-wide cleanup program is needed in Meacham Park, an unincorporated area in which approximately 1500 persons live in southern St. Louis county, Health Commissioner Herbert R. Domke reported to the County Council yesterday.

In a survey requested last September, his findings included the following: 21 per cent of the people are using water not considered safe, 80 per cent dispose of sewage improperly, 74 per cent dispose of garbage improperly, 50 per cent of the buildings are fly-breeding places, and 51 per cent of the buildings and grounds are potential breeding places for mosquitoes.

Dr. Domke suggested appointment of a committee to investigate further and report on the need for legislation to prevent development of blight and provide for rehabilitation of blighted areas.

KUBITSCHKEK SAYS HE IS SUSPICIOUS OF SOVIET OFFER

ROME, Jan. 19 (AP)—President-elect Juscelino Kubitschek of Brazil last night expressed suspicion of the Soviet offer of economic aid to Latin American nations.

Speaking to reporters before a state dinner given in his honor by Italian Premier Antonio Segni, Kubitschek said: "First of all, one must ask oneself why is Soviet Russia making this particular offer at this particular time and for what particular reason. We know from past experience that Russia never gives anything without trying to take at least twice as much in return."

The President-elect, who takes office Jan. 31, indicated Brazil would not accept Russian aid at this time.

Pope Pius XII received Kubitschek today in a half-hour private audience.

$200,000 GOAL FOR MISSOURI G.O.P. DINNERS

Thousands of Missouri Republicans will participate in a state-wide series of "Salute to Eisenhower" fund-raising dinners tomorrow night, which are expected to net about $200,000 to help finance the party's national, state and local campaigns.

A $100-a-plate dinner will be held in St. Louis, beginning at 7 p.m., in the Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson's Gold Room. The principal address will be given by Harold E. Stassen, special assistant to the President on disarmament matters.

A total of 53 other G.O.P. dinners will be held elsewhere in Missouri, as part of the nation-wide series of "Salute to Eisenhower" meetings. A $100-a-plate dinner will also be held in Kansas City. At other cities in the state the dinners will cost $10 a plate, except at Joplin, where the diners will pay $20 a plate.

A feature of all the meetings will be a radio and television address by President Eisenhower, who will be observing the third anniversary of his inauguration. The President's talk will be carried to the St. Louis and Kansas City dinners by closed circuit TV, and to the other meetings in the state by radio.

Arthur K. Atkinson, co-chairman of the Republican State Finance Committee and general chairman of the dinners, reported there has been a heavy demand for tickets to the St. Louis gathering. He attributed this to the fact that Mr. Eisenhower will address the meeting by television.

It was announced that if all available space is taken in the Gold Room, other space will be provided in adjoining meeting rooms at the hotel.

Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts will address the Kansas City dinner. United States Representative Robert Wilson of California will speak at the Joplin dinner, and Representative John H. Rhodes of Arizona will be the speaker at Springfield.

AEC HOLDS FIRST IN SERIES OF ATOMIC TESTS IN NEVADA

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 19 (AP)—The first in a series of Atomic Energy Commission tests was conducted yesterday. It was presumed a small atomic device was detonated, but the AEC declined to disclose the nature of the explosion. No atomic cloud was visible in Las Vegas, 75 miles southeast.

The AEC announcement said only that the "test resulted in a detonation of low explosive force, creating a small low altitude cloud bearing minute amounts of radioactive debris. No offset radiological problems are expected."

The tests have been delayed several times because of weather. The AEC is undertaking a series of safety experiments to determine the sensitivity of atomic weapons and experimental devices to accidents during storage or handling.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL PRESIDENT CALLS RAILROADS 'SHACKLED'

The American public is wasting "billions of dollars every year in transportation costs" because the nation's railroads are "shackled in their efforts to produce economical transportation," says A. Johnston, president of the Illinois Central Railroad, said last night.

In a speech to the southern division of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association at the Missouri Athletic Club, Johnston asserted that transportation law "has fallen hopelessly behind the times" and that government regulation "is based on horse-and-buggy-day conditions."

"All too often," he said, "the railroads have their hands tied when it comes to changing the sales price of their services. This is true not only when they seek to raise their price, but also when they seek to lower it."

ALUMINUM INDUSTRY PLANS OUTLAY OF ANOTHER BILLION

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP)—The aluminum industry, which has spent more than a billion dollars in the past decade in plant expansion, will match that figure in the next, says Robert B. McKee, vice president of the Aluminum Company of America.

McKee told the National Metal Working Association convention that business will continue good for the next 10 years. He based his forecast on both population growth and the creation of new industries.

"Our architectural department wants to build an all-aluminum house," he said. "While this, at present, may not be practical, it certainly could lead to very interesting developments."

DULLES TO ADDRESS A.P.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will be the speaker at the luncheon attending the annual meeting of members of the Associated Press April 23.

Announcement of the Secretary's acceptance of an invitation from the A. P. board of directors was made today by Robert McLean, A. P. president and publisher of the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Cart Drivers Assail Truckers.

SEOUL, Jan. 19 (UP)—Four thousand horse and ox cart drivers protested yesterday that the horseless carriage is driving them out of business. The drivers, members of the Cart Workers Union, complained that trucks are hauling so much cargo they cannot earn enough money to support their families.

FUNCTION OF OVER-COUNTER MARKET

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP).

FORD stock got its first ride in the over-the-counter market. Trading there started, in fact, before any of the stock was actually handed out to investors. The stock was "bought" and "sold" on a "when-issued" basis.

Sam Dawson

The over-the-counter securities market is much larger than all the nation's formal stock exchanges together. And it extends all over the country. Most of the trading is done over the telephone.

Ford stock may not be listed on the New York Stock Exchange until around March 1. But from now until then it will be traded on the over-the-counter market and this trading will set its market value—as distinct from the official value of $64.50 set by the underwriters of the 10,200,000-share issue.

OVER-THE-COUNTER MARKET differs in many ways from the formal exchanges. It is policed by the National Association of Securities Dealers, with around 3500 members who are securities dealers and investment banking firms. Many of them are underwriters of the Ford stock issue. Most of the trading is in stock not listed on the exchanges, for various reasons. One may be that the stock is closely held—as was Ford stock by the Ford family. Another is that many banks, trust companies and insurance firms dislike the publicity that would attend fluctuations in the price of their stocks if they listed them on the exchanges. Still another is that many stock issues are too small to be listed in the big exchanges.

ONE BIG SEGMENT OF THE OVER-THE-COUNTER trading is in Government securities, and the trend in yields which this trading sets is closely watched in the financial world as a sign of which way interest rates in general may be heading. Dealers in this over-the-counter market handle from 70,000 to 100,000 different issues of securities. By comparison, the formal exchanges list a total of around 3000 security issues. Over-the-counter dealers must keep a record of all transactions—customer's name, time and date of the deal, and the name, number and price of the securities. These records are held for at least two years, under association rules. Over-the-counter dealers may buy and sell for others, just as stock brokers do on the exchange. But most of the deals are between houses buying and selling for their own account.

ON THE STOCK EXCHANGES BROKERS openly quote their bids and asking prices, and the market takes on something of the flavor of an auction. On the over-the-counter market dealers seek each other out, mostly by phone, and negotiate the most favorable price they can. This market is often used for secondary distribution of large blocks of stocks listed on the exchanges. The blocks may be too large to unload all at once on the exchanges without upsetting the market. But investment trusts or executors of estates may desire quick liquidation, so they turn to the over-the-counter market. Another function—and the one it is now performing in the case of the Ford stock—is to ease the distribution of new issues. It is presumed that by the time the Ford stock makes its bow on the big board, a fair idea of its going price will have been pounded out in the give and take of the over-the-counter market.

Administration Soil Bank Draws Opposition of Farm Bureau And National Farmers Union

Each Group Presents Own Plan — Two Senators Assail Provision for Surplus Sales—One Charges Effort to 'Dump' at Home.

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR

The New York Times News Service
Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S soil bank plan to aid farmers drew opposition yesterday from two major farm organizations. The National Farmers Union and the American Farm Bureau Federation supported the principle of raising farm income through a soil bank, but presented their own plans to the Senate Agriculture Committee to achieve a reduction in surplus-producing farm land.

At the same time, two Senators on the committee attacked an administration proposal that they contended was not previously disclosed.

Senators Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, and Milton R. Young (Rep.), North Dakota, cited a section in the administration's bill that would permit the Government to sell surplus stocks of cotton, corn, wheat and rice without regard to sales price limitations now in federal law.

This provision, they contended, would create "havoc" in commodity markets and drive farm prices even lower. Humphrey accused the administration of seeking to "dump at home" government-owned surpluses.

Administration Plan. The provision appeared in the acreage reserve phase of the bill introduced in the Senate Tuesday. Under this reserve, farmers would be paid in cash or kind through negotiable certificates for voluntarily cutting acreage already allotted to the four crops under federal controls. The administration hopes to achieve as much as a 30 per cent reduction in land planted to the four big surplus crops.

This reduction, it said, would create room in markets for surpluses now held by the government. It asked that authority be granted to sell a quantity of the surplus at market prices "equal in sales value to the cost of redeeming certificates in cash."

Such sales, the bill said, would be made in such a manner as to minimize any adverse effect on market prices.

Young noted an adverse effect on commodity markets Tuesday as a result of disclosure of the provision. He said he would withdraw his name as a co-sponsor of the administration's bill "if this paragraph isn't deleted." He said he agreed to sponsor the measure with six other G.O.P. members of the Senate committee with the understanding he was not committed to the bill's precise terms.

Present law prohibits the sale of government-owned stocks at less than 5 per cent above the federal price support level, plus carrying charges. Humphrey contended that elimination of this provision would mean "farmers can close up shop right now" because domestic market prices would drop even lower than now and the Government would be in direct competition with farmers.

Farmers' Union Proposal. James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, urged that the administration's acreage reserve plan be dropped and that the second phase of the soil bank, a long-range conservation reserve, be expanded to a $1,500,000,000 yearly program.

He said this would be $100,000,000 less in government spending but "three times as effective in raising farm family net income." The acreage reserve for cotton, wheat, corn and rice, he said, was "nothing more than a wheel-spinning exercise in futility" because it would mean sales of government surplus stocks at bargain prices without helping farm income.

He proposed that surplus products be placed in "a national safety reserve completely insulated from any effect upon prices in the market." This "safety reserve," he said, would considering the matter and coming to the conclusion that the export permit should be cancelled.

Bowie Row Shows Honesty Isn't Always Best Policy in Capital

Nominee for State Department Post Spoke Mind on China, Other Issues, Angered G.O.P. Conservatives.

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

WASHINGTON.

THE CASE of Robert Bowie, chief of the State Department's policy planning staff, suggests rather clearly that honesty is not always the best policy these days in Washington.

Bowie has been nominated as an assistant secretary of state, but his nomination seems to be running into trouble. Indeed, Senators William Knowland and Styles Bridges already have served notice on the State Department that they mean to put Bowie through the hoops when his nomination comes up for Senate approval.

As a Republican on the powerful Appropriations Committee, Knowland and Bridges are in a position to carry out this threat. Bowie's "sin," then, has been that he has been guilty of "associating" with Owen Lattimore. In fact, Bowie has seen Lattimore once, when Lattimore long ago addressed an impeccably conservative discussion group of which Bowie was then a member. When Thurston Morton, Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional relations, explained this to Knowland and Bridges, the charge of guilt by association was dropped. But it was never more than icing on the cake.

The real reason for the resentment against Bowie, the conservative Republican is quite different. Bowie is held to have favored recognizing Red China, or at least admitting Communist China into the United Nations. More generally, he is held guilty of New Dealish, or Acheson-like, foreign policy views.

To understand why Bowie's nomination is headed for so much trouble, it is necessary to understand the nature of his conservative discussion group of which Bowie was then a member. Stevenson Trip West Is Aimed At Kefauver 1952 Candidate Faces Delicate Job on Road in California.

By DORIS FLEESON
WASHINGTON.

ALAI STEVENSON will go west next week for a brief holiday in Arizona to be followed by a full week's campaigning in California. After another short rest with friends near San Diego he will return by the northern route with stops in Portland, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

The journey so far in advance of the June presidential preference primary in California is his tacit acknowledgment of the threat Senator Kefauver poses. Both men will be running in California as hard as they can; both have organizations already set up and collecting funds.

A defeat by Kefauver in the second most populous state would do massive damage to the Stevenson candidacy, perhaps end it. Both are claiming the state and the pattern runs true to form. The organization and party leaders are for Stevenson and Kefauver is playing for the underdog vote of the rank and file.

Stevenson's problem is to speak with weight and importance while being careful not to trespass against the party's line as it is being developed in Congress. While he is on the road, for example, congressional leaders are planning to open up major lines of attack on foreign policy and the state of U. S. defenses. Senator George, chairman of Senate Foreign Relations, will tee off on Secretary of State Dulles. Senator Russell, chairman of Armed Services, plans to give Gen. Ridgway, former Army chief of staff, opportunity to voice his complaints in public.

Another Stevenson problem in California will be to avoid entanglement in a brick fight building for the senatorial nomination to run against the Republican incumbent, Senator Kuchel.

Early as it is the Stevenson journey may be a telling if not major development of the campaign.

Peron Asserts His Trouble Was With Clergy, Not Church

Unrepentant Despite Excommunication, Former Argentine President Attacks Priests in Book.

By JOSEPH NEWMAN

The New York Herald Tribune-Panama Special Radio
PANAMA CITY, Jan. 19.

FORMER President Juan D. Peron of Argentina, who was excommunicated by the Vatican, is unrepentant. He is still determined to introduce divorce and rights for illegitimate children in Argentina.

In his forthcoming book, "Might Is the Right of Beasts," he attacks the Roman Catholic clergy for breaking with him on these issues.

However, from the Roman Catholic viewpoint, Peron's ideas are as dangerous and unacceptable as were those of Martin Luther.

The only thing surprising is that Peron should appear surprised by the attitude of the Catholic Church.

I asked Peron if he did not consider his break with the church to have been the greatest single mistake he could have committed in a country overwhelmingly Catholic. He shrugged and said, "My trouble was with the clergy and not the church."

"How do you draw the line between them?" I asked. "Ah, that's the trouble," he replied.

Peron in his book said there are 300,000 couples living in sin in Argentina because they cannot get divorces. The result is an ever-growing number of illegitimate children. He gave no estimate of the number of these children in his book. Asked to guess, he said, "several million."

"It's inhuman and cruel," he wrote, "to place blame and stigma on these innocent children" by branding them illegitimate and denying them legal rights.

To correct this situation and its cause, Peron said he introduced legislation which would legitimize these children and sanction divorce. Implementation of these laws was blocked by the September revolution.

In view of the size of the problem, the still-born legislation must continue to make Peron appealing to a large number in Argentina and must represent a challenge to the present government.

In writing about these proposed modern reforms he fitted them into his doctrine and philosophy of "justicialismo" or "Peronismo," allegedly dedicated to advancing the interests of the working masses.

He upheld them and replied to the Catholic clergy in these terms:

"Justicialismo is a Christian movement which relies not so much on dogma as on doctrine. We think dogma is the work of men while doctrine is the work of God. Therefore, we practice doctrine even when rites do not interest us as much as some would wish."

"We are Christians. We do not act as if we were Christians. We are Christians in our works and in our acts. We try to be near God without being concerned about those who exploit His Holy Name."

Peron also fitted his late wife, Eva, into his doctrine and his struggle against the church. "Eva Peron," he wrote, "was accused and slandered by Argentine priests, performed more Christian works in one day than all the priests of my country in their entire life. . . that is why men and women of the people fought to defend the busts of Eva Peron which priests ordered the youths of the Catholic Action movement and of their schools to destroy."

"Eva Peron represented a danger to them because humble people raised altars and lit candles to her. They did not do that for the priests."

Peron said he got along well with clergymen of all faiths except the Catholic. He cited the Protestants, Jews, Greek Orthodox and Russian Orthodox.

Commenting verbally on this subject, Peron said he once proposed to allow Protestant and Jewish clergymen to minister to those of Protestant and Jewish faith in Argentina's armed forces but the Catholic clergy objected vigorously and insisted on maintaining their exclusive position.

Peron Must Act Soon If He Wants to Stay in Panama. PANAMA CITY, Jan. 19 (UP)—Juan D. Peron will have to take steps toward establishing permanent residence if he wants to remain in this country after Feb. 6.

The Foreign Office said today his three-month tourist visa expires in 18 days. After that, he must have a one-year residence permit—usually a preliminary to permanent residence.

CANADA REFUSES TO CANCEL EGYPT'S ORDER FOR PLANES

OTTAWA, Jan. 19 (AP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent refused yesterday an opposition demand that Canada cancel an Egyptian order for 15 Harvard training planes of World War II manufacture.

Three of the planes already are on their way to Egypt. Foreign Secretary Lester B. Pearson said Tuesday that only an outbreak of hostilities in the Middle East would prevent fulfillment of the order.

Alistair Stewart, a member of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, a socialist party, asked in the House of Commons if "in view of the inflamed situation in the Middle East will the Prime Minister cancel the export permits to send additional planes to Egypt?"

St. Laurent said in reply: "No consideration has been given to the question of canceling the export permit for these training planes and I know of no reason for recon-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Mr. Harris on TV

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 Well, Kansas City has gained another stride on St. Louis and, as its intention, will soon be the number one city in Missouri.

I refer to such things as the comic opera that took place in the chambers of the Board of Aldermen last Friday. The utterly ridiculous display by the Aldermen makes honest citizens turn in disgust. Were the matter not so serious, one could laugh at this travesty. Did the show not have its clown?

Alderman Harris made his "entrance" five minutes after the Mayor had begun his speech—just another display of his "good taste." His ridiculous consciousness of the television cameras as he continually leaped to his feet at the times when the camera might be pointed his way was laughable.

The Mayor is doing a conscientious, nonpolitical job of trying to lift this backward city to the position it should hold. Just why should publicly-minded ward heelers like Harris be continued in office and hinder the efforts of progressive-minded men?

NOT AMUSED BUT DISGUSTED.

The Sun Shines Again

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 Thanks for publishing the dispatch from Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa Tribune. It was a splendid wind-up of his trip around the world.

His wide-ranging grasp of the essentials in world affairs and the courage displayed in stating his conclusions are unusual. That that should come out of Oklahoma is good evidence that the blighting smog of McCarthyism has lost much of its power to stifle and corrupt. The sun shines again.

OTTO PAULS.

Detached and Disinterested

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 Many Republican Congressmen and Administration leaders, in their anxiety to have President Eisenhower run again, have spoken of taking measures to lighten the President's work load.

Prior to his illness, President Eisenhower spent more time away from Washington than any other President in recent memory.

However, it wasn't what went on when the President was away from Washington that was disturbing but what went on while he was there! Mr. Brownell's accusations against former President Truman, Mr. Nixon's attacks on the Democrats in the 1954 election campaigns, the Ladejinsky firing, the book-burning episode, Adolphe Wenzell's dual role in the Dixon-Yates deal, and the publication of the Yalta papers all took place—so we have been told—without the President's knowledge.

In some of these matters, President Eisenhower showed a startling degree of detachment and disinterest. And because his leadership was not there, the vacuum was quickly filled by Administration figures whose actions were guided by selfish and narrow interests.

While it may be possible to eliminate some of the unnecessary paper work and social functions, most of the burdens and responsibilities will remain because they simply go with the job of being President.

If the job is made easier for the President, what kind of leadership and responsibilities can he be expected to assume in light of his record prior to his illness?

Stigma Over All

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 This recent unfortunate real estate scandal stigmatizes the entire business and everyone connected with it.

At this time anyone can get into the brokerage or selling end of real estate, regardless of his financial standing.

Perhaps a substantial bond for broker and a lesser bond for sales personnel, all under state jurisdiction, would be the first logical step to safeguard the public interest in some degree.

Inconveniencing the State

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 Please allow me to reply to Reader R. G. Smith who complains about the state license bureau on Big Bend being closed early on Dec. 23.

I have no connection whatever with this bureau nor have I ever had. But for 10 years previous to my present employment I worked in a downtown bank, dealing with the public.

Believe me, R. G. Smith, handling the public is no fun. I would be willing if I were a gambling man to bet that of the 20 people who were turned away because the office was shut down, 15 had waited till the last day or nearly the last day to renew or obtain new licenses.

Further, I'll hazard a guess that a goodly portion of these people had plenty of free time, including free time at the moment that R. G. Smith is complaining of.

THOMAS KISKE.

'Wonderful Pictures'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
 At our house we all enjoy your wonderful pictures of the "Dog of the Week" so much that I thought I would write and let you know your photographer—Lester Link—is to be complimented on the beautiful studies he makes of the animals. Thanks for running the series.

On the Other Foot

What is the Democratic majority in the Senate going to do about the excesses of the Internal Security Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Eastland of Mississippi? This question is entirely in order.

When the Republicans controlled the Senate in 1953 and 1954, they were severely criticized because they were so reluctant to come to grips with the ugly, messy issue of McCarthyism. For many months Republican leaders looked the other way while the Wisconsin demagogue brought the Senate into disrepute at home and abroad by misuse of his authority as chairman of the Permanent Investigating Subcommittee.

Now the shoe is on the other foot. The Democrats control the Senate. They have the committee majorities. Their senior members hold the chairmanships. Thus James O. Eastland, a Senator these last 13 years, is chairman of the subcommittee whose legal responsibility it is to investigate the administration of the Internal Security Act and other security laws.

This is the subcommittee which has revived memories of McCarthyism by the shocking way it has attempted to relate The New York Times to international Communism. By concentrating on a few employees and former employees of The Times—in a total organization of more than 4000—the Eastland subcommittee presented a wholly distorted picture.

As a consequence The Times, in one of the strongest editorials it has ever printed, sounded the keynote of a free press to which many other newspapers immediately rallied. Strangely enough, however, several days passed before any member of the Senate took the floor to defend the press against this insidious attack. And then the defender was not one of the senior members, but a freshman Senator, Richard L. Neuberger, with hardly more than a year of service.

In a strong speech, the Oregon Democrat said: Under the open-book charges now in vogue, what is to prevent a committee which is bigoted against a certain church or religion from looking for Communism in that particular church? Is this not carte blanche for committees of varying views to investigate trade unions, banks, colleges, libraries, telephone exchanges, fish hatcheries, schools or temperance groups—all in the name of ferreting out Communism?

What if some other committee decided to probe alleged disloyalty on the staffs of certain newspapers which were suggesting opposition to a unanimous verdict of the United States Supreme Court?

Whatever faults it may have—and I believe they are many—the American press has a high degree of loyalty to freedom and liberty. Its faults are not a matter for congressional inquiry, but are something to be judged by public opinion and to be corrected by the press itself, from within.

So far as we know only Senator Lehman of New York associated himself promptly with this sound speech. Previously Senator Hennings of Missouri, also a Democrat, had worked to hold down the excesses of the subcommittee.

If the Eastland inquisition continues the Senate will have to face it just as the Senate, in the end, had to face the McCarthy obscenities. Here are the members of the parent Judiciary Committee. The primary responsibility is on them. But particularly it is on the starred members who constitute the subcommittee.

Why It's Pop

Soda pop is called pop instead of soda something else because when the first crude stopper was withdrawn the gas in the neck of the bottle was released and went "pop!" So we are informed by engineers of the Crown Cork and Seal Co. That was before the first really practical bottle crown was invented 63 years ago.

Why champagne, which makes an even louder pop and continues to do so to this day, was not also named pop, or perhaps, in view of its louder noise, POP, the engineers do not say. Nor do they tell us why lemon pop is referred to in England as lemon squash. We do not very much imagine that when the earliest corks were pulled in England they went "squash!" It is possibly only a tribute to British ingenuity that the word was thought up without any provocation whatever.

Occasionally we have heard bottles from which the cork has been removed go "whuff!" or "whiff!" We are glad these were not the sounds heard by early American bottle openers. Drinking anything that had gone "whiff!" would make us feel that we had perhaps become semi-explosive ourselves, while "whuff!" would make one feel uncomfortably full.

And we do not even care to think about whiff, whuff or even squash going the weasel.

Deadlock in Geneva

The Geneva ambassadorial talks between our Government and Communist China have been at a dead end so long that some Americans may have almost forgotten they were still going on. Now the Chinese representative breaks the secrecy to reveal the proposals made by both sides since last October. It seems evident that the stalemate, which centers around Formosa, is as complete as ever.

The Chinese are ready to renounce the use or threat of force, as so insistently urged by the United States, but only provided Secretary Dulles will enter into negotiations at the foreign-minister level for a settlement of the Formosa question. Mr. Dulles wants no part of such negotiations. Our side insists that the Chinese renounce the use or threat of force without any promise of negotiations. The Chinese refuse that kind of deal.

To be perfectly frank, there is something incongruous about our State Department insisting so strenuously on a Chinese renunciation of the threat of force at the very time Secretary Dulles has been publicly boasting about his own threats of force in Korea, Formosa and Indochina. Perhaps that is why the Chinese have broken the secrecy. Certainly they have been given a wide-open propaganda opportunity, and it would not be like them to ignore it.

It would be nice, of course, if the Chinese would cave in and accept American terms in this dispute, but it has long been clear that the only possible solution is some form of compromise. We cannot afford to turn over Formosa as a military base to China. China cannot afford to acquiesce in our possession of it as a military base.

Neutralization, demilitarization, and United Nations control would be the ideal solution. But it is impossible so long as Peiping refuses to recognize Chiang in Formosa, and Washington refuses to recognize Peiping. This may be one of those controversies which only time can end. Meanwhile the whole world must hope that Peiping, though declining to renounce force on paper, will yet refrain from using it in fact. With Chiang back on the "leash," that should secure a day-to-day uneasy peace in the Formosa straits.

The Penal System's Bond Needs

We regret to note that, with only five days remaining before the state bond issue election, Gov. Donnelly has apparently decided not to give the voters any idea of his program for spending the $75,000,000 which they are asked to authorize. His budget staff is working on the program, but it now appears that the people will find out what it is only after they vote the bonds, if they do.

Much as we dislike this procedure, and strongly as we feel it should not become a precedent, we believe the bond issue should be approved. The total of acute building needs in Missouri institutions far outruns $75,000,000, and any delay in meeting these needs is inadvisable.

The State Department of Corrections says it can completely modernize the penal system with $20,508,000 of bond issue funds, 65 per cent of which would go for construction of a new medium-security institution. The penitentiary now houses some 3400 inmates, many of whom should be material for rehabilitation.

But how much rehabilitation is possible in an institution in which boys of 16 years are herded in with hardened criminals and confirmed repeaters? When the Governor's survey committee inspected the penitentiary in November 1954 it discovered 190 youths between 16 and 20 years of age and 128 men between 60 and 94 years of age. A 15-year-old girl was confined in the women's prison.

The Governor's group urged that a medium-security institution be given priority attention. This would help ease the pressure for space in the ancient and crowded main penitentiary and provide a place where men who wanted to help themselves would have an opportunity to do so.

Director of Corrections Carter has submitted two alternate plans for prison reconstruction. But under neither would the medium-security institution be built, and that makes them unacceptable. If Missouri really means to move out of the dark ages of penal administration it simply must build this facility.

Mr. Carter's alternate proposals were drawn on the assumption that the department's requests may get sidetracked in the Legislature, which will decide how the bonds will be spent. Convicts do not enjoy the franchise. In competition for shares of the bond issue spokesmen for the educational and eleemosynary institutions are likely to speak in more powerful tones.

In any event unless the bond issue is approved next Tuesday—as it certainly deserves to be—all the plans and all the talk about modernization will be meaningless.

About Some Promises

What is an Alderman's promise worth? At least seven of the 14 St. Louisians who were elected to the Board of Aldermen last spring made unequivocal public promises that they would support Mayor Tucker's call for charter freeholders.

This group included five Democrats and two Republicans. The Republicans, Fred W. Haag of the Twelfth Ward and William A. Stolar, Twenty-eighth, kept their word. They voted Yes on the Mayor's bill, which suffered a 20-to-7 trouncing. And what about the five Democrats?

One of them, Clinton Watson, Sixteenth Ward, was absent, but the four others acted as if they had made no promises last spring. To a man, they voted No. They are Archie Blaine, Sixth Ward; James E. Gelsler, Tenth; Joseph Kavanaugh, Fourteenth; and Wayman F. Smith Jr., Eighteenth.

A Narrow Escape in Mid-Air

It must have been one of the most terrifying experiences that ever befell passengers and crew of an airliner. Twenty-two persons—and possibly many more—could have met death in a split second during most of the three-hour flight. The radio, lights and navigation instruments on the Boston-to-New York airliner had failed five minutes after takeoff and the plane was groping through snow, fog and black of night on an uncertain and perilous course.

Pilot Robert I. Francis had only his magnetic compass, a flashlight and 20 years of flying experience to help him out of a dire emergency. He turned out of the traffic lane where collision danger was high and tried to fly parallel to his standard course and over the coastline where lights below might guide him if he could see them. Flying low, he finally sighted the famous landmark, Montauk Point, on the eastern tip of Long Island. That gave him his bearings and he headed for La Guardia field as fortunately—the skies cleared. He landed safely.

Seldom does an airliner pilot run into such a desperate situation and emerge with no lives lost. In this instance there might have been a collision of airliners with the falling wreckage bringing death to people below. Pilot Francis deserves a hearty salute for his skill and courage and for that bit of luck when he sighted Montauk. Many happy landings to him!

No Road Installment Plan

Americans can just about take it for granted that any new federal highway program will not be based on the installment plan. Congress itself turned away from the borrowing idea last year. President Eisenhower did not repeat his highway bond proposal this year. And now two important private organizations have endorsed the principle of pay-as-you-go road building.

One of these organizations is the American Automobile Association, a group which has not always supported higher motor fuel taxes. But the A.A.A. now suggests increasing the federal gasoline tax from 2 cents to 2½ cents a gallon, plus higher taxes on diesel fuel, tires and some accessories—particularly for trucks.

A few days earlier the Committee for Economic Development, a private business organization, proposed a 1-cent gas tax increase.

While these two propositions differ in detail, both are founded on an attempt to pay for roads as they are built and used, rather than putting off the road debt for future generations of taxpayers. Both organizations, in fact, oppose the Administration bond idea, and for sound fiscal reasons. Under that plan, about 57 cents on every dollar raised through bonds would have been spent for interest, not for roads.

Highway users—motorists and truckers especially—will not enjoy paying higher taxes for new roads. But the roads have to be paid for, and a pay-as-you-go plan represents both the fairest and, in the long run, the least expensive way to build the highways which America needs.

A fellow who rides our bus insists that Foster is a misprint. He claims it is Foster and that is just the way Secretary of State Dulles is going from one bloop to the next.

HAZARDOUS INTERLUDE

The Mirror
 Public Opinion

Utility executive attacks bill to exempt most gas producers from federal rate regulation; says it would mean heavy price increases for consumers; editorial says oil companies lobbying for bill fear this is their last chance if Mr. Eisenhower does not run again.

From The Denver Post

The price of natural gas to residential consumers will increase 35 per cent over 1953 average prices if the Harris-Fulbright bill is passed by the United States Senate.

That opinion comes not from any enemy of free private enterprise but from one of the best-posted men in the gas business, Arthur K. Lee, president of United Cities Utilities Co., which, through a string of subsidiaries, pipes and distributes gas for many cities in Illinois, Wisconsin, Tennessee, the Carolinas and Georgia.

According to Mr. Lee, the field price of natural gas which averaged 9.2 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf) in 1953 and has already risen to 17 cents or more in some localities will go to 25 cents within a short time if the Harris-Fulbright bill should become law.

Since the average householder consumer paid 7.4 cents per mcf for gas in 1953, it would be logical to believe an increase from 9.2 to 25 cents in the field price would add only 15.8 cents to the bill of the ultimate user.

But, Mr. Lee points out, the effect of an increase of 25 cents in the field price would not be as simple as that. A 25-cent price at the well would cause most industries that use natural gas on an interruptible basis to switch to cheaper fuels, oil or coal.

Industrial customers paid an average of 21 cents per mcf for interruptible gas in 1953. A 25-cent field price plus pipeline transportation charges would make natural gas too expensive for industrial users. Hence, pipeline companies would lose large sales revenues which would have to be made up by additional price increases to residential consumers.

Mr. Lee concludes that passage of the Harris-Fulbright bill would raise the average price of gas to householders from 7.4 cents in 1953, to slightly more than $1.04—or 35 per cent.

The Harris-Fulbright bill would put producers of natural gas beyond effective control by the Federal Power Commission. For the last year and a half FPC control has been pretty much of a joke even under existing law. Gas prices have been rising rapidly all over the country. Colorado consumers have not been immune. Mr. Lee cites the case of one producing company which is claiming the right to make a profit of $297,000,000 on a gas field investment of $3,000,000 under one FPC decision. He estimates a 25-cent field price for gas would add $9,700,000,000 to the value of the known reserves held by 29 large oil companies.

No wonder the oil industry is spending $1,500,000 in propaganda for the Harris-Fulbright bill and has enlisted its employees to flood newspapers and Congressmen with letters favorable to the bill.

Mr. Lee does not want to abandon the principle that gas prices (and profits) should be fair and reasonable. But authority of the Harris-Fulbright bill admittedly and deliberately avoided the use of the word "fair"—or its equivalent, "just."

Authority to fix "fair" or "just" prices carries with it an obligation to determine if profits are excessive. The Harris-Fulbright bill would, without regard for the fairness of profits, allow prices to go as high as consumers would be willing to pay before junking their gas stoves and furnaces in favor of oil or coal burning equipment.

Mr. Lee has suggested that prices prevailing on June 7, 1954, be considered "fair and reasonable" and that they be adopted for regulatory purposes subject to any cost increases that have occurred since that time. But advocates of the Harris-Fulbright bill have set their sights on extra billions in profits and will not go along with Mr. Lee.

The Harris-Fulbright bill barely passed the House in the dying days of the last session. It is now before the Senate. Normally a bill so damaging to consumers would not have much chance for adoption in an election year.

But, according to The Wall Street Journal, gas producers, most of whom are oil companies, are afraid that if Mr. Eisenhower does not run for re-election 1956 may be their only chance to get the bill approved. So, they will push for enactment even at the risk of embarrassing many Senators and the Republican Administration.

If the bill should pass there can be but little doubt that gas prices and "giveaway" will become major issues when next November rolls around no matter who the candidates may be.

A Few Rays of Economy

From The Milwaukee Journal

Now that the season of merrymaking and gift giving is past, and the bills are coming due, and the April 15 tax deadline is not so far around the corner, in this dark hour comes another cheerful little list of Uncle Sam's indirect gifts to taxpayers.

When you fork over your share of his 60 billion dollars, it will be some comfort to know that scores of millions in needless government costs have been chopped off here and there. Tax Foundation, Inc., has jotted down some of them as follows:

An Air Force survey revealed that enlisted men weren't wearing their winter "longies." So the million-dollar-a-year item is being dropped from the regular clothing issue.

During 1955 the General Services Administration (GSA) accomplished a 12½ per cent reduction in government use of leased property, knocking eight million dollars annually off the rent bill.

In a recent seven month period federal employees won $1,500,000 in prizes for economy ideas that saved $40,000,000. GSA found a new floor waxing technique that gives better results and saves more than half the old cost of this housekeeping job. The Treasury broke a long habit of buying dry currency paper, which had to be moistened before printing. Buying pre-moistened paper now saves $360,000 a year.

Civil defense proposed to buy four million three hundred thousand dollars worth of blankets. GSA found 540,000 blankets already on hand, in Navy stocks and Veterans' hospitals, and transferred them. Similar swaps in 1954 involved property originally costing $37,500,000.

Navy dentists have been using two hundred and fifty million gallons of water a year, most of it going down the drain unused, for lack of control valves—the taps in rinse basins just run all day. By putting a shut-off at each chair, the Navy will save $160,000 a year, just like that.

Feel better now?

The Mail Went Through!

SADDLES AND SPURS, by Mary Lund Settle and Raymond W. Settle. (Stackpole, 217 pgs., $3.75.)

It was a great day—April 3, 1860. At St. Joseph, Mo., a large crowd was gathered in front of the post office as a leather pommey was thrown over the saddle on a fleet little horse—a young man leaped on the animal and dashed toward the West. At almost the exact hour, in the boom mining town of San Francisco, the pony express started eastward. The flutter of hoofs, the wave of the rider's hand as he went sweeping by—and the Pony Express was born!

Perhaps it all started with the influx of the '49ers to the gold fields of California. As the years passed the people in California, isolated three thousand miles from the nation's capital, by a vast territory, much of which was uninhabited, wanted closer contacts and faster communication with the East.

Founded, directed and financed by that great triumvirate of overland freighting magnates—Wm. H. Russell, Alexander D. Majors and Wm. B. Wadsworth—the project required a huge capital, a vast organization of men, horses and material equipment, as well as the blazing of trails and the making of roads where none had been before.

The founders had installed 190 relay stations, manned by 400 employees on the route of nearly two thousand miles across prairie, desert, soaring rivers and mighty mountains. For the service they bought 480 horses, the best obtainable, and had recruited 100 young, lightweight riders of exceptional skill and qualities of courage, loyalty and endurance—a breed that would never let their employers down.

The motto on which these young men staked their lives was "The United States Mail must and will go through!" And go through it did, despite Indian attacks, road agents and the elements. The old mail delivery time by stagecoach of nearly a month was cut to ten days and the service, while short-lived—it lasted only eighteen months—was remarkable for its dependability. The coming of the telegraph, of course, was the swan song of the Pony Express.

The story of the Pony Express as told by Raymond and Mary Settle is vivid and fast moving and the research they have done to supply the historical background, the sketches of the founders, company personnel and riders is thorough. Many heretofore unpublished photographs are included which enhance the book and add to its authenticity.

The Earliest Craft

THE CERAMIC ART OF CHINA AND OTHER COUNTRIES OF THE FAR EAST, by William Boyer Hony. (Stackpole Press, 238 pgs., 192 plates.)

Vessels of clay probably are the earliest craft. They have appeared in all countries and times, but the most beautiful of the potter's craft are considered to be the pots of the Chinese. This impressive volume, the first American edition of a well-known survey of Oriental ceramics, covers the art of the Chinese potter from the earliest known examples to the present day. It includes as well wares from Indochina (Siam and Annam), Korea and Japan.

The author, the Keeper of the Department of Ceramics in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, is concerned less with archaeology and history than with the appreciation of the wares themselves. The book might be thought of as an "Anthology of Pots," as in the author's own words he has "assembled a selection from the whole body of Eastern wares arranged in such a way as to display the various natures of their esthetic appeal, and by comparison and classification to help cultivate an informed and cultivated taste."

The Price We Pay for War

WASHINGTON.

SUBMISSION of the annual budget to Congress by the President, and its publication, give us an opportunity to find out how much of our substance goes to war. This includes the cost of past wars which we still are paying and will pay for many years, and the cost of defense against possible future wars.

The annual sacrifice to Mars is a grim commentary on the state of so-called civilized society in the Twentieth Century. In reviewing it, as has become this reporter's annual custom, no fine moral is offered — only the facts for whatever good their contemplation might produce. Here, then, is the sad story in brief:

Eisenhower.

Sixty-four percent of total expenditures proposed in the 1957 budget for the next fiscal year beginning next July 1 goes for what the budget calls "protection" or, in plain figures, $400,000,000 of the $65,900,000,000 total of the budget.

The Whole Story.

That breaks down into $35,500,000,000 for the Defense Department's military functions; $2,500,000,000 for the mutual security program of military help to our Allies; $1,900,000,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission; $400,000,000 for stockpiling of strategic materials and for defense production expansion, and two billion dollars in related programs, including foreign economic aid to our friends.

But this is not yet the whole story. To those expenditures should be added the funds spent for veterans in compensation, pensions, schooling, hospitalization and such, for which the 1957 fiscal year budget assigns $4,600,000,000. That brings to $47,100,000,000 what might be included in the broad category of the cost of war.

The Good It Could Do.

There also should be included the interest on our public debt, for the bulk of that debt represents war expenditures. The budget carries seven billion dollars for interest on the public debt, and that brings the total war costs to $54,300,000,000.

And that, fellow citizens, is 82 percent of the budget.

What a multitude of school buildings and hospitals and highways we could build with that, and how we could increase Social Security for our growing population of elder citizens to something like adequate amounts.

These are among many needs that could be met even with a portion of the $54,300,000,000. For we of course would never spend as much on such human needs as we do on armies and navies and bombs and missiles.

'PORGY' TROUPE, RAGE OF MOSCOW, GOING TO WARSAW

MOSCOW, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Porgy and Bess troupe rolled out of Moscow by train today for Warsaw after a successful eight-day presentation of the American folk opera before capacity audiences.

A large crowd was at the railway station to bid farewell to the Negro troupe, which took Moscow fans by storm. Leading Soviet artists attended a Ministry of Culture reception for the visitors last night at the Metropol Hotel. Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was present.

The company will open the George Gershwin-Dubose Heyward opera in the Polish capital Jan. 24 and play there about a week.

COLLECTION OF BROMELIADS ON VIEW AT SHAW'S GARDEN

A collection of bromeliads, popularly called "air plants," was on display today for the first time in a natural tropical setting at Shaw's Garden, 2315 Tower Grove avenue. The plants grow on trees, but are non-parasitic, Ladislav Cuk, who is in charge of tropical plants at the garden, explained. Bromeliads obtain their food from the air in the form of dust, water and insects, which the plants transform into nourishment.

Flowers on the bromeliads, of which there are some 1800 known varieties, are of many colors and range from fan to vase shape. Shaw's Garden, which specializes in the plants, has the best collection in the country under glass, Cuk said.

MUSEUM PAYS $5300 FOR 2 ART OBJECTS

13-Century Mesopotamian Miniature Costs $4000, Boucher Drawing $1300.

The City Art Museum's purchase of a thirteenth-century Mesopotamian miniature manuscript leaf for $4000 and a Francois Boucher drawing for $1300 was announced today by Charles Nagel, director of the museum.

Described by the museum as "a work that stands at the beginning of the great pictorial tradition of miniature painting of the East," the manuscript contains on one side a scene with figures and six lines in Arabic script. On the other side are 13 lines in Arabic. The leaf comes from a Mesopotamian edition of "Materia Medica" by Pedanius Dioscorides, Greek medical writer of the first century A.D.

The treatise, comprehensive at the time it was written, concerned the substances used to prepare all kinds of remedies. The manuscript leaf, measuring about nine by 13 inches, is dated 1222.

Copper Processing.

Subject of the bright-hued illustration is the processing of copper. Two physicians in oriental costume are depicted in flat perspective as they tend a boiling cauldron. In the background to the right is a large decorated apothecary's jar.

Colors used are gold, red, blue and scarlet. The illustration is the work of Abdullah Ibn Al-Fazl, Baghdad artist.

This art object, the museum announced, will join "the very distinguished collection of Persian and Indian sixteenth- and seventeenth-century miniature paintings given the museum by Mr. J. Lionberger Davis," St. Louis philanthropist and museum benefactor over a period of many years.

Major part of the manuscript of which the St. Louis museum has bought one leaf is preserved in a library in Istanbul, Turkey. About 30 leaves containing scenes with figures once belonged to a collector who sold them to various other private and public collections.

Other owners of leaves like the museum's include Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, New York; the Louvre Museum, Paris; Harvard University's Fogg Museum, Cambridge, Mass.; New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art; the British Museum, London, and the Freer Art Gallery, Washington, D.C.

Master of the Rococo.

The drawing by Boucher, French master of the rococo, who lived from 1733 to 1770, is in his characteristic light and airy style, marked by rounded, curving composition and nervous, flickering lines.

Entitled "Baptism of Christ," the drawing in brown ink and sepi wash, is oval in format and is believed to have served as a study for the large painting of the same subject in the chapel at Versailles outside Paris.

Christ is shown kneeling on his right knee at a spring, a rustic fence as the baptism is performed by John the Baptist. Above hover four angels, with God the Father at the top of the composition extending His

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, widow of the Secretary of War under President Calvin Coolidge, left the bulk of her $2,490,250 estate to two sons by a former marriage, it was disclosed yesterday with the filing of her will for probate in Washington.

The two sons are Paul M. Smith of West Palm Beach, Fla., and James H. Smith Jr. of Aspen, Colo., an assistant Secretary of the Navy. Mrs. Davis, 67 years old, died last Dec. 27 in Washington.

She was the first woman elected to the Republican National Committee and was founder of the National Women's Republican Club in New York City. She later broke with the G.O. over prohibition and became an active Democrat. Her husband, a former St. Louisan, died in 1945. He had also served as governor-general of the Philippines.

COLLEGE FACULTIES TERMED INADEQUATE

Preparation Insufficient, Numbers Too Small, N.E.A. Finds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—America's colleges, scarcely touched as yet by the World War II baby boom, "are entering the era of expanding enrollment with an inadequately prepared staff," the National Education Association said today.

Aside from a shortage in numbers, the NEA's research division said in a bulletin, "the preparation of the corps of full-time teachers now in service does not indicate a full readiness to serve adequately the present student body."

The bulletin covered findings of a survey of 673 colleges and universities, excluding institutions staffed largely by "dedicated members of a particular religious organization."

The survey was said to have shown that only three in 10 of the college teachers hired in the past two years hold doctor's degrees and only a few more than eight in 10 have master's degrees.

"Most colleges," the report said, "when they cannot find qualified candidates for vacancies, follow the pattern of the elementary and high schools and employ persons not adequately prepared for the job."

Nearly 40 per cent of the colleges reported that they had left some vacancies unfilled for two years, even though they had the money to pay salaries because they could not find qualified persons.

Not only will the college-age population increase steadily for the next 18 years, the report said, but the percentage of this age group attending college is steadily increasing.

Golschmann Has 2 Concerts, 4 Rehearsals in 36 Hours

In Addition, Conductor Will Direct Regular Symphony Programs Tomorrow, Saturday.

Vladimir Golschmann, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, today was in the middle of an unusually strenuous baton-wielding schedule that called for four lengthy rehearsals and two concerts in a period of about 36 hours.

His stint began yesterday at 9:30 a.m. with a rehearsal of the orchestra for its regular concert tomorrow and Saturday at Kiel Auditorium opera house, in which Leslie Parnas, principal violinist, will be soloist. He will play his newly acquired Rosette Goffriller 'cello for the first time.

In the afternoon, Golschmann rehearsed the symphony musicians with the 140-voice Summer High School Choir, in preparation for the performance of Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms," also on the weekend program.

His third rehearsal was last night, with the St. Louis Philharmonic Orchestra, which he will lead as guest conductor in the first half of a concert tonight at the opera house.

Two Concerts Today.
Today, the conductor's schedule called for another workout with the symphony and the Summer choir in the morning, an afternoon concert for high school students, and the Philharmonic program in the evening.

Officials of the Symphony Society pointed out that although the orchestra rehearsal schedule was routine, the presence of the choir and the fact that the Stravinsky work was unfamiliar made Golschmann's job more exacting.

Parnas, who is making arrangements to purchase the Rosette Goffriller 'cello on an installment basis, will be the soloist in Bloch's Hebrew Rhapsody, "Schelomo" (Solomon).

The 24-year-old 'cellist will play the work at concerts at 2 p.m. tomorrow and at 8:40 p.m. on Saturday. His instrument, made in 1698 in Venice by Matteo Goffriller, is valued at $25,000. It is being acquired from Jacques Francals, a New York dealer.

Also on the program are Bach's Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings, with Albert Tipton of the orchestra as flute soloist, and Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn.

The orchestra will give its fourth "pop" concert of the season at 3 p.m. Sunday in the opera house, with 8-year-old Trudi Buxton making another appearance as piano soloist, in the First Movement of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1. Golschmann's rigorous conducting schedule does not, however, include this concert. As is customary in "pop" performances, the orchestra will be led by Harry Farberman, assistant conductor.

MRS. T. M. SAYMAN NAMED ST. LOUIS 'WOMAN OF YEAR'

Mrs. T. M. Sayman has been named "Woman of the Year" for 1955 by the Women's Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis. It was announced today.

The annual award will be given to Mrs. Sayman at a dinner in her honor Feb. 25 at Hotel Kingsway. It is presented yearly to the woman who makes an outstanding contribution to the welfare of the Greater St. Louis area, a spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce said.

Mrs. Sayman has been active in welfare and charitable organizations, including Friends of the School of Nursing at City Hospital, the Bernard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital, the Salvation Army and Bethesda General Hospital.

BRITAIN DEVELOPS POLIO VACCINE, CALLS IT BETTER

LONDON, Jan. 19 (UP)—Britain tonight announced development of a polio vaccine based on American research but "preferable to any made abroad."

Minister of Health Robert H. Turton said tests of the new vaccine have been completed and children under 9 years old will receive it before next summer's polio season starts.

Britain put off use of the American Salk vaccine last summer after reports that some batches of it had caused polio outbreaks.

Turton told a press conference the British vaccine owes its origin to the "brilliant pioneer work" carried out in the United States, but is not quite the same.

"We believe our own vaccine to be preferable to any made in other countries, and it is not proposed to import vaccine abroad," he said.

HEADS OF 3 G.I. SCHOOLS INVOKE 5TH AMENDMENT

All Say They Are Not Reds Now but Refuse to Comment on Affiliation in Past.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—Three operators of vocational training schools for war veterans refused to tell Senate investigators yesterday whether they belonged to the Communist party in the past.

All swore they are not Reds now, but when the question of past affiliations was raised they invoked the protection of the Fifth amendment—the guarantee against compulsory self-incrimination.

The hearing, conducted by the Senate investigations subcommittee, also brought out that under the G.I. training program the Government has paid out more than $3,500,000 to schools allegedly run by Communists at the present time or in the past.

The bumpy-witnesses were M. Michael Freeland, part owner of the Radio and Television Technical School at Allentown, Pa., and Silas Rhodes, and Burne Hogarth, partners in the Cartoonists and Illustrators School, Inc. of New York.

Paul J. Tierney, an associate counsel for the subcommittee, testified the New York school had received $1,767,712 from the Federal Government. It had 278 ex-G.I.s enrolled as of Oct. 31, comprising about 46 per cent of the student body, he said.

$215,523 for Allentown. Tierney reported the Allentown school had received $215,523 in Government payments in 1946 and 47. Between 1946 and 1952, he reported, the Robert Louis Stevenson School collected $2,081,397 from the Veterans Administration, which operates the educational program.

Tierney said the California Labor School was placed on the Attorney General's subversive list in 1948 and is no longer approved for veterans' training. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Rep., Wisconsin, a subcommittee member, asked if "they were actually conducting Communist classes" in the California school. Tierney said that was his understanding.

Telling of Red Activities

BURNE HOGARTH turning away as JOHN J. HUBER, former undercover agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified yesterday at Senate hearing that Hogarth has taken an active part in Communist party affairs.

owners of the Robert Louis Stevenson School, told the subcommittee he had "immediately" housecleaned all known or suspected Communists from the schools staff after buying it in June, 1952.

Rhodes, who said he is not related to Silas Rhodes, testified that "neither I nor my partners ever have been a Communist and that he believes there are no Reds on the staff now."

Brother of Ex-Owner. Rhodes identified himself as a brother of Miss Annette Rumbin, one of the former owners, whom subcommittee aids are trying to subpoena as a witness. Subcommittee Counsel Robert F. Kennedy said she has "disappeared."

Tierney said the San Francisco organization received $196,947 in tuition and subsistence charges for veterans in 1946 and 47. Between 1946 and 1952, he reported, the Robert Louis Stevenson School collected $2,081,397 from the Veterans Administration, which operates the educational program.

Tierney said the California Labor School was placed on the Attorney General's subversive list in 1948 and is no longer approved for veterans' training. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Rep., Wisconsin, a subcommittee member, asked if "they were actually conducting Communist classes" in the California school. Tierney said that was his understanding. Wants Loopholes Plugged. Senator John L. McClellan (Dem., Ark.), subcommittee chairman, declared today Congress should "plug the loopholes" through which he said Communist-tainted schools have received tax dollars for training veterans. He announced he had ordered a bill drafted to bar Communist-owned private schools from receiving tuition payments or other financial benefits from federal agencies in connection with the G.I. bill of rights training program.

He said that when hearings resume next week the subcommittee will try to find out whether the Veterans Administration lacks authority, as it contends, to refuse to let veterans enroll at the Government's expense in schools owned by Reds.

British Officer, in London, Says Progress Made in Ending Conflict.

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP)—Field Marshal Sir John Harding arrived in London today to report personally to Prime Minister Eden on moves to bring peace to strife-ridden Cyprus.

Harding, governor of that British military bastion in the eastern Mediterranean, flew overnight from Nicosia, the Cyprus capital.

He told newsmen some progress had been made in narrowing the differences between the British and the Greek-speaking Cypriots on the island, but he cautioned that difficult and complex issues remained to be solved.

He also said that the reinforced British garrison under his command was "making slow but steady progress in overcoming terrorism" on the island.

Harding has been negotiating with Orthodox Archbishop Makarios, spiritual leader of the Greek-descended community who is leading the movement to unite the island with Greece. Harding told reporters that during his talks with the Archbishop "certain points have cropped up about which I wanted to have a personal discussion with members of the government."

British authorities have agreed to self-determination for the island "some time and in certain conditions" but these qualifications have not been defined.

Harding wants to review the Cyprus matter with Eden and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd before the two men leave Jan. 25 for Washington talks with President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles.

INQUIRY IN DEATH OF BABY SHUTTLED TO TWO HOSPITALS

CHICAGO, Jan. 19 (AP)—A coroner's investigation was opened yesterday into why a sick 7-month-old boy was shuttled from a medical center to two different hospitals for diagnosis before he died.

The baby, Albert Brooks, was taken to the Wicker Park Medical Center at 6:45 p.m. Tuesday. He died at 1:28 a.m. yesterday in Michael Reese Hospital, where he was taken from Municipal Contagious Diseases Hospital.

The parents, William, 51, and Elaine, 23, told police they rushed the baby to the medical center when they found him "limp and acting funny." Dr. Veljko S. Corak, a general practitioner at the medical center, said he examined the boy and feared he was suffering from a contagious disease, such as meningitis.

He said he called Children's Memorial Hospital but was refused permission to send the child because of the possible contagious condition. He called Franklin Boulevard Hospital, where he is a staff member, but was told it handled mainly surgical cases.

Dr. Corak said he offered to take the baby by ambulance to Municipal Contagious Diseases Hospital, but Brooks preferred to drive his son in his car.

At Municipal, Dr. Harold W. Spies, medical superintendent, said he conducted contagious tests which were negative. He said he arranged admission at Michael Reese, believing the child could best be cared for in a hospital specializing in children's diseases. Coroner Walter E. McCarron ordered an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

Hoover's 8th Great Grandchild. PALO ALTO, Calif., Jan. 19 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover's eighth great grandchild was born Tuesday night, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover III of San Jose, and the granddaughter of Herbert Hoover II, assistant Secretary of State.

MATCH FIRM BUYS VENDING COMPANY

Sale Price Reported in Millions in Universal-National Vendors Deal.

National Vendors, Inc., a cigarette vending machine manufacturing firm at 5055 Natural Bridge avenue, has been sold to Universal Match Corp., it was announced today.

Company officials declined to disclose the sale price, but it was a cash transaction reported to total several million dollars.

Directors of National Vendors approved a plan of sale yesterday, ending two months of negotiations between officials of the two firms. Under the plan, National Vendors will continue operating as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Universal Match, retaining its present corporate officers. Ownership will pass over Feb. 1.

Leonard V. Finder, Universal Match vice president, said acquisition of the firm is expected to increase his company's annual net profit by about $500,000.

Universal Match had an estimated net profit for 1955 of $1,200,000.

Finder said the purchase was part of a program for broadening the scope of his company's operations. Last year it acquired International Tag & Salesbook Co. of Chicago.

Other subsidiaries include Ferguson Machine & Tool Co. Inc. and Unitronics & Impax Co. Inc., Ferguson. In addition to its match division with plants in Hudson, N. Y. and Los Angeles, Universal Match operates an armament division in Ferguson, Marshall, Tex., Maynard, Mass. and Carbondale, Ill.

Nasser Seeking Leadership In the Arab World for Egypt

Speech on New Constitution for Nation
Points Up Campaign to Unite Middle East States.

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS
The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

CAIRO, Jan. 19.—Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser has set out on a campaign to establish Egypt as the leading power in the restive Arab world.

This fact which has been accepted by Egyptians and foreign observers alike was highlighted with climactic emphasis in the keynote of Nasser's speech Monday in which he presented a new and revolutionary constitution for Egypt.

In the constitution, Egypt for the first time in history, is proclaimed formally as an Arab nation. Although the majority of Egyptians are not ethnically of Arab origin, their leaders, under the Nasser government, have set themselves up as having formed, the keystone of Arab unity.

"Integral Part."
"Egypt is an integral part of the Arab nation," the constitution declares. In interpolating this theme Nasser declared at a mass rally:

"The Arab world extends from the Atlantic ocean to the Persian gulf. We are all one united Arab people, co-operating for the sake of our right to live."

In the light of recent events, in which Egyptians have played the dominant role, this statement is viewed by diplomats and political observers as Nasser's proclamation of leadership in the Arab world.

Nasser's prestige and stature has grown immensely in a great part of the Arab world in the last few months. Egypt, at a crossroads between East and West, has certainly become the fulcrum for the see-saw struggle for influence between the Western democracies and the Communist sphere.

This does not mean, however, that all Arabs have accepted Nasser as their spokesman in the struggle. There remain a series of minor conflicts, jealousies and traditional feuds that disrupt the possible unity of the Arabs on any policy.

Nasser's Policy.
Nasser nevertheless has devoted tremendous efforts at getting the Arabs to accept his line—a line that rejects a military alliance with any power outside the Middle East; that seeks to promote the expulsion of all the old foreign influences from this area and to help liberate those who still are under foreign rule, and that will accept aid from either the East or West so long as it will benefit this area and has no political strings attached.

This program has brought a serious setback to Western policies in the Middle East, which primarily are concerned with defense of the strategic oil-rich area from possible infiltration or seizure by the Soviet Union. The effect has been to frustrate Western aims—and thus to appear unfriendly to the West—while permitting the Soviet bloc to gain its first foothold in the Middle East.

A number of Western diplomats, including those of the United States and Britain, have been analyzing this situation in an effort to find out how to counteract the trend of Egypt toward a neutralism that plays more into Soviet than Western hands. In this sphere alone it can be seen that Egypt has become the key to the problem.

Premier Nasser's consciousness of the importance of Egypt in this situation was emphasized in his remarks at Monday's rally.

"We all know that the cold war is moving toward us," the Premier said. "It will be directed at us with all its forces and techniques. But we will work with all our determination and might so as not to permit anyone to infiltrate into our ranks."

HARRIMAN SAYS LEADERS ABET COMPLACENCY

Demands 'Realistic Appraisal' of Relations With Russia — Criticizes Dulles Remarks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19 (AP)—Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, in a sharp attack on President Eisenhower, said today it was "a dangerous thing for our leaders to gloss over the truth and encourage complacency" about peaceful relations with Russia.

"We should not be taken in" by Moscow, he told a luncheon meeting of the Commonwealth Club.

"We all have a responsibility," Harriman declared, "to demand a realistic appraisal of the situation and measures for dealing with it."

Harriman said that Secretary of State Dulles' "recent statement that he and the President have three times led us to the brink of war" showed "why our friends and allies have been concerned that we were becoming militaristic and reckless and why they have been drawing away from us."

First of 3 Speeches.

The speech was the first of three to be given by Harriman in California today and tomorrow. Harriman is a self-declared "inactive" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. His appearances in California are regarded by political observers as moves in furtherance of his candidacy.

He said the free world was "psychologically disarmed" by Administration statements on the results of the Geneva conference last year.

"I was in favor of holding the summit conference," the former Ambassador to Moscow recalled, "and I think we should be willing to negotiate with the Russians at any time and at any level. But I certainly think we should be careful not to be taken in."

"No agreement was reached at Geneva on any of the issues at stake," he said. "Yet during a single momentous week, the impression was conveyed to the people of this country and to the world that the cold war was over and that a new era of peace was at hand."

"How did this happen? It happened because of the attitude of the President of the United States toward the Kremlin leaders."

In fact, Mr. Eisenhower specifically credited the Russians with a desire for peace no less earnest than that of the West. Moreover, upon his return home, he spoke, even though with some reservations, about the "spark ignited at Geneva" and "the most shining opportunity" that lay ahead.

Defense Efforts Relaxed.

The Russians went to Geneva "openly saying what they sought was a 'relaxation of tensions,'" Harriman went on. "Well, tensions did relax—all over the world—but so did efforts to build strength against the Communist threat, which it what the Russians were after. The so-called 'spirit of Geneva' reigned."

The Governor said, "We are confronted with a long, hard struggle to preserve and reinforce freedom."

"We can win this struggle," he declared, "but in our democracy it requires that the people be fully informed on the real situation. It is no service to our national security, but a dangerous thing, for our leaders to gloss over the truth and encourage complacency."

The Red Chinese "have been bombarding Quemoy and Matsui," Harriman said. "An article in last week's Life magazine asserts that Mr. Dulles does not doubt that the President a year ago would have regarded an attack on these islands as an attack on Formosa, which we are pledged to defend. Mr. Dulles says he took us to the brink of war at that time. Are we then again on the brink of war?"

"The President in his State of the Union message did not discuss any of these dangerous situations."

DOUGLAS PLANS SUBSTITUTE GAS CONTROL BILL

Senator to Propose Exemption of Smallest Producers From Price Curbs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UP)—Senator Paul H. Douglas will try a tactic in the Senate which could upset supporters' hopes of pushing the controversial natural gas bill through Congress.

The Illinois Democrat, who is leading opposition to the measure, announced today he would propose a substitute bill. He also told a reporter he has several amendments to offer when the bill reaches the voting stage.

While Douglas did not say so, his substitute version and amendments obviously are aimed at killing chances of congressional approval of the original bill.

The bill as now written, being debated for the fourth day, would exempt independent natural gas producers from direct federal price control. The bill cleared the House last year on a 209-203 vote.

Supporters of the measure want to get an identical one through the Senate, thus completing congressional action without raising the issue again in the House. The House would have to consider any changes.

Douglas's substitute would continue the present law but exempt from federal control the small producers who produce less than two billion cubic feet of gas annually.

The effect, Douglas said, would be to remove federal control from 96 per cent of the producers producing only 10 per cent of the total gas and producers turning out 90 per cent of the gas.

The first votes in the controversy probably will not come until late next week.

After three days of speeches by Senators who favor lifting federal control, opponents late yesterday began their counter-attack.

Senator John O. Pastore (Dem.), Rhode Island, charged the bill seeks solely to benefit gas producers and gives "nothing more than lip service" to consumers. Opponents charge that lifting federal regulation would lead to increases in gas prices, but supporters deny this.

TAX OFFICE GETS BUSIER AFTER A SLOW START

After a slow start, business has picked up at the income tax office in the basement of the Federal building, and several hundred persons now are coming in daily to get assistance in making out their returns for 1955.

Many large employers have distributed the W-2 forms giving workers the figures on tax amounts withheld from wages, and the staff in the office at Twelfth boulevard and Market street expects to stay busy from now through April 16, which is the deadline for filing returns without penalty.

There has been some curtailment of assistance to taxpayers this year. Internal Revenue Director Ernest M. Flinn explained, adding that he has received no complaints to date.

In the past, agents actually made out returns for taxpayers to sign. Now, however, this is being done only for aged, ill or illiterate persons. For others, agents answer questions and show where the answers should go, but leave it to the taxpayers to do the filling-in themselves.

CAUTION URGED IN TRYING SURGERY ON OLDER PATIENTS

Surgery should not be attempted with older patients who show severe apprehension, low blood pressure or a fast pulse when they reach the operating room, Dr. Paul Lorhan, professor of anesthesiology at the University of Kansas, told the St. Louis Society of Anesthesiologists last night. The society met at the Coronado Hotel.

He estimated that the average life span, now about 65 years, will be 70 by 1960, and that anesthesia therefore will become more important since more persons of advanced age will be having more operations.

Techniques and anesthetic agents have been perfected, he said, and now the more vital factor is the condition of the patient. Anemia, diabetes, kidney infections and chronic states of shock should be treated before surgery is attempted, Dr. Lorhan advised.

KEFAUVER-STEVENSON FIGHT FORMING IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

CONCORD, N.H., Jan. 19 (AP)—A battle between Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee and Adlai Stevenson for New Hampshire's eight votes at the Democratic national convention was practically assured today.

Kefauver's organized backers announced a complete 12-member slate of delegate candidates who will run "pledged" to the Tennessee Senator in this state's first-in-the-nation presidential primary March 13.

Stevenson supporters said they would meet next Sunday to organize a slate of their own which will run "favorable" to the party's 1952 standard bearer.

A "pledged" candidate must obtain written consent from the person to whom he is pledged and must, by law, vote for that person as long as his name is before the convention. A "favorable" candidate requires no consent and the designation involves no binding commitment at the convention.

BRENTWOOD MAN FINED $300 ON GAMBLING DEVICE CHARGE

Primo F. Caudera, 8900 block of White avenue, Brentwood, today was fined $300 by Circuit Judge Raymond E. LaDriere at Clayton on a plea of guilty of setting up a gaming device.

Caudera and George F. Deppe, 1509 block South Terrell street, were arrested Sept. 30, 1954, when deputies raided a handbook in the 3100 block of Luda avenue, Maplewood.

Deppe went to trial last March at Clayton before a jury, which found him guilty of setting up a gaming device and fixed punishment at one year in jail and a $1000 fine. He has appealed.

New Dog Food Discovery.... "Silent Scent" Helps Make Even Finicky Dogs Eat Eagerly

"Dogs Live In A World of Smells"

"That's what led to 'Silent Scent' discovery" says Dr. J. Wesley Nelson

A fine Collie like this has a keen sense of smell that helps him in his work of herding livestock and protecting property. Even at night, he can detect an intruder—when you can't. His nose tells him. To a dog, the whole world is a world of smells. Dr. J. Wesley Nelson and his team of Nutrena scientists and kennel authorities found "Silent Scent" by watching thousands of dogs react to this "world of smells."

A dog's best friend is his nose! All day long, your dog actually "smells" his way around. You've seen him many times as he approaches an object or person—his first reaction is a sniff! And it's the same with food—before he takes a bite, he "smells" it! If it doesn't smell good, he won't eat it. That's why Nutrena searched for a special appetite odor to add eat-appeal to their dog food. And it was a great day for dogs when they found it!

Make this bowl test right in your home. Put Nutrena Dog Food with "Silent Scent" in one bowl. Put any other dog food in the other bowl. Then let your dog in. Watch him go. Nutrena bets he'll go right to the bowl of Nutrena with "Silent Scent." Now switch the bowls. Nutrena bets he'll still take right after Nutrena with "Silent Scent." This test has been made many times with many different dogs. And practically every time dogs chose Nutrena. Buy a package of Nutrena and let your dog try this bowl test today. He'll love it!

How to Save Up to 70¢ a Week* and Still Feed Your Dog Better Than with Canned Dog Food

Feed a cup instead of a can and stop paying as much as 10¢ for water. A 16-oz. can of dog food contains about 11 oz. of water and only 5 oz. of actual nutrition. Nutrena gives you 5 oz. of nutrition without the water. You add the water to Nutrena yourself—and save money.

Health-protecting Livium in Nutrena Dog Food gives your pet vitamins and antibiotics. With Livium, Nutrena furnishes all the vital nutritional elements his body is known to need. "Like giving your dog a multi-vitamin capsule with every feeding," says Dr. J. Wesley Nelson, leader of the Nutrena animal feeding research team that developed Livium. This team developed the famous line of Nutrena livestock and poultry feeds.

Dogs live longer natural lives today because new dry-type dog foods like Nutrena can give better nutrition than haphazard feeding of table scraps or even meat alone. Are you sure your present dog food gives your pet the balanced diet he needs for top health and long life? Be sure. Feed Nutrena Dog Food in meal or nugget form for guaranteed effective amounts of all the vital nutrients your dog is known to need.

FEED A CUP of Nutrena for about 5¢—INSTEAD OF A CAN for about 15¢!

At last dog-lovers can enjoy the wonderful economy of a dry dog food—and still feed pets better than with canned dog foods.

That's because Nutrena with "Silent Scent" tastes so good, any dog eats it eagerly—we guarantee it! And a single cup of Nutrena contains more actual nutrition than a whole can of canned dog food. (See chart.)

So now you can feed a cup for only about 5¢ instead of a can for about 15¢. You save up to 10¢ a day, 70¢ a week or $35 a year with just an average sized dog!

Start enjoying these savings now. Try a two-pound box of Nutrena, meal or nuggets, at no expense. See the amazing introductory offer in advertisement at right.

THIS CHART SHOWS NUTRENA HAS MORE OF ALL 12 KNOWN VITAL NUTRIENTS THAN CANNED DOG FOOD.

See the difference: See how Nutrena, meal or nuggets, beats canned dog food on all 12 counts. Canned leads only in amount of water. You can add the water to Nutrena yourself. And each cup of Nutrena for about 5¢ actually has more food value than a can of dog food for about 15¢. So you're actually feeding your dog better with Nutrena than with canned dog food—and you're saving money at the same time. Compare the dog food you are now feeding with the Nutrena analysis above. This comparison will show you why thousands of dog owners have switched to Nutrena with "Silent Scent."

Nutrena Scientists Finally Capture Strange, Elusive Aroma That Makes Dogs Hungry

New appetite appeal, "Silent Scent," in each box of Nutrena—you can't smell it, but your dog can

Dog owners have a better way to feed their tail-wagging friends today, thanks to scientists who were curious enough to track down an odor that no human could smell.

Even before the discovery of "Silent Scent" Nutrena scientists knew that dogs could detect a "supersonic" aroma in their food that humans couldn't smell with their dull noses.

They observed how a dog "tastes" his food with his nose, not with his mouth. If the smell isn't right, your dog will turn down food without ever taking a mouthful.

After years of patient work with dogs, Nutrena's research team has at last found this elusive aroma that makes even finicky dogs hungry.

They call it "Silent Scent" because humans can't smell it, but dogs can, and they love it.

What did they do with "Silent Scent"? Why, they used it to make a dry dog food that smells so good dogs can't resist it.

They blended appetizing "Silent Scent" into Nutrena Dog Food. For the first time they were able to guarantee that any dog would eat it eagerly from the very first serving.

Most dog lovers know that dogs are often like kids about their food. For example, many youngsters just don't seem to like spinach; yet you know it's good for them. And many dogs won't eat ordinary type dog food; yet you know that your dog needs a fine, wholesome dry dog food like Nutrena where a simple cup provides more nourishment than a whole can of expensive canned dog food.

Now, with "Silent Scent," the scientists have been able to make this wholesome, inexpensive Nutrena Dog Food smell good to your dog—just as good as sizzling steak, or ham and eggs, smell to you.

An inexpensive, nutritious food that every dog will eat eagerly! That's why Nutrena is the answer to the dog owner's prayer. And Nutrena knows that the odds are all in favor of your dog demanding more Nutrena, once he's tried it. So Nutrena is making this almost unheard-of introductory offer:

You get 50¢ in cash for a 34¢ Nutrena box top! See below.

Now you can stop feeding those expensive canned or frozen dog foods!

Is your dog one of those finicky eaters who absolutely refuses to eat a dry-type dog food? Well, you'll be delighted to see the way he goes for Nutrena—thanks to "Silent Scent," Nutrena's amazing appetite-appeal discovery that makes dogs hungry.

Now at last you can give your dog an economical, convenient dog food that all dogs love. With Nutrena, you add the water when you are ready to feed. And you can stop feeding those expensive canned or frozen dog foods that cost so much more—and that are messy to store and serve.

Think what this means to housewives! No more storing chunks of horse meat or messy cans in the family refrigerator—near food meant for human consumption. "How I hated to put those half-cans of stuff next to our own food"—as one Tennessee woman said—"and I was paying three times as much to feed my dog."

Clean, sanitary and convenient, the new Nutrena Dog Food with mysterious "Silent Scent" for appetite appeal, is winning new friends every day. Its economy has enabled owners of even average sized dogs to save as much as 70¢ per week—while feeding a better balanced dog food ration. If you've tried other dry-type dog foods without success, now feed Nutrena—the dry food your dog will eat, or your money back.

Give Budget a Boost With Pork

Homemaker Can't Afford to Overlook Outstanding Values Offered in All Cuts.

By DOROTHY BRAINER
Post-Dispatch Food Editor.

CERTAINLY it would make our reporting far easier if it were possible to offer you a different item each week as the current "best buy." Unfortunately, however, we are frequently forced to recommend the same food for weeks on end. It may not make for fascinating reading, but it does make for honest reporting and appreciable savings in the food budget.

The truly amazing buys in pork point up this situation. They are no longer news; we have been telling you about them for some time. But certainly they deserve top billing on any marketing list.

It really doesn't matter which cut of pork you put in your shopping cart; you simply can't go wrong since the cheaper cuts are being offered at almost unbelievably low prices, with even the choice cuts proportionately lower.

And here is a reminder: The cost per serving can be reduced even more if you remember to use low temperatures when cooking the meat, since low heat means less shrinkage and consequently more servings per pound.

Of course there still are excellent values available in beef, with particular emphasis on pot roasts and chuck roasts.

Lamb is fairly reasonable, but veal is extremely scarce and extremely high.

As you know by now, that Florida cold snap we mentioned last week turned out to be fairly severe, and we are seeing its effects in local stores.

Several vegetables are up sharply as a result of this freeze; however the damage to the citrus, up to the time this column is being written, does not seem to be severe.

The victims appear to be beans, corn, cucumbers, eggplant, squash (especially the summer varieties such as yellow straightneck, zucchini, and patty pan), and tomatoes. Prices are up sharply on all of these.

However, if you stick to the fundamental vegetables you won't have too much trouble, as most of the basic items are still well in line. Broccoli is reasonable enough, with some now coming in from Texas. Incidentally, it is interesting to watch how this vegetable increases in popularity each year. Carrots remain in the moderate bracket, as do cabbage and celery.

As you will note, we thought so much of cauliflower that we gave it a place of honor on this page. It really is an outstanding buy, of excellent quality and priced right.

Although potatoes are up just a shade, they certainly pose no budget problem and there are plenty of sweet potatoes to serve with those pork dishes we mentioned above.

Artichokes show no appreciable change, but are fairly priced, and there is some quite nice spinach in the markets. But look sharply when selecting Brussels sprouts; the condition bears watching.

Mushrooms rate a special mention this week because they are of unusual quality. And what a mushroom sauce can do for a meat loaf is something well worth considering.

There are plenty of candidates for the salad bowl—moderately priced leaf lettuce from the greenhouses in nearby states; plenty of iceberg lettuce with even the best reasonably priced; some fine escarole and endive; green onions and radishes to add a touch of spring.

As we mentioned, citrus doesn't seem to have suffered too much from the unusual Florida weather. Tangerines and temple oranges are right at the peak of their too-brief seasons. Temples do have a distinctive flavor, and since they are available only seasonally it is smart to make the most of them while they are here.

When buying both tangerines and temples, bear in mind that they should be heavy for their size, as this indicates good juice content.

California naval oranges are arriving in heavier supply, with increased maturity meaning better flavor. The big sizes are heavily predominant.

Apples are well represented with a choice of Northwest winesaps, red and golden Delicious, Michigan Jonathans and some McIntosh. (The McIntosh are a real budget buy, incidentally.)

Those Emperor grapes we have been telling you about are still with us, and mighty good they are. Cranberries continue to be a bargain that is just too good to pass by.

Add to the list of available fruits: bananas, Michigan hot-house rhubarb, pineapples and fresh strawberries.

NEW in the Markets: A sugar-free pudding which comes in three flavors (chocolate, vanilla and butterscotch), so delicious and so low in calories that dessert poses no problem for the calorie conscious.

Here is a worthy addition to your "security shelf"—a new shelf we suggest reserving just for the products you use when you decide it is time to diet off those extra pounds that will creep up when we're not looking.

Pork Chop Pocket
When you make a pocket in pork chops for stuffing, cut the pocket into the rib side of the chop. Chops cut from this side hold the stuffing better.

EVER so often homemakers get a special break when some food, for one reason or another, becomes so plentiful that prices drop lower and lower. And that is exactly what has happened to pork during the last few months. Late last September pigs began pouring into market and since that time the food pages of this newspaper have repeatedly stressed pork as a "best buy."

Perhaps you are tired of hearing about it, but it really is such an excellent value that it bears repetition over and over again. And pork, in one form or another, may well appear on your table over and over again. Nutritionally speaking, it's always a good choice because it is one of the best sources of the B-vitamins and contributes generous amounts of iron and phosphorus to our diets. And there are so many cuts which can be prepared in so many ways that monotony is no problem.

Pork sausage usually is a family favorite, and sausage links combine happily with a wide variety of other foods to make a delicious luncheon and supper dishes. Pictured above is a skillet supper that is easy to prepare and a little different.

For a meal that's sure to win praise from the men in the family, serve barbecued spareribs, sauce for these ribs, unlike so many, calls for few ingredients but it gives a fine barbecue flavor and wonderful glaze.

Three to four pounds pork spareribs.

Some New Ways to Prepare Cauliflower

Vegetable Is a Favorite With St. Louisans; Vary Manner in Which It Is Served.

IT is always interesting to study regional food preferences, and although they no longer are as marked as they were prior to improved handling and distribution methods and the introduction of frozen foods, they do still exist.

For example, St. Louisans are especially fond of cauliflower. It is said that we eat more per capita than any other city in the country. And right now, while the 'flower in local markets is of such excellent quality and so reasonably priced, might be a fine time to experiment with new ways to serve this local favorite.

Cauliflower Divan.
Three cups sliced cauliflower.
One-half cup boiling water.
One teaspoon salt.

Two tablespoons butter or margarine.
Two tablespoons flour.
One and one-fourth cups milk.

HERE IS ADVICE ON BEST WAYS TO STORE MEATS
It's important to know how to care for the meat you buy. Meats are perishable so they must be refrigerated as soon as they are brought in from the meat market.

Different meats require different storage procedures and times. For example, pre-packaged cured and smoked meats and sausages may be stored in their original wrapper; fresh meats should be rewrapped loosely to allow circulation of air.

Roasts may be held in the refrigerator for four or five days, steaks a day or two, ground beef and the variety meats only about 24 hours.

Smoked meats should be as carefully stored as the fresh meats. Hams should be eaten within a week, but bacon will keep a week to ten days.

BLACK BEAN GOURMET SOUP
Planning a special dinner menu? For an opener that's slightly different, serve black bean soup. Prepare as directed on the can.

Then for that Old World gourmet touch, add a teaspoon of lemon juice to the piping-hot soup and garnish each serving with one or two thin slices of hard cooked egg.

TWO GOOD RECIPES

THIS SPICY SHERBET SUPERB WITH MEATS

Pork combines well with many kinds of fruits, and is especially good with the gay little cranberries which are another current bonanza for the homemaker. As you know if you read the marketing column in this newspaper regularly, cranberries have been especially plentiful, good, and cheap this season.

Fresh Cranberry Ham Bake.

Two cups fresh whole cranberries.

One-half cup sugar.

One-fourth cup water.

Two center slices ham.

Whole cloves.

Wash cranberries and mix with sugar and water in a saucepan. Cover. Cook cranberries until skins pop. Place a slice of ham in a baking dish. Cover with three fourths of the cranberries. Top with the remaining slice of ham.

Insert whole cloves around edge of ham, spacing them one and one-half inches apart. Bake one and one-half hours in a preheated moderate oven (350 degrees), basting occasionally with the cranberry liquid. Garnish top with the remaining cooked cranberries. Yield: Six servings.

Don't forget bacon when considering pork in your menu; it's truly versatile. Shine up your favorite skillet to make this dish, and bring it right to the table, without apologies, for a family supper.

Old Mexico Macaroni.

Four slices bacon, diced.

One-half cup chopped onion.

One-fourth cup chopped green pepper.

One and one-fourth cups condensed tomato soup (10 1/2-ounce can).

One cup water.

Dash of ground cloves.

Four ounces elbow macaroni or bows.

Brown bacon in heavy skillet. Add onion and green pepper and brown lightly. Add soup and water, stirring until well blended. Bring mixture to boiling. Add cloves and macaroni and mix well. Cover, reduce heat and simmer gently 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Yield: Four servings.

Serve with extra slices of crisp bacon, corn, and cottage cheese-pineapple salads.

EGG FOO YUNG

Surprise your family with homemade egg foo yung. Drain one No. 2 can bean sprouts and mix with one cup finely diced cooked meat and one-half cup chopped onion.

Beat six eggs slightly and add to meat mixture. Drop by spoonfuls into one-half cup hot fat in a large frying-pan to make patties about three inches in diameter. Brown on both sides. Serve immediately on hot platter with gravy.

Serving roast chicken or turkey? For a delicious "surprise" accompaniment, try Spiced Peaches with Spicy Sherbet.

One No. 2 1/2 can cling peach halves.

One teaspoon whole cloves.

One three-inch stick cinnamon.

Two tablespoons vinegar.

One teaspoon lemon juice.

Drain sirup from peaches into saucepan. Add cloves, cinnamon and vinegar, and boil slowly five minutes. Add peaches and cook gently five minutes longer.

Allow to stand several hours or overnight. Then strain off sirup, add lemon juice, and pour into freezing tray. Place in freezing compartment with control set at lowest temperature. Freeze until barely firm. Turn out into chilled bowl and beat until smooth and fluffy.

Return to freezing compartment and freeze to desired consistency. Reset temperature control to normal. Serve chilled peach halves heaped with spicy sherbet as meat accompaniment.

This is delicious with roast pork or lamb as well as with chicken or turkey.

GRAPES ACCENT CHICKEN

There are a myriad of ways to serve chicken salad... but for an extra special party salad mix green grapes, pecans, and chicken with a piquant gelatin base. Soften contents of one package unflavored gelatin in one-half cup cold water. Place container of gelatin over hot water until gelatin is dissolved. Stir in one-half cup salad dressing and one tablespoon lemon juice.

Fold together gelatin mixture, two cans (five-ounce size) boned chicken or turkey, one cup seedless green grapes, one cup diced celery, one-fourth cup chopped pecans, dash salt and pepper. Pour into buttered one-quart mold. Chill until firm. Yields six generous servings.

CHICKEN BREASTS AU GRATIN

The French may be famous for their sauces, but this dish will win braves for elegance with a minute's effort. Thaw one package (one-pound size) frozen chicken breasts as directed on package. Place chicken in single layer in buttered shallow baking dish (about 10 by six by two inches). Pour one can (one and one-fourth cups) condensed cream of chicken soup over chicken. Bake one hour at 350 degrees. Last 10 minutes of cooking time sprinkle one-half cup shredded mild process cheese over chicken. Yield: three to four servings.

STATE DEPARTMENT RE-FIRES HISTORIAN

Dozer Got Job Back Once—Blamed 'Democratic Holdovers' for Dismissal.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—Donald M. Dozer was fired by the state department yesterday for the second time.

Dozer, 50-year-old historian, was first dismissed last Oct. 4. The department said then his work was not up to standard and he was a "disruptive" influence.

The civil service commission reversed the department shortly thereafter and ordered Dozer reinstated. The commission said it found the charges were not specific enough. It did not rule on the merits.

Dozer was reinstated Dec. 21 and given back pay to Oct. 4. His salary was about $10,000 a year.

On the same day a new statement of charges, more specific and in greater detail, was filed against him. Dozer responded to them on Jan. 4 and his response was taken under advisement.

The State Department told him by letter yesterday that he was fired again.

Dozer has 10 days in which to appeal again to the civil service commission. One of his attorneys, Kenneth W. Parkinson, said this would be done. If the commission fails to reinstate Dozer, Parkinson said, "we may resort to the courts to prove his firing was arbitrary and capricious."

Dozer has blamed his firing on Democratic holdovers in the State Department. He said he was "penalized merely because I have strong opinions and the courage to express them through regular channels."

30 MORE REPORTED KILLED IN ALGERIAN TERROR RAIDS

ALGIERS, Jan. 19 (AP)—At least 30 persons were reported killed in continuing violence in Algeria in the last 24 hours, including three Foreign Legionnaires. Armed patrols in all rebel-infested regions reported increasing activity as the new French Assembly went into session in Paris.

Terrorism was also reported in Morocco, with a half dozen political deaths, despite moves by the Sultan and the French to quiet the situation.

VA AGENT GETS PLAQUE AS 'CIVIL SERVANT OF YEAR'

James A. Dougherty, direct loan agent in the loan guaranty division of the Veterans Administration regional office here, received a silver plaque last night as the first "Federal Civil Servant of the Year" at a banquet at the DeSoto Hotel.

Presentation was made by John S. Patterson of Washington, deputy administrator of veterans affairs, at the dinner honoring 20 outstanding civil service employees. The meeting was sponsored by the Greater St. Louis Federal Business Association and the Federal Personnel Council.

Dougherty, 902 North Rock Hill road, Rock Hill, became direct loan agent in 1950.

He is agency civil defense co-ordinator for the local VA office. He is acting commander of the St. Louis Auxiliary Police, a member of the board of Missouri Civil Defense Auxiliary Police Association, past commander of American Legion Post 4 and active in other community and church organizations. He also has donated blood frequently in the last 30 years.

INDIA LEAGUE HEAD WANTS TO REJECT U.S. AID

NEW DELHI, Jan. 19 (AP)—J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America, says he has "reached the conclusion India should thank the United States for aid so far received" but should decline to accept any more.

Singh, sometimes called India's unofficial spokesman in the United States, said he considers United States aid to India one of the major causes of trouble between the two countries.

Singh has been touring India for two months. He is scheduled to return to New York Feb. 16. He has lived in America for 30 years.

He said India could do without United States aid in its second five-year plan and "instead of our being treated as ungrateful beggars we will be treated with more dignity and respect."

Singh said he had discussed his suggestion that India reject additional United States aid with prominent Indians "from Prime Minister Nehru downward." He said he found a large measure of agreement with his ideas.

MILITARY SPENDING WATCHED CAREFULLY, OFFICER SAYS

The armed services exercise many controls to insure the taxpayer that the most defense is received from every tax dollar spent. Lt. Col. Milton W. Witt, inspector general of the Army Transportation Supply and Maintenance Command, said today at a luncheon at Hotel DeSoto.

Col. Witt, who addressed members of the Downtown Kiwanis Club, said his organization, like others in the armed forces, utilizes the services of an advisory group of civilians and a board of senior military officers to help solve transportation problems. Before suggestions are accepted, he said, they are discussed by the Transportation Research and Development Command, which includes civilian and military experts in transportation methods and equipment.

He said further safeguards include checking on Government and contractors' personnel, auditing of manufacturers' books and accounts, using trained inspectors assigned to manufacturing plants and contracting officers both at the Research and Development Command and the Supply and Maintenance Command.

SOCIAL SECURITY FILING FOR MINISTERS EXPLAINED

Ministers, missionaries and members of religious orders can file claims for social security coverage with the district director of Internal Revenue or Social Security office, T. L. Gaukel, Social Security Administration manager, announced today.

Gaukel explained this optional coverage applies to persons who are employees or self-employed. Those who elect coverage must pay a social security tax of three per cent of their annual earnings up to $4200. "Once an individual elects to be covered he must continue to report his earnings and pay the tax every year in which he earns $400 or more," Gaukel pointed out. Those who do not elect to participate by April 15, 1957, cannot, under the present law, later qualify for this protection.

BRAMBLETT LOSES
KICKBACK APPEALCourt Upholds Conviction of Ex-Congressman by 2-to-1 Decision.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The United States Court of Appeals today upheld the conviction of former Representative Ernest K. Bramblett (Rep., Cal.), on charges of falsifying his office payroll in a salary kickback scheme.

In a 2-to-1 decision, the court rejected Bramblett's principal condition that the indictment against him was voted too late because of the three-year statutory limitation.

Bramblett was given a one-year suspended sentence and fined $5000, in United States district court in June 1955.

Bramblett's attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, said the case would be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Bramblett, who did not seek re-election in 1954, was accused of falsifying his office payroll in a salary kickback scheme.

In rejecting Bramblett's contention that the offense of which he was convicted occurred more than three years prior to the indictment, Judge Charles Fahy said he was unable to accept this view.

One phase of the Bramblett case already has been ruled on by the Supreme Court, but this does not bar an appeal on other issues.

After Bramblett's conviction, the Supreme Court was asked to rule whether the law under which he was indicted covered the making of false statements to the legislative branch of government, as well as the executive branch. The court held that it did.

DEATH OF MAN STRUCK
BY AUTO HELD ACCIDENTAL

A coroner's verdict of accidental death was returned today in the case of Pedro Garza, 3441 Washington boulevard, who died Tuesday at City Hospital.

Garza, 67 years old, a laborer, suffered a head injury Monday when he was struck by an automobile at Lucas and Theresa avenues.

Hospital reports indicated Garza had tuberculosis. Police said the car that struck him was driven by Clarence Wilson, 4729 McMillan avenue.

YOUTH CHARGED WITH THEFT OF POLICEMAN'S REVOLVER

A warrant charging Earl E. Simpson, of the 200 block of South Side drive, Webster Groves, with grand larceny in the theft of a service revolver from Police Cpl. Elmer Lucks, in a bowling alley at 4923 Arsenal street, was issued today by the Circuit Attorney's office.

Simpson, 19 years old, admitted stealing the weapon, police said. Cpl. Lucks, of the Lucas Avenue District, said his revolver was on a desk in the bowling alley manager's office while he bowled with a group of friends last night. The pistol was stolen while the manager was out of the office.

Witnesses said they saw Simpson near the office. The revolver was found under the seat of Simpson's automobile and the bullets from it were in his pockets, police said.

JAPAN GETS FIRST OF 6 NAVY
NEPTUNE PATROL PLANES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Defense Department said yesterday Japan has received the first of six Navy Neptune patrol planes to be transferred to it during the next three months. The plane was turned over to Japanese officials at the Alameda Naval Air Station, Calif.

The planes are being transferred under the grant-aid provisions of the military assistance program.

The P2Vs are produced by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and have a range of more than 2000 miles. The schedule calls for delivery of two planes per month to Japan through March. Officials said that additional aircraft, bringing the total deliveries to eight, are to be transferred at some time between March and July.

CENTRAL UNION IN CHILE BLACKLISTED BY OFFICIALS

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 19 (AP)—Chile's 1,000,000-member Central Labor Union (C.U.T.) has been blacklisted by the Government. Authorities termed the union "illegal" and charged it was "acting contrary to democratic government."

Instructions were sent to officials throughout the country last night telling them not to have any dealings with the C.U.T. Orders also were issued to reject C.U.T. intervention in any labor dispute.

The C.U.T. early this month called a nation-wide strike in opposition to a Government proposal to freeze wages and prices as an anti-inflation move. Taking action under a state of siege, the Government broke the strike and arrested some 300 union members, including union Chief Clotario Blest.

ISRAELI PRESIDENT INJURED

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector, Jan. 19 (AP)—President Izhak Ben-Zvi suffered a head injury yesterday in a fall while stepping down from a speaker's platform at Lydda airport. He was taken to a nearby hospital where his condition was described as good.

The President had addressed a group of maintenance workers at the airport.

WITNESS ASSAILS AUTO 'HORSE TRADING'

American Motors Head Says Sales Practices Are Hurting Industry.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UP)—George Romney, president of American Motors Corp., testified today that "horse trading" salesmanship is causing new car buyers to adopt a "customer beware" attitude.

Romney, whose company makes Nash and Hudson automobiles, said he thinks "the automobile industry as a whole has suffered in public esteem" because of current sales practices.

He testified before a Senate commerce subcommittee studying automobile marketing. The group issued a report yesterday summarizing the largely critical replies of 19,113 auto dealers who filled in a subcommittee questionnaire on marketing practices.

More than 70 per cent of the dealers who replied complained of "overproduction" by automobile makers. More than 50 per cent cited "pressure" by manufacturers to take more cars than are needed.

"I believe many dealers are disgusted at the methods and ethics of current automobile marketing practices," Romney said.

He said dealers generally "have lost much of the moral and social satisfaction and are beginning to lose the economic benefits previously derived from adherence to higher standards."

He said so-called "blitz" selling, price packing, dishonest or misleading advertising and bootlegging have become widespread in the industry. He said marketing practices have deteriorated so badly that there is a "competitive advantage" for the company that tries to improve them.

GIRL, 7, KIDNAPED, ATTACKED IN ARIZONA, ITINERANT HELD

MESA, Ariz., Jan. 19 (AP)—A 33-year-old itinerant was arrested yesterday shortly after 7-year-old Carla Hixon, kidnapped on her way home from school, was found battered and bleeding in the desert.

County Attorney William P. Mahoney Jr. said in Phoenix he planned to charge Wayne Vance Taylor with the abduction. The child, who was found unconscious under a bush about eight miles northeast of here, was reported in serious condition.

Mahoney said Taylor admitted he picked the girl up in his car Tuesday afternoon, but claimed he could not remember what happened later. The county said Taylor probably would be charged with kidnapping, aggravated assault and grand theft. A doctor at the hospital where the girl was taken said an examination showed she had been sexually molested.

Some in Air Force Said to Feel 'Saucers' Were Space Ships

Ex-Investigator Writes in Book That 'Abnormal Radiations' Accompanied Sightings of Objects in Sky.

By VERN HAUGLAND

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—A new book on flying saucers says some atomic scientists have detected "abnormal radiations" at the times and in the areas of the sighting of unidentified objects in the sky. It says there is no proof the phenomena are connected.

The author, former Air Force Capt. Edward J. Ruppelt, was for two years chief of the Air Force project for investigation of flying saucer reports.

He says that the data which he gathered on the radiation reports was rejected by the Air Force as containing "not enough conclusive evidence."

Now Research Engineer.

Ruppelt, now a research engineer for Northrop Aircraft, Los Angeles, says he coined the term UFO for flying saucers—unidentified flying objects.

"No one could explain the sudden bursts of radiation, but there was no proof that they were associated with UFO's," Ruppelt says in "The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects," published by Doubleday & Co.

Ruppelt also says in the book that:

1. A panel of scientists in January 1953 rejected an unofficial Air Force analysis, prepared by a staff headed by Maj. Dewey Fournet, that UFOs were interplanetary space ships. Ruppelt said the space ship conclusion was supported by some Air Force officers "at command levels just a notch below" Maj. Gen. John A. Sanford, at that time Air Force director of intelligence.

2. There have been no reports measuring the speed or altitude of a UFO, no reliable photographs showing any details of a UFO, no "hardware," and no real proof that there are flying saucers.

3. While the Air Force has said unofficially there is no proof that space ships exist, "this conclusion is far from being unanimous among the military" and their scientific advisers.

4. If unidentified flying objects described in detail to the January 1953 scientific panel were "real," they would have to be space craft "because no one at the meeting gave a second thought to the possibility that the UFOs might be super-secret United States aircraft or a Soviet development."

Cleared For Security.

An Air Force spokesman said yesterday the book was read and cleared by the Pentagon as being free of security information. He added that there was no other stamp of Air Force approval or disapproval on it.

The spokesman said Maj. Fournet, once an Air Force expert on the flying saucer reports, became "sold" on the space ship theory and prepared a report which was rejected as unsound. The Air Force has declined to make the Fournet report public.

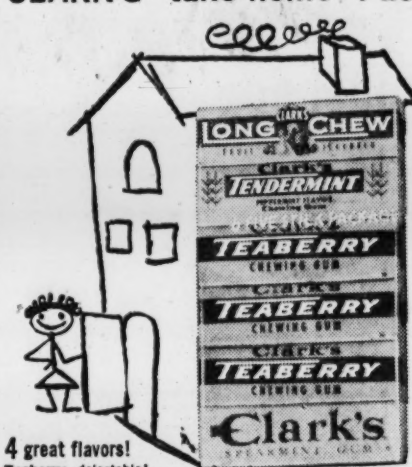

PAPER FIRM MAKES REBATE

TORONTO, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Abitibi Pulp and Paper Co. said yesterday it is refunding to its customers the $1-a-ton difference between its newsprint price increase announced last November and the smaller increase announced later.

The company first announced a $5-a-ton increase but later lowered it to $4 a ton. Any customer who purchased paper at the $5 increase price gets the rebate, a company official said.

SOWERBY LEADS OWN WORK FOR ORGAN AND STRINGS

The American composer Leo Sowerby conducted his own "Classic Concerto" for organ and string orchestra at a concert given last night in Christ Church Cathedral.

LEVER BROTHERS CO., NEW YORK, N. Y.

The concerto proved to be a strong work, with two rugged and energetic fast movements and a rhapsodic slow movement that was particularly well written for the organ. Sowerby also conducted the orchestra in three allegro movements of three organ and orchestra sonatas by Mozart. Included in the program were choral compositions for boys' voices and orchestra by Franz Tunder and Alessandro Scarlatti. Arnsatt conducted these works and also the Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 of Bach and "Music for Strings" by Sir Arthur Bliss.

The concert was one of a series being given under the auspices of the Cathedral.

MAN INJURED IN CRASH IN FAIRGROUNDS PARK DIES

John Kelley, 3717 Westminster place, a retired engineer, died at City Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Jan. 9 in an automobile collision at Kossuth and Vandeventer drives in Fairgrounds Park.

Kelley, 87 years old, was a passenger in a car driven by Lester Culp, 2612 Kirsh street, Alton. The Culp machine collided with a car being driven by Thomas J. Lineback, 7042 Ethel avenue, Richmond Heights.

The Culp machine spun around, a door flew open and Kelley was thrown to the pavement, injuring his head, police reported. Kelley was employed at the Masonic Temple prior to 1932. Earlier he was a lubricating engineer for Shell Oil Co.

HUMPHREY SAYS BENSON VIOLATES LAW IN MISSOURI

Minnesota Senator Asserts Fired ASC Employes Continue to Receive Checks.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 — Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, charged today that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson and one of his top aids "are guilty of violations of the law" in their handling of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation program in Missouri.

In a speech in the Senate, Humphrey charged that some county office managers for the program still are on the federal payroll despite the fact that they have been dismissed by county ASC committees.

The aid named by Humphrey, was H. L. Manwaring, deputy administrator for production adjustment in the Agriculture Department's commodity stabilization service, who directs the ASC program.

Still Getting Checks.
"I should like to ask the secretary," Humphrey said, "how it happens that he can still employ people on the federal payroll who have been dismissed for a month or two months are still receiving checks."

"I want to know whether or not the provisions of the Hatch Act apply to appointees in the state ASC program and, if not, when were they repealed. Furthermore, I want to know if those in authority in the Department of Agriculture put road blocks in the path of a duly selected and authorized Senate subcommittee which was carrying out a formal request for a formal inquiry into a matter of great public importance."

The Hatch Act prohibits political activity by federal employees.

Humphrey, chairman of a subcommittee which investigated complaints against the operation of the ASC program in Missouri last summer, said he had written Manwaring stating that "there is outright political manipulation and open partisan politics" on the part of the state chairman of the ASC program in Missouri, Murray C. Colbert.

Humphrey protested that the re-appointment of Colbert, whose term as chairman expired last Dec. 31, "has come about at a time when his office is under investigation by a duly established subcommittee of the Senate."

'Rules Violated.'
He charged that "rules and regulations have been flagrantly violated" by Benson appointees in the state and that neither the Secretary, Manwaring nor Colbert had replied to charges brought against Colbert by Senators Thomas C. Hennings Jr. and Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrats, and various ASC county committees.

Humphrey said that Department of Agriculture officials will be called before his subcommittee soon to face further questioning on the Missouri situation and other "cases of abuse of the farmer committee system, as a prelude to legislation aimed at protecting rights of farmers to run their own farm programs at the local level."

Testimony at the Humphrey subcommittee hearings in Missouri indicated that Benson appointees at the state level were forcing the hiring of county ASC office managers on a political basis and firing elected farmer-committeemen who resisted this policy.

Under department regulations, farmers elect their own committees by counties to administer the soil conservation and support loan programs.

Soil Bank Program.
Noting that the proposed soil bank program for relief of farmers would be administered by the ASC committee structure, Humphrey said:

"It is imperative therefore that the farmer-elected committee system be removed from partisan politics and be free of official coercion and intimidation. Both of these unfortunate and regrettable conditions exist in Missouri and elsewhere."

As for the reappointment of Colbert, Humphrey observed "I have seldom encountered such outright disdain for evidence gathered by a subcommittee of this body as has been exhibited by Secretary Benson."

HOUSING FUNDS TRANSFER IN E. ST. LOUIS UPHOLD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 19 — Transfer of $500,000 in federal housing funds and title to five East St. Louis low-income housing projects to the East St. Louis Housing Authority was upheld today by the Illinois Supreme Court.

The opinion affirmed a ruling by Circuit Judge Quinten Spivey of Belleville which forced the St. Clair County Housing Authority to surrender title to the funds and projects in 1954.

The court also affirmed the Madison County Court's dismissal of objections of the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio Railroad to 1951 county taxes. The railroad had sought an $18,578 tax refund. A State Revenue Department sales tax claim of $7185 against the Belleville Shoe Manufacturing Co. for 45,000 pairs of boots sold to the Army, also was upheld.

Biblical Decision.
HEBRON, Conn. (UPI)—The Rev. Douglas Pimm explained that he accepted a call here instead of another offer because he opened the Bible at random to the second chapter of Samuel: "And David said, 'Whither shall I go up?' and the Lord said, 'unto Hebron.'"

NEHRU ACCEPTS INVITATION TO VISIT W. GERMANY

NEW DELHI, Jan. 19 (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru has accepted an invitation to visit West Germany. The exact date will be announced later, a joint statement issued by Nehru and visiting West German Vice Chancellor Franz Bluecher said today.

Indian official sources said Nehru's visit will take place before or after the commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London in June.

The joint statement said, "The basic aim of Germany and India is the same, namely the preservation and strengthening of world peace."

BUTCHER, FIREMAN HURT IN SUPERMARKET FIRE

A butcher and a city fireman were hurt last night in a two-alarm fire at the supermarket operated by Sylvester Davis at 3801 Connecticut street.

Henry Strahorn, the butcher, spelled smoke and opened the door to the basement. Recoiling from the smoke and flames, he struck a nearby counter, injuring his side.

The fireman, Oscar Voepel, driver for Engine Company No. 38, suffered a broken leg when his foot became entangled in a loop of hose and he was thrown to the ground. The fire, which was confined to the basement and first floor caused damage estimated at $3500 to the building and $1500 to the contents. Its cause was not determined.

Stenographic Transcript of President Eisenhower's Press Conference

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, (AP).

Following is a stenographic transcript of President Eisenhower's press conference today. All of the President's remarks were released by the White House for direct quotation.

THE President: Please be seated.

Well, it's good to see so many faces here again after such a long absence from you. Since I have last seen you, as you can imagine, I have been presented with a number of personal political questions. One of them arises in connection with the notice I have from the state of New Hampshire that my name has been qualified for the inclusion on the list of candidates in their preferential primary.

So, I have written an answer, an answer that, in the present circumstances, seems to me to be applicable in all such cases, and I will read it to you. And have you copies for them?

Press Secretary James C. Haverly: There will be copies.

THE President: There will be copies, so you don't have to take this down in case you should want it verbatim. This is to Mr. Jackson, Deputy Secretary of State of New Hampshire.

(Here the President read the telegram replying to notification that his name had been entered in the New Hampshire preferential primary.)

That is all of the answer that is being made to any political questions. I have no objections to personal questions affecting health or anything of that kind, but that is as far as personal political questions are concerned, all questions have been answered.

Robert E. Clark, I.N.S.—Mr. President: I am not sure whether this infringes on the ground you are outlining here, but can you tell us whether from your experience since returning to the full burden of the White House, your health is up to carrying the burden of the Presidency?

THE President: Well, I would think it would be premature. Mr. Clark, for me to say that in those specific terms, I have had some quite intensive days—yesterday was—and I think that with the—by following closely, as closely as I can, the regime the doctors laid down, that so far I have gotten by very well.

David P. Sentner, Hearst newspapers—Mr. President: What is your personal reaction to Mr. Hoover's suggestion for the appointment of an administrative Vice President?

THE President: Well, of course I and I think everybody connected with the White House, are very grateful to Mr. Hoover for undertaking this study which should long ago have been made; and without any reference to any individual or to my recent illness, the staff of the White House has grown a little bit like Topsy from time to time, with the growing intricacies of government. And what he is trying to do is to provide some of the practices of business in the office of the President, so that the President and his chief advisers can give more time, I think, to policy making.

Now, he told me he had no particular torch to bear for a particular name or title to the office he is holding, but he does want to put by law, if necessary, and by administrative action, greater authority in some individual to do more of the supervisory work.

But I repeat, it is necessary the whole staff arrangement be restudied with respect to space. It would be idle just to increase staffs and have no place to put them. So with respect to space, their fitting in with all of the agencies of government, that is the kind of broad study that should be made.

I think Mr. Hoover's principal purpose is, in the meantime, to provide some kind of relief to future Presidents, and I think he is a man of experience and knows exactly what he is doing. Edward T. Folliard, Washington Post and Times Herald—Mr. President: I don't know whether this comes in the category of questions that are open, but Senator Knowland said the other day that he thought that you would surely make an announcement one way or the other about your plans by mid-February. Is that—

THE President: Well, this is what I have promised, Mr. Folliard: To make the announcement as quickly as a decision is firmly reached in my own mind.

I have no desire whatsoever to confuse the American people or to evade anything you are putting in front of me. But you can well imagine the pressures that are brought upon me every day, and I have to isolate myself from them at times as much as I can in order that I may reach a logical decision.

I will do it as soon as I can. Merriman Smith, United Press—Mr. President: There were some, after your conference with us at Key West, who got the idea from what you said down there that you had reached a tentative decision. Is that a correct conclusion from what you said?

THE President: No. Sarah McClendon, El Paso Times—Mr. President: sir, will you take steps soon to carry out the recommendations of your water resources policy committee? Will you appoint a co-ordinator of water resources for the White House?

THE President: I think I put that report before Congress. I have a man now in this work as far, I believe, as deeply, as administration, a administrative action, can place him, General Bragdon (Ma), Gen. J. S. Bragdon, retired, special assistant to the President for public works planning. But I think that anything more than he is now doing will have to be authorized by Congress.

Raymond P. Brandt, St. Louis Post-Dispatch—On this Dulles article in Life magazine, by Jim Shepley, was any decision reached to use the atomic bomb in those three instances?

THE President: First of all, I am not—I have not read that article, and I have read some of the allegations that he is supposed to have made.

I am not going to take a privately written article and discuss it in detail, and thereby make of it a paper if a paper which, if it is going to discuss those subjects, should be most carefully and properly written.

Now, another thing I am not going to do is to discuss anywhere in the world present, past or possible future decisions and material that comes before the National Security Council.

Now, I don't know all of the things that are alleged to have been said. I have complete faith in Mr. Dulles. I do not know whether they were unfortunate expressions used in that article by him or by someone supposed to be reporting them. But I know he is devoted to peace. He has spent his lifetime in this kind of work. He is a man of great professional skill in the field, and to my mind, the best Secretary of State I have ever known.

Now, that is the answer to that article.

Brandt: Yes. If this is within the purview of that, can you tell us what arrangements are made to inform our allies or Congress on such a decision?

THE President: What decision?

Brandt: To go to the verge of war and then, if necessary, go over?

THE President: Well, I don't admit that you seem to be putting words in my mouth, Mr. Brandt.

This is what I say: That I am supporting before the world a program of peace. It is really waging peace, based upon moral principles of decency and justice and right. If you are going to do that and are not going to be guilty, every time the thing looks dangerous, of a Munich, you have got to stand firmly.

You may interpret that as being at the brink of something, because the other fellow can't see it. But it is his own desires and what he believes to be his best interests.

But when it comes to the matter of war, there is only one place that I would go, and that is to the Congress of the United States, and tell them what I believe.

Milburn Petty, Ohio Daily—Mr. President: last February the Cabinet fuels policy committee recommended against federal control of natural gas production. Do you favor the bill now before the Senate to accomplish that?

THE President: You know I have been over that subject—about last June or July, early in the summer, someone here asked this question. I went into it in the greatest detail, including, I believe, some comments on the bill before the Congress where this matter is still being studied. If you will look up that answer, and I am sure Mr. Hagerty will give it to you, that is all I have to say.

William H. Lawrence, New York Times—Mr. President: have you considered what, if anything, should be done about the failure of the Constitution to specify when and by whom the disability of the President might be declared, and when and by whom it might be removed?

THE President: Well, when you are as closely confined to your bed as I was for some time, you think about lots of things, and this was one of the foremost in my mind.

I do believe that there should be some agreement on the exact meaning of the Constitution, who has the authority to act. The Constitution seems to be clear that Congress cannot only make the laws of succession, but it can determine what is to be done, and it says, "in the case of so-and-so and so-and-so," but it does not say who is to determine the disability of the President. And we could well imagine a case where the President would be unable to determine his own disability.

I think it is a subject that, in its broadest aspects, every phase of it should be carefully studied by the Congress, advised with by the Attorney General, and any kind of advice they want from the executive department, and some kind of a resolution of doubt reached. I think it would be good for the country.

Chalmers M. Roberts, Washington Post and Times Herald—Mr. President: on the foreign issue, sir, within the limitation match. I think, you have placed, I would like to ask this:

I believe you told us at the time last year that the Congress passed a resolution giving you authority to use the armed forces if Quemoy or Matsu were attacked, on the basis of your judgment at that time as to whether this was an attack on Formosa. The implication of the Dulles article to which reference has been made at one point, was that you had made a decision at one time.

May I ask, sir, have you ever made a decision as to whether your position that you will make that when and if the occasion arises?

THE President: I don't believe I will quote further or say anything further on the subject, Mr. Roberts, because, as I say, if I begin to pick pieces of that article and talk about it, then I begin to make it a part of our official thoughts and records, and I am just not going to do it.

Roberts: Well, sir, what I was—I was sorry I mentioned the article then.

What I was trying to determine, sir, was whether what you had told us previously, before this article was conceived, still stood, that you would make the decision if and when the occasion arose.

THE President: Then, I will tell you this: I went to the Congress perfectly honest and told them that in the circumstances we couldn't tell what was going to happen, and there was no way for me to tell and for anyone else in the world, unless he is a far greater genius than I, what that attack was going to mean when it came about.

I think the character of the attack which was carried forward had to determine in the mind of a qualified person whether it was an attack all out against Formosa or whether it was strictly and completely local. So I think you are talking about a hypothetical case that did not eventuate. There is no way of making an answer to it.

Marvin L. Arrowsmith, Associated Press—Mr. President: to go back for a moment to your opening statement, I think you said it could be considered to have a general application.

Would that mean you have no objection to entry of your name in any of the presidential primaries in any state?

THE President: Well, it means that I am not going to make any official objection, certainly, and the statement stands on itself, and I did mean it just that way. It would be my answer to all of these.

Mrs. May Craig, New England papers—Mr. President: do you think it is right and proper that a White House physician should conceal from appropriate officials illness of a President and, too, to refrain for many hours from calling in other physicians to consult on his diagnosis and early treatment?

THE President: Well, you are asking what I assume to be, a hypothetical question—because in my own case, my doctor was in close contact, I think, with others very rapidly, certainly as soon as daylight came, and it was determined what to do about it.

Mrs. Craig:—Sir, I understood it was as much as 10 hours. THE President:—It may have been. But it probably may take some 10 hours to determine whether a person is suffering from having eaten some bad food or some other cause, I am not sure. I don't—I am not a doctor, you are sure of that.

William S. White, New York Times—Without reference to anything, sir, that has been said lately by anybody else—I mean that seriously—would you comment in general on the state of the world, on the state of prospects of peace?

THE President:—Well, there is—we have to get things in perspective.

As you know, for some year or year and a half prior to Geneva, there was a growing pressure, probably more abroad than at home, that some so-called "conference at the summit" be held.

There was great doubt in this country as to the wisdom of the thing. But one point that was very important in reaching a decision, we would not have the United States placed in the position of being sort of dog-in-the-manger, going to have our way about everything or do nothing.

We felt perfectly capable of defending the principles and policies of the United States. And so that meeting was arranged with the earnest intent on our side to make every conciliatory advance that did not impinge upon the principles and values in which we believed.

Now, one thing happened that you could have expected, and which we, of course, had prophesied or anticipated, and that was that a very wave, a great wave of relief spread around, and there was great hope. And, of course, there was hope, but hope must always be tempered by the existence of facts. Those high hopes have not been realized.

So, if we compare our feelings today as to what they were, let us say, in early

August, we have a feeling of great letdown. But if we go back over the period of three years and review the events that have come to pass, the situation is not as dark in many areas. Indeed much brighter, that it was at that time.

To counterbalance that, we have had this growing tension and uneasiness in the Mideast where American policy is to be at ends in all, in the certainty and in the earnest belief that only through friendship among themselves is there ever going to be any peace, prosperity and advancement in that region.

We, of course, in that area do not look on with any great equanimity. It is bound to cause earnest thought and study all the time.

But in the whole general picture we were in a Korean war that, due to the way we were waging it, there was no chance of winning, because the crossing of the Yalu river was apparently made a great international—would—you might say shocked international opinion.

The Indochina war was probably settled on the best basis that could be achieved.

Iran, you will remember, just three years ago now, every week we were expecting almost to lose Iran. That has been settled.

The British bases in Egypt were another great sore point that has been settled.

The Trieste situation, that caused all of us daily uneasiness; the first direct attempt to establish Communism in our continent has been eliminated.

So, there are features that would say, as compared to three years ago, the situation is better and brighter. But I would not be guilty of standing before you and to say that there is any cause for complacency or any lack of fervor and study and work in trying to do better.

Edward P. Morgan, American Broadcasting Co. — Sir, Gen. Ridgway has charged in an article that during the time that he was Army chief of staff decisions were made regarding the size of the armed forces which he did not agree to, but which, it was indicated, that he did by a statement you made in the State of the Union message, saying that the Joint Chiefs were unanimous on it, and he also said that decisions were made in deference to domestic politics on these matters.

Could you comment on that, sir?

The President—Well, first, if ever I have made a military decision out of deference to internal politics, then I have been guilty of (violating) my own best determinations. I am determined never in that field to be influenced by such a thing.

Now, I just make two points: first, every sector of the State of the Union message in which this statement that I—about the unanimous decision was made—every sector of that report is sent to the department having primary responsibility in that field to check it for every fact, every item that is there, to make certain it is correct.

If there is any incorrectness in any of the matters that appear with respect to the Defense Department section, please see Adm. Radford and General—and Mr. Wilson.

And finally, one other thing: As all of you here know, since back in 1940, I have been receiving advice from every kind of military assistant. Their advice is often expressing their own deeply felt, but, let us say, narrow fears.

If I had listened to all of the advice I got during those years, there never would have been a plan for crossing the channel. Indeed, I think we wouldn't have crossed the Atlantic ocean. We certainly would never have invaded Africa and the Mediterranean, and I know we never would have crossed the channel until yet.

So finally there comes places where people in authority must make decisions based on the best advice they get.

Charles E. Shutt, Teleneus—About three weeks ago, sir, Premier Bulganin expressed the thought that another summit meeting might be fruitful. Would you care to express your views on that, sir?

The President—That is one I missed. I haven't heard that one yet. I haven't anything to say about that.

Charles L. Bartlett, Chattanooga Times—Mr. President, you spoke of the pressures that are being put on you in regard to this big decision, and I wondered if you could tell us whether you are being subjected to a series of pressures from the people who come to visit you, friends and officials, or whether you are being left to make this big decision in relative solitude?

The President—Well, you are pressing very closely to the limits of the field that I debarred, but I will say this: I myself said I would seek the advice of my trusted friends and associates and I have been busy doing it. But as that goes on, there is a flood of mail, and the mail is generally of one tenor only. I am—after all, a person, no matter how many political enemies he has, does also have lots of friends, and it is—they believe in him, and they are very anxious to express their views. So that is what I referred to when I said that.

Robert G. Spivack, New York Post—Recently you suggested a commission to study acts of violence against Negroes in certain states.

I wonder if you have discussed this with Attorney General Brownell or the FBI, and if that isn't really one of their functions?

The President—Well, what I want to find out is, of course, someone to try to define the lines in which federal responsibility in the great fields of civil rights lay.

Now, I don't remember that I said "Negroes." I have forgotten some of the details of that message. But I do recall that what I was interested in is to find out where we are violating and where the Federal Government has any responsibility whatsoever.

Laurence H. Burd, Chicago Tribune—Mr. President, has any date been set for this medical examination that you will have next month?

The President—Thank you for asking the question. I came over from my office this morning and knew there was something I had forgotten to do.

Turning to Hagerty: You remember that.

No, there hasn't.

Clark R. Mollenhoff, Des Moines Register and Tribune—Many of the Middle Western Republicans have been suggesting price supports on hogs and prices ranging from something like $16 to $18. I wonder if you could give us your viewpoint on the use of price supports on hogs during the present farm emergency?

COMMITTEE FOR PASSAGE OF MALINE BONDS FORMED

A Citizens Committee for the Maline Bonds has been formed by 17 St. Louis county communities as an agency to urge passage of a $1,700,000 bond issue for a major trunk sewer at a special election Feb. 7. It was announced yesterday. A two-thirds majority of those voting is required for favorable action.

Communities affected by the pollution problem in Maline creek are Bellefontaine Neighbors, Berkeley, Bellerive, Bel-Ridge, Calverton Park, Charlack, Cool Valley, Dellwood, Jennings, Kinloch, Margona Village, Maryland Heights, Moline Acres, Normandy, St. John, Sycamore Hills and Ferguson.

Albert B. DuRocher, a teacher at Lafayette elementary school in St. Louis and a resident of Berkeley, is chairman of the committee. Other officers are Robert C. Storey, Ferguson city manager, vice chairman and secretary; Elmer L. Helm, Jennings, manager of the Famous-Barr Northlands store, treasurer, and Mrs. L. E. Siefert, Ferguson, chairman of the speakers bureau.

13-YEAR-OLD GIRL ATTACKED AND KILLED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Jan. 19 (AP)—A 13-year-old girl returning home from a dancing lesson was throttled with her own scarf, raped and dumped on a deserted waterfront street corner last night. It was the latest in a rash of sex crimes in Ontario province.

Four hours after Linda Lampkin left the dancing school, a passing fuel truck driver, Douglas Judges, discovered her body sprawled across a curb. The knotted green scarf cut a quarter-inch into her neck.

Police began looking for a panel truck reported seen in the district about an hour before the body was found. Police are still seeking the man who attacked 5-year-old Susan Cadieux and left her to die of exposure in a London, Ont., lumberyard Jan. 6. Four criminal attacks have been reported in Hamilton since just before Christmas.

ST. LOUIS SCHOLARSHIP FUND'S PLANS DISCUSSED

Scholarship funds for high school, vocational school and college students from the greater St. Louis area should be available this June, Robert L. Baker told an organization committee of the proposed Greater St. Louis Scholarship Fund today.

The committee, meeting in the Board of Education building, discussed plans to incorporate the fund this month as a non-profit, private organization to aid students in public, private and parochial schools in need of financial assistance to continue their education.

Baker, principal of McKinley High School, said the group hopes to raise a minimum of $2,500,000 in a four-year period as an endowment fund to finance its program.

Library Program Canceled.

The family affairs program scheduled at 8 p.m. today at St. Louis County Library, 6814 Natural Bridge road, Normandy, has been canceled because of the weather. The program, a film-lecture on Guatemala by Miss Florence Freyermuth, will be presented March 29.

SKELETON STAYS IN CLOSET

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—The star exhibit in trial of a $20,000 lawsuit, a human skeleton, was never placed on display in Common Pleas Court.

The skeleton languished all morning inside a metal cabinet beside the judge's bench, but the case was settled before it was used. The suit involved a spine injury and the skeleton was to have been used to show structure of the sacroiliac joint.

D. K. ARMSTRONG CONVICTION ON TAX CHARGES UPHELD

Conviction of D. K. Armstrong, former Republican Congressman, on a charge of federal income tax evasion was upheld here today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. A jury at Kansas City found him guilty of evading payment of $3092 in taxes by filing false returns for 1947, 1948 and 1949. He was fined $1500.

The appeal contended the jury had been given inadequate instructions by United States District Judge Albert A. Ridge, and further that the conviction should be reversed because three jurors after the trial was over had signed affidavits asserting they were not convinced of Armstrong's guilt. The appellate court found the instructions adequate, and pointed out that the jurors had voiced no dissent when asked in court if the verdict was unanimous.

REDS STILL TRAIL IN TECHNOLOGY, GENERAL SAYS

U.S. Air Research Chief, However, Declares Industry Must Play Bigger Role.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Thomas S. Power, chief of the Air Research and Development Command, said today he was confident that the United States still leads Russia in "qualitative superiority in most fields" of military technology.

Gen. Power told a luncheon meeting of the National Security Industrial Association that the Russians, however, are trying to surpass us.

To maintain our program of "security by deterrent force" he said we need a proper number of qualified scientists and engineers and an "aggressive development program utilizing the latest findings of basic research."

Industry, he said, would have to assume a larger share of the research and development burden. He pointed out that "it is an undeniable fact that the results of government-sponsored research and development frequently lend themselves to far-reaching commercial exploitation."

He said it was "well for the public to be aware of this relationship between the military and industry" since public funds "in vast amounts" have been spent for defense and it could be expected that many billions more will be spent in years to come.

Summarizing Soviet military gains of the past few years, Gen. Power said they have now the "largest fighter defense force in the world, completely jet equipped" as well as medium and heavy jet bombers "which can be compared with the most advanced aircraft we possess."

In addition, Power said, the Russians "appear to be closing the gap between Soviet and Western technology" in the field of electronics.

He also reported the Russians "appear to be making progress in the development of long-range missiles to supplement their long-range bomber force."

Russia May Fire 1500-Mile Missile This Year, Senator Says. WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UP)—Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem., Washington), said yesterday Russia probably will test-fire a 1500-mile ballistic missile before year's end.

The test, he said, would add "ballistic" blackmail to the Soviet "arsenal of conquest" and "destroy our greatest single advantage in the contest for air-atmospheric supremacy—our system of advanced overseas bases."

Jackson made the statement in a speech to the National Security and Foreign Relations Commissions of the American Legion.

Mere possession of such a weapon, he said, would permit the Kremlin "to blackmail our allies within its range into neutrality or worse."

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland of California also addressed the Legion group. He said that Russia's objective still is world domination despite the Soviet smiles displayed at last summer's "summit" meeting at Geneva.

Jackson, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, attacked what he called lack of "urgency" in the United States ballistic missile program and demanded it be put on a "wartime footing."

BOY, 6, IS FOUND HANGED FROM BANISTER AT HOME

Michael Smith, 6-year-old son of Mrs. Nola Smith, 773 Aubert avenue, was found hanged last night in the hallway of their home.

Mrs. Smith said she had called the boy to come to supper and when he failed to answer, went in search of him. His body was found suspended by a length of clothesline from a banister on the second floor. An inhalator was used but he was pronounced dead of strangulation at Homer G. Phillips Hospital. His mother, a Negro, said the boy frequently played cowboy and may have hanged himself accidentally.

Flashes of Life

Exposure.

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Police didn't make any arrests in a "gambling" raid but they created some curiosity as to who might have been cheating.

A squad of 10 officers rushed into a Squirrel Hill restaurant where 80 men were playing cards. There was no money in sight so there were no arrests. However, officers ordered the men to stand up and, when they did, an electrical gadget fell to the floor from a man's trousers.

The gadget, said police had been fastened to a garter and its owner used it to signal to a partner. Police left the players, trying to figure which one had it strapped on.

Slightly Used.

BILLINGS, Mont. (UP)—Fire Chief Lucian B. Smith asked the city council to replace fire engine No. 5 which he said is "unsafe to drive."

Smith's annual report said engine No. 5 "is a 1916 model which has wooden wheels, chain drive and two-wheel brakes."

SUPPLY OF SKATES THINNER THAN ICE, MERCHANTS SAY

Ice skate suppliers here are skating on thin ice. If cold weather increases the demand for skates, dealers declared today they would be quickly out of stock, without any chance of getting more skates until the hot-weather months.

Sporting goods stores report skate sales, which had nearly touched zero two years ago, are rising. The movement of residents to the county, full of shallow ponds lacking "No skating" signs, has helped the sport, they declare.

Manufacturers are unable to fill their increased orders, wholesalers report. A tight supply of leather shoes for skates is a major factor causing the shortage, one said.

Because new skates are hard to find, business in repairing skates has boomed, reported one retailer eyeing a four and one-half foot pile of skates needing repair.

MAYOR SAYS PENDING BILL WOULD BOOST PRICE OF GAS

Passage of the Harris-Fulbright bill pending in Congress would result in an increase in the price paid by consumers for natural gas, Mayor Raymond R. Tucker said yesterday.

He expressed the opinion that regulation of the price of natural gas at its source is necessary to prevent "unreasonable and arbitrary" increases in the cost to consumers.

In opposing enactment of the measure, which would end government price controls on this resource, the Mayor said he thought that federal regulations could be continued without undue restrictions on producers.

PAY FOR SAFETY JOB BOOSTED IN ILLINOIS

Phil Brown, Leaving Police Staff, to Get $2900 More Than Predecessor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 19.—Phil M. Brown, superintendent of the state police for the last three years, who is being transferred to a highway safety job, will be paid $2900 a year more than the man whose place he is taking, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

Gov. William G. Stratton, who announced that Brown would move over to the highway safety position Feb. 1, said

The police superintendent will succeed Harvey Downing of Jacksonville, whose annual salary was $5100. He is resigning because of ill health. Brown will be assistant co-ordinator of the division of highway safety, in the Department of Public Safety. The co-ordinator is Robert Campbell, who also is paid $5000.

Joseph D. Bibb, director of public safety, is paid $12,000. The governor said Brown would be more useful in the safety work, and Brown expressed satisfaction with the change.

Brown once was a policeman at Watseka, and later was sheriff of Iroquois county. In that capacity he achieved influence in the politically powerful Sheriffs Association of Illinois.

In announcing Brown's removal as state police head, in favor of William H. Morris, assistant superintendent, who is to serve until appointment of a new chief, Gov. Stratton asserted that no demotion was involved.

Both the Governor and Brown maintained that no question of gambling was concerned. The Governor commented that Brown, head of the state police at the outset of the administration, was "loyal, devoted and experienced."

EARLY-MORNING SOUNDING OF HORN COSTS DRIVER $25

Sounding an automobile horn intermittently for more than two hours in the middle of the night is indeed disturbing the peace, Magistrate Webster Karrenbrock of St. Charles decided today.

James Peyton, a taxicab driver living in the 3400 block of Vista avenue, St. Louis, admitted he did it and was fined $25 and costs.

He said he had some drinks early yesterday and decided to visit a friend at O'Fallon, St. Charles county, about 2 a.m.

He stopped in a driveway and sounded off, thinking he had the right place. By 4:30 a.m., with the neighborhood thoroughly aroused but remaining indoors, he decided he had the wrong driveway and drove away.

By that time someone was wide awake enough to give police a description of the car.

NEW REMAPPING ACT UPHELD IN ILLINOIS

Supreme Court Decides on 1955 Law — To Issue
Opinion Later.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 19 (AP)—The Illinois Supreme Court today upheld validity of the 1955 Legislative Reapportionment Act.

The court gave its ruling in a brief statement, and said it would issue an opinion later.

The new Remapping Act, revising the legislative alignment for the first time in more than 50 years, sets up 58 Senate and 59 House districts. These replaced the old 51 districts for each branch.

Under reapportionment, Cook county gains control of the House for the first time. Downstate retains its controls in the Senate.

The test case was taken to the supreme court by Edward V. Donovan of Chicago, a taxpayer. His main argument was that the Legislature, in laying out the new districts, did not meet a constitutional requirement that Senate districts had to be uniform in area. The Chicago Senate districts range in size from 5.8 square miles to more than 20 square miles.

Attorneys for the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners, who are defendants in the suit, contended that the Legislature drew the new districts with "approximate equality" and nothing more was required. The Reapportionment Act called for Senate districts to be laid out along area lines and House districts on a population basis.

The election commission said that if Donovan's argument were sound, it would have required that counties outside of Cook be "torn into fragments" in arriving at the Senate districts.

Candidates for the Legislature began filing their primary nominating petitions this week under the new districts. If the court had held the law unconstitutional, it would have thrown the election for legislative jobs into confusion with the possibility that Assembly candidates would have had to run in the state at large.

PRESSURE MAKES NEW WHITE HOUSE 'AID' BLOW HIS TOP

Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—The White House has a new spokesman. It is a red plastic figure of a man named "Albert" who "blows his top" when pressed.

"Albert" was unveiled publicly yesterday for the first time. James C. Hagerty, the White House press secretary, used the toy to give his answer to a news conference question. Hagerty had been asked for White House reaction to a demand by Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic presidential contender, that the President repudiate or oust Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for his controversial "brink of war" interview with Life magazine.

Hagerty listened to the query with a grin, then reached for "Albert." He pressed the toy, and Albert's head flew high on a stretched neck.

BAGHDAD PACT MILITARY GROUP MEETS FIRST TIME

BAGHDAD, Iraq, Jan. 19 (AP)—The military committee of the Baghdad pact met yesterday for the first time. The group was set up by the foreign ministers of the five member countries at their organizing meeting last month.

The committee is composed of 21 representatives of the army commands of the member nations—Iraq, Turkey, Pakistan, Iran and Britain.

Meeting here also yesterday were the security chiefs of five Middle Eastern nations. They agreed on unified measures to prevent subversive and Communist elements from infiltrating the region. The nations which took part in the conference were Iraq, Turkey, Iran, Lebanon and Jordan.

U.S. SERUM HELPS FIGHT JAUNDICE EPIDEMIC IN INDIA

NEW DELHI, Jan. 19—The Indian government yesterday received a gift of $1,000,000 worth of urgently needed medical supplies from the United States to fight a jaundice epidemic in this city. More than 3000 cases have been reported so far with about 30 deaths.

The United States has supplied enough gamma globulin serum to treat 100,000 persons. According to medical opinion here there is no complete treatment for jaundice, but the serum contains concentrated antibodies taken from human blood plasma which help build up resistance against the disease.

MAN CUT, BURNED IN FIRE ABOVE HIS CONFECTIONERY

William Vowels, operator of a confectionery at 1800 Helen street, suffered cuts on his face and burns of the face and hands in a fire in his living quarters above the confectionery last night.

His daughter, in the rear of the shop, heard Vowels' cries for help but was unable to reach him by a rear stairway because of smoke and flames. Neighbors who saw him breaking the glass out of a front window obtained a ladder and helped him down. He was taken to City Hospital.

QUARRIES TO BE REQUESTED TO CUT EXPLOSIVE CHARGES

Operators of quarries in St. Louis county will be asked to reduce the size of explosive charges in blasting, because some home owners have complained that their homes were damaged, the County Council decided yesterday.

Henry J. Vonderbrugg, director of public works, who was asked to study the matter last week, was given more time to complete it. He said other causes of cracks in walls and foundations could be shock waves from jet airplanes, large trucks, or drouth.

Council Chairman Harold Carey asked the county counselor to prepare an ordinance giving county officials supervision over all unusual blasting.

EISENHOWER WANTS AIR ROUTE REVIEW

Asks for Check of Pan American Application in Orient.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—President Eisenhower asked the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday to review in the light of "new circumstances" the application of Pan American World Airways for a great circle route to the Orient.

The board recommended almost a year ago that the application be denied. Mr. Eisenhower notified the board last Feb. 1, however, that he was holding his decision in abeyance.

In a letter to CAB chairman Ross Rixley, Mr. Eisenhower said yesterday he saw no occasion at this time to change that decision.

"I have been advised, however, that new circumstances and new developments have arisen that may make at least some of the considerations previously raised by the board no longer applicable," he said. He did not say what these were, but asked the board to review the case and advise him "as soon as possible" of its findings.

Pan American currently operates to the Orient by way of Honolulu, while Northwest Airlines uses the northern or Great Circle route by way of Anchorage, Alaska.

Northwest has strenuously opposed attempts by Pan American to add the northern route to its Trans-Pacific service.

SENATE GROUP VOTES MORE FUNDS FOR DISASTER LOANS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Senate Banking Committee today approved bills providing $35,000,000 more for flood and other disaster relief loans, and additional loan aid for disaster stricken home owners.

The bills now go to the Senate for consideration. One of the measures, intended as a substitute for a House-passed bill, would merge the Small Business Administration's disaster loan and business loan operations, and provide the extra $35,000,000. It would boost the total lending authority for the combined operation from $175,000,000 to $210,000,000.

It would fix a maximum interest rate of 3 per cent on SBA's disaster home loans, correct disaster business loans, and SBA's share of disaster business loans made in participation with private lenders. The other measure would authorize the Federal Housing Administration to make repair loans to owners of flood-stricken new residential properties, without regard to the general requirement that the house must be at least six months old before it can get an FHA repair loan.

BILLIKENS, 32 AHEAD AT ONE STAGE, WALLOP DE PAUL

SMITH NETS 29 POINTS; VICTORY IS 6TH IN ROW

By Robert Morrison
Ray Meyer, the DePaul coach, was dazed.
His team that had played and stayed with the best was brought to the verge of collapse last night by the St. Louis University Billikens in their sixth straight victory.
The score was 89 to 71 but that 18-point margin was deceiving. It was as great as 32 points at one time before Eddie Hickey completed clearing his bench in sending in the scrubs.
The way things were going after the barreling Bills rang up 20 straight points for a 22-2 lead in the first seven and a half minutes, the margin might have easily become any given number.
"Listen, this is a good DePaul team," said Meyer, shaking his head. "It hadn't played a bad game this season. It's been beaten, sure, but it was in every game... Minnesota, Kentucky, San Francisco, Illinois, Notre Dame at South Bend, Ohio State. I don't know what happened."

Billikens in Great Form.
What happened to DePaul was hardly surprising. The team that had played and stayed with the best was brought to the verge of collapse last night by the St. Louis University Billikens in their sixth straight victory.

DePaul in Possession, but Bills Had a Ball

DePaul's RON SOBIESZCZYK had control of the ball at this particular moment, but the St. Louis University Billikens were in charge most of the time as the Bills walloped the Chicago team, 89 to 71, in a non-league game at Kiel Auditorium. Billiken players in the photo are JOE UELK (43), GRADY SMITH (behind Sobieszczyk) and JIM McLAUGHLIN (45). No. 20 of DePaul is KEN JAKSY.

Marciano Has Run
Out of Opponents.

RECENT rankings of the various divisions by the National Boxing Association point up the fact that Rocky Marciano has run out of opponents for his heavyweight crown.

But Rocky is not likely to retire and the powers that be in boxing will have to do something about getting him somebody to fight.

That leads to the conclusion that Archie Moore likely will get his wish for another match with the titleholder, come next June.

Moore has contested ever since Rocky knocked him out in a sensational fight in New York last September that he (Archie) was still the only worthwhile opponent in sight for the champion. And circumstances may prove him to be right, if he gets past Yolande Pompey in their bout in London.

The N.B.A. recognizes no logical contender for Marciano but puts Bob Baker, No. 1 among possibles and Nino Valdes No. 2. After that the organization lists eight heavyweights in the "honorable mention" class. They are, in order, Tommy Jackson, New York; Johnny Holman, Chicago; Willie Pastrano, New Orleans; Johnny Summerlin, Detroit; Bob Satterfield, Chicago; Franco Cavachi, Italy; Jimmy Slade, New York; and Harold Carter, New Jersey.

Not a thrill in a carload among that lineup. Each man mentioned has too many things against him to be regarded seriously as a contender for the heavyweight championship.

One not mentioned, but regarded as possibly the next heavyweight champion of the world is Floyd Patterson, the young New York Negro, who is now rated No. 1 contender for Moore's 175-pound title.

Defeated Only Once.

PATTERSON has been defeated but once in his career, that time on points by Joe Maxim. He has a long string of victories to his credit and is growing both physically and as a champion prospect.

He is handled by a crafty, old-time boxing man, Gus D'Amato, who has said peevishly that he would not consider a match for his young man with Marciano until 1957.

The manager has been applauded for that decision, for many youngsters have been brought along too quickly since the television era started. As a result, they have been burned out long before they should have been.

D'Amato has said that he is going to avoid that mistake with Patterson, who weighs, normally, only a little more than 170 pounds.

In recent weeks, however, D'Amato has appeared to hedge somewhat in his statements and has said that now he believes Floyd will be ready for his chance at Marciano sometime this year, in September, if not in June.

Taking nothing away from Patterson's ability, it still would appear that D'Amato's first idea was the better one.

Naturally it is tempting to have a shot at the heavyweight crown and the big payday which usually goes with such an event. Then, too, there probably is pressure being put upon D'Amato to consider the fight because of the lack of opponents for Marciano and the necessity for the whole boxing structure to keep the heavyweight champion active.

Still, for Patterson, it would seem best that he wait awhile.

Robinson and Olson.

AND now Ray Robinson awaits a post-nuptial match with Bob Olson for the middleweight title. Ray, and his handlers, envision a $500,000 gate if the bout is held in New York in June.

Well, it should be a very interesting contest, but when you're talking of half-million dollar receipts, you're really dreaming. Their bout in Chicago drew something like $140,000, and if you'd make the return about $200,000, you'd probably be pretty close.

After all, that's pretty good for a fight for which there doesn't seem to be much sense, anyway.

Joey Glambra, Eduardo Lausae and probably others should get the chance at the 160-pound crown before Olson.

There is the matter of the contract which was signed before Robinson stripped Olson of the title in Chicago, of course, and Bob can, and probably will, insist that Robinson go through with their agreement.

Always lurking in the background is a certain gentleman named Ralph (Tiger) Jones, who handed Robinson a thorough shellacking last January. He certainly is entitled to some consideration, regardless of the fact that he has lost some bouts since he defeated Robinson.

The middleweight division is one of the best in the business today and some interesting matches are in prospect among the 160-pounders.

Saddler Jeered as He Keeps Title With T.K.O. Over Elorde

Filipino Lasts Till
Round 13

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19 (UP)—

Sandy Saddler, who never will receive a good sportsmanship award, strutted into his seventh year as the world featherweight champion today while irate fans jeered.

The little Pier Six brawler from New York City defended his crown last night by scoring a technical knockout over Flash Elorde of the Philippines when the contest was halted in the thirteenth round because of the Islander's bleeding left eye.

As soon as the bout was over, the Cow Palace switchboard was flooded by long distance telephone calls from television fans protesting against the champ's tactics.

Referee Ray Flores and Commission Physician Dr. Robert Laddan agreed that the bout should be stopped after arguing hotly between the eleventh and twelfth rounds whether Elorde should continue. Flores had called time in the tenth and eleventh to have Laddan examine the wound.

Saddler was ahead on all three cards when the end came at 59 seconds of the thirteenth before a booing crowd of about 5000, which seemed to have come to the Cow Palace in hopes that Sandy would be defeated. Judges Eddie James and Johnny Bassanelli and Flores all had Saddler leading, 67-65. He led on the United Press card, 68-64.

Saddler weighed 126 and Elorde a pound lighter. The house took $28,273.50.

Head-Boring Tactics.

The victory atoned for a 10-round non-title decision which Elorde gained over Saddler last summer during the titlist's jaunt through the Orient.

The bout, which started as a fairly slow affair, was a bloody scrap from the fifth round on. Elorde, who spent a good part of the night trying to keep his face away from Saddler's grinding head, began to bleed from the mouth in that round.

The damaging cut began to appear above his left eye in the seventh, but in the ninth the artistic southpaw started the blood pouring from Saddler's nose with a rousing set of combinations.

Sandy came out with a slight cut over the right eyebrow in the twelfth, but other than that was not badly marked.

Although there were no actual knockdowns, Saddler bent down in the eighth to pick up his mouthpiece which Elorde had knocked out and the timekeeper hit the mat for a count of one. Sandy's mouthpiece hit the deck again in the twelfth and time he didn't worry about it.

Elorde began to look his best after he complained to Flores in the fourth and sixth rounds about being butted and held.

Sandy Driven to Ropes.

After registering his second protest in the sixth, Elorde sailed into the champion with a barrage of lefts and rights that sent Saddler desperately retreating to the ropes. Six hard lefts caught Saddler during this assault.

Then in the ninth he battered Saddler's nose with a series of lefts and rights. The champ's seconds stopped Saddler's nose-bleed at the bell and Elorde began to fade after that.

But in between these attacks, Saddler kept rolling along while showing his head into Elorde's face. He also scored with looping shots to the face and body. He piled up points with sharp rights to the face.

Two of them rocked the challenger in the fifth and Saddler crashed another one home just before the seventh ended.

The crowd—which tossed a few dead cigar butts toward the ring along with the jeers—really climbed on Saddler when he shoved a left into Elorde's features seconds after the end of the seventh.

This was Saddler's third title defense of the 126-pound crown since he regained it from Willie Pep in 1950. He outpointed Pep in a "wrestling match" a year later, then after a hitch in the Army, outpointed Teddy (Red Top) Davis last February. Sandy now has stopped 101 opponents.

North Carolina, Using Only One Sub, Upsets North Carolina State

Unbeaten Dayton in 13th Win

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Tar Heels of North Carolina, having pulled off one of the year's biggest upsets, began a 15-day respite from college basketball today after having proved that determination sometimes is more important than depth.

The Tar Heels, using only one substitute—and he didn't score—gained sweet revenge by whipping third-ranked North Carolina State 73-69 last night. The Wolfpack had walloped North Carolina, 82-60, in the final of the Dixie Classic last month.

Last night's triumph gave the Tar Heels a 13-2 record for the year and boosted their league-leading Atlantic Coast conference mark to 8-1. Coach Frank McGuire's side were No. 9 in the latest Associated Press poll. While North Carolina was having its fun, Dayton, the nation's second-ranked team behind San Francisco, continued unbeaten by walloping Villanova 71-50 for its thirteenth victory of the campaign.

Pitt, Furman Lose.
In other games, Louisville, No. 10, dumped Memphis State, 85-75; West Virginia defeated Pitt, 84-70; Georgia Tech knocked over Furman, 85-75, despite Darrell Floy's 36 points; and Columbia trampled Yale, 80-54, in an Ivy League match.

Lennie Rosenbluth, North Carolina's sharp-shooting junior, led his team with 23 points although high man for the night was State's Ron Shavlik with 25. The Wolfpack, who are 12-2 for the season, almost tied the game in the closing seconds, but Carolina's Jerry Vayda deflected hard-charging Vic Molodetz's driving layup shot which would have made it 71-71.

Mid-year examinations will leave first place in the A.C.C. unchanged until Feb. 4 when the Tar Heels take on Duke's Blue Devils, who are runners-up with 6-1.

Dayton's Flyers had some trouble from Villanova's zone defense early in their game, but they forged ahead 13-12 and never were headed. Bill Uhl, the Ohio team's 7-foot center, paced the scorers with 19 points.

'Hot Rod' Is Hot.
West Virginia, paced by 'Hot Rod' Hundley's 23 points, choked off Pitt's second-half rally that had sent the Panthers into the lead in the opening minutes. Bob Lazor contributed 26 points in a losing cause.

Floyd, the Furman flash, hit on 14 field goals and eight free throws to maintain his lead among the nation's individual scorers. But Georgia Tech took the lead midway in the second half off four consecutive field goals by Dick Lenhoff.

Columbia, 2-0 in the Ivy League, got 30 points from little Chief Forten, who set a league record for foul shooting. Forte connected on 20 of 21 tries, breaking the mark set by Ed Robinson of last year's Yale team. Robinson had 18. The Lions broke open the contest in the second half after leading by only five points at the intermission.

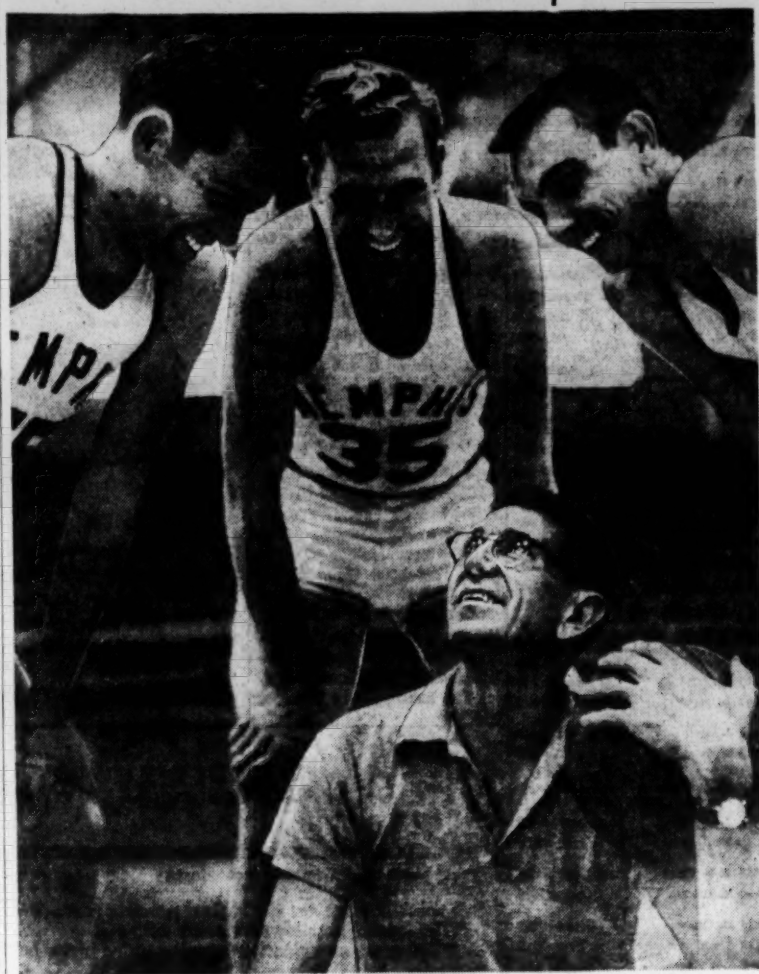

Elsewhere, Wichita, led by Jim Strathe's 21 points, beat Drake 85-76. LaSalle rallied from a poor start to down Penn. 64-62. Army got rolling in the second half to defeat Penn Military, 69-78. Oklahoma City used a zone defense to good advantage in tripping Seattle, 74-70. And South Carolina walloped Clemson 94-79 in another Atlantic Coast Conference encounter.

Ruck to Be Speaker At Southwest Dinner

Bobby Ruck, a standout in baseball, football and basketball four years ago at Southwest High, will be the guest speaker tonight at the Southwest High lettermen's banquet. The affair will take place at Lemmon's Restaurant at 6 o'clock.

Ruck was recently drafted by the Pittsburgh Pirates for their Hollywood team in the Pacific Coast League after playing for four seasons in the New York Yankees' organization. He hit 285 and batted in 109 runs for Winston-Salem in the Carolina League last year.

Puxico's Gift to Memphis

Memphis State, Defeated by Louisville, Practices Here Today For Game With Washington U.

By Harold Tuthill

Memphis State, which last night lost to Louisville U., will arrive in St. Louis in time for a workout on the Washington University Field House floor late this afternoon. The Tennessee school, ranked among the first 20 basketball teams in the country, will oppose Washington University here tomorrow night.

Washington, breezing along with a 10-2 overall mark, has won eight in a row and needs a victory over the Tigers from Memphis to tie a record of most games won in succession in one season. The Bears have done that on two previous occasions—in 1920-21 and in 1946-47.

Bob Casten, injured Washington guard, is unlikely to play against Memphis. This means that Stan Smith will be used to give Bud Crist and Art Borchers a hand on the backline. Jim Barton and Bill Gullion will man the forwards and Jim Paul will start at center with Les Medley ready to relieve him.

Memphis will have three and possibly four Puxico, Mo., boys on the floor at the start. Win Wilfong, Forest Arnold and Elmore Fortner who played together on the undefeated 1951 Puxico High team, are definite starters. Orby Arnold, Forest's brother, a 6-6 freshman, and James Hockaday, also a 6-6 freshman, may get Dr. Eugene Lambert's nomination as starters.

Aussie Batters Aussie's World Swim Record

SYDNEY, Jan. 19 (INS)—Australian swimmer Murray Rose, competing in the New South Wales championships, bettered the world 800-yard free style record last night with a 9:34.3 clocking in the North Sydney Olympic Pool.

The old record of 9:37.5 was held by John Marshall, also of Australia. Rose failed by seven-tenths of a second to beat the world 800-meter record of 9:30.7 held by Ford Konno of the United States.

Blackhawks' Stanley Suffers Leg Injury

CHICAGO, Jan. 19 (AP)—Defenseman Allan Stanley will be lost to the Chicago Blackhawks at least for their next two National Hockey League games.

Stanley suffered a charley-horse in Tuesday night's 2-2 tie with the New York Rangers at Omaha and a blood clot which later developed burst today. He was taken to Hennrich Hospital. Coach Dick Irwin said he would not be available against either the Boston Bruins Friday or the Montreal Canadiens Sunday. Both games are in Chicago.

Next Concordia Opponent Has Plenty of Height

Richard Schromm, a St. Louis player is likely to be in the starting lineup of the Central Missouri State (Warrensburg) Mules when they play Concordia Seminary here tomorrow night.

Schromm, 5-11, only recently broke in the Warrensburg lineup that includes such big men as Tom Graham (6-7), Lou Sandbath (6-6) and Bob Irvin (6-6). Others used frequently by Coach Earl Keth are Bob Gunter (5-10) and Dale Russell (6-2).

"We'll be conceding a lot of height," admitted Concordia Coach Pete Peterson, "but we'll really try to run them down. Our speed has paid off for us in quite a few games this winter and especially against Central College last Friday."

Concordia defeated Central, stopping an 11-game Eagle winning streak, with an 80-58 decision in which the Preachers scored an amazing 30 points in a span of eight and a half minutes to start the second half. The next night Concordia outscored Shurtleff by seven field goals, but lost the game because of a poor showing at the free throw line.

"You ought to win games in which you outscore the other team 14 points from the field and make 41 per cent of your shots," Peterson said. "But we let the Shurtleff game go through the window, and we'll be trying all the harder this week."

Warrensburg lost its first five games this season but won three of its five most recent starts. Concordia is 6-4 for the season.

New Golf Trophy.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 19 (AP)—The Ladies Professional Golf Association (L.P.G.A.) has announced the establishment of an annual trophy for high points in tournament play, in honor of Babe Zaharias.

This "Babe Zaharias Golfer of the Year Trophy" will be awarded according to a performance rating, taking into account both the player's finish and the number of tournaments she plays in.

Caliente Golf Tourney Draws Field of 130

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 19 (AP)—More than 130 golfers begin play today in the 72-hole Agua Caliente Open over the Caliente Country Club course, scene of many rich tournaments in the 1930s. Most of the big names on the winter circuit are shooting for the $2200 first prize of the $12,500 event.

The tournament sponsored by a Monterrey (Mexico) brewery, replaces the San Diego (Calif.) Open on the winter tour. The San Diego Open will be played in October. Tommy Bolt, Mike Souchak and Gene Littler are among the established favorites. Others expected to give a good account include Bill Maxwell, Freddie Haas, Wally Ulrich, Jay Hebert, Al Besselink, Doug Ford and Dutch Harrison. Also in the field are two former Agua Caliente Open champions, Paul Runyan and Fred Morrison, who won their titles during the early 1930s, when the purse went as high as $25,000.

Runyan estimates a score of 877 or 278 will win this year. The 7200-yard par-72 Caliente course is made tough by 64 traps and a cold ocean wind that rises about noon. Saturday and Sunday the low 60 players wind up the last 36 holes.

Buds Roll 3729, Fourth Best Total in History

1269 Game Is Highest For Season in U.S.

The fourth highest three-game score in history and the country's best single game score of the season were bowled by the Budweisers last night as they stayed sharp for the second half of their bid for the national championship this weekend. With Dick Weber firing a perfect 300 game and Don Carter an 806 series, the Buds rolled a 1269 single and a three-game total of 3729 pins.

The record wood-busting came in the Masters League at Floriss Lanes, where the Budweisers last weekend piled up a 965-pin lead over the defending national champion Stroks of Detroit. On Saturday and Sunday the Buds will bowl the final 12 games of their series on the Stroks' home alleys.

In totaling 3729, the Budweisers shot the highest score rolled in St. Louis since Jan. 27, 1937, when the Hermanns set the all-time record of 3797, a mark which still stands. Individual game scores last night were 1228, 1269 and 1232, in that order.

Carter, the two-time national singles champion, included a 290 in his 806 series. Weber led off with a 300 and wound up with 783. Billy Welu had games of 254, 268 and 257 for 779. Pat Patterson included a 278 in his 726 total, and team captain Jerome (Whitey) Harris had 635.

Thus the record book scores were made with one of the squad's hottest shooters of late, Ray Bluth, on the bench. Harris, the captain, is regarded as the sixth man, and did not compete against the Stroks. Here are the scores:

Patterson	254	254	254	758
Harris	254	254	254	758
Welu	254	254	254	758
Weber	300	268	215	783
Totals	1228	1269	1232	3729

The only scores ranking ahead of the Budweisers' 3729, in addition to the Hermanns' record total, are series of 3754 and 3740, both turned in by the Fabers of Teaneck, N.J. The Buds surpassed the previous fourth best score of 3713 rolled by the Hannans of St. Paul in 1934. The sixth best score in history was rolled by a previous Budweiser team from St. Louis, 3672 in 1937.

In the All-Star Doubles League, immediately following the Masters' play, the Buds continued to hammer the pins. Welu and Weber shot 773 and 759 respectively to defeat Harris (659) and Patterson (725). Team totals were 1532 to 1484. The Welu-Weber score was the third best doubles score ever rolled. Earlier this season totals of 1541 and 1534 were bowled in other cities. The Harris-Patterson total was the fifth best in history.

JOHNNY LAYTON

Services for Johnny Layton To Be Saturday

Funeral services for John Milton (Johnny) Layton, one of the greatest sports competitors St. Louis ever produced, will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday from the Math Hermann undertaking establishment, 2161 E. Fair avenue. Burial will be in Bethany Cemetery.

Layton, who was 69 years old, was found dead in bed yesterday. Layton, an Illinois farm boy who came to St. Louis shortly before the World's Fair (1904), had a long and fruitful apprenticeship in billiards. He learned the game here as a kid and then acquired a case-hardened competitive temperament by barnstorming.

In a recent interview he told how he traveled then from one end of the country to the other, posing as an out-of-work farm or factory hand, and picked up a lucrative living by barely defeating the town champion for a side bet. He never permitted himself to win easily for fear the victim would suspect he had been duped.

By the time he got into the big league, playing for national and world championships at both pockets and three-cushions, Layton had seen so much tough competition and such a variety of styles that he was virtually unbeatable.

He won the American professional three-cushion championship in 1920, '21, '22, '23, '29, '30 and '34. In those days the title was worth a minimum of $25,000 in salaries and fees. He was a partner in the operation of billiard rooms in Sedalia, Mo., and in this city in the 20s.

Shortly after he had played some of his greatest billiards, in the mid-30s, Layton suffered serious injuries when struck by a street car in Chicago. After a long convalescence, he returned to the game, his efficiency greatly reduced. Some years later he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and thereafter his playing was only sporadic.

At the time of his death he was living in a rooming house at 4424 Blair av. His wife, Florence, from whom he was separated, lives with their son, William, at 4255 Lee av.

WINTER GROWTH IN TOKYO

Forest of stovepipes which is winter growth peculiar to Tokyo, where central heating is almost unknown. With the onset of cold weather, each office drags out a wood stove and hooks it to a pipe leading to the roof. Some of the pipes are 30 feet long and they frequently ring all four sides of buildings. Building here is the International Trade Ministry.

SNOW COMES TO ST. LOUIS

Snow fight in full fling as students of Frazier school, 1801 Parkridge avenue, Brentwood, take full advantage of the two-inch snowfall which blanketed the St. Louis area last night, breaking the record 46-day drought. Below, workbound motorists wend their cautious way along Gravois avenue today, churning the snow to dark slush under the wheels of their vehicles while less-traveled lanes at left retain bright covering. Careful drivers did not experience as severe difficulties as were encountered last night, before highway crews were able to cover icy intersections with salt and cinders. View is looking east on Gravois at the Utah street intersection.

Television in Review

'Blithe Spirit' Is Slender but Merry

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

NOEL COWARD'S "Blithe Spirit" is a slender tale, the word slender being one that has dogged Coward's steps virtually his whole life, but it was a mighty merry and, to say the least, unusually witty piece for television the other night.

NOEL COWARD

Both its rewards and its defects were almost precisely those of the play and for very good reason. Adaptation is perhaps too strenuous a word for whatever small operation Coward performed in pruning his play down to an hour and a half and readying it for the cameras. The play was simply lifted delicately from the stage and placed in front of the electronic monsters almost intact. It was a one-set play in the theater and it remained a one-set play on TV, where we are accustomed to roaming around a bit. In the theater it started with a couple, talking pure exposition, preparing the way for the small, tidy plot, and on TV it started the same way. Not for Coward is there anything so plebian as a flashback.

IN ADDITION, there was an audience and, from their fairly explosive responses, I rather think it was a very hep audience. In short, this was a smart Broadway opening with a terribly fashionable cast in front of an upper-drawer audience. On the whole it worked out very well.

"Blithe Spirit" is the story of a novelist (Coward) who, in pursuit of a little research on spiritualism, invites a medium (Mildred Natwick) to hold a seance in his house. Pretty much to everyone's surprise, the medium succeeds in materializing the ghost of the novelist's first wife (Lauren Bacall), which comes, naturally, as quite a shock to his very live second wife (Claudette Colbert).

IT'S A SITUATION man of Coward's lighthearted and not especially domestic disposition can have quite a lot of fun with and he does. The air is alive with double meaning (since no one but the novelist can see or hear the ghost), with graceful or, at any rate, well-polished insults, and frequently with bric-a-brac—Coward having a great fondness for smashing things on stage.

As in the stage play, I felt that proceedings got a little thin—another word that has pursued Coward relentlessly—in the second act, but otherwise it was a highly antic and urbane hour and a half.

IN THE MATTER of performance, Miss Natwick ran off with the honors as she always has. The role of the hearty, bicycle-peddling medium who approaches her uncharitable chores more or less in the spirit of a girl basketball coach and with pretty much the same vocabulary is, in her own words, "a rouser." She was superb in it.

Otherwise I thought the cast didn't quite measure up to that of the stage play. Miss Bacall hasn't the whiplash authority Miss Leonora Corbett displayed on stage, and Coward, versatile as he is, didn't manage the chilly exasperation of his own part with the same aplomb as Clifton Webb.

Guest-Towel User

By Christopher Billopp

A GUEST-TOWEL user is one who, when his hands are damp and he sees a guest towel in front of him, does not stop to think.

He does not reflect that the towel, made of some delicate and expensive material and daintily embroidered, is much too good to be applied to wet, rough hands.

It does not occur to him that if he uses the towel it cannot be left there but will have to be replaced by another equally delicate and expensive guest towel, and that after being removed it will have to be washed and laundered.

He does not consider how much extra trouble he is giving some poor housewife who no doubt already has more burdens than she should bear.

A GUEST-TOWEL USER is an unimaginative person who does not put his mind to work figuring out the many ways in which he can dry his hands without touching a guest towel.

He can look straight at a bath mat without once realizing that it possesses superlative hand-drying qualities. He can be completely oblivious of the fact that nothing would be simpler than running his hands through the ruffles at the bottom of the muslin window curtains.

He does not give thought to the fact that if he were to wave his hands in the air for a while they would dry themselves. Nor, for that matter, does he consider the very simple procedure of taking out his handkerchief and wiping his hands on it; or, if he wishes to save his handkerchief, of wiping his hands on the inside of his trousers pockets.

HE IS OBVIOUSLY to the fact that if everybody wipes their hands on guest towels the poor housewife will be driven to putting out paper ones.

Instead, the guest-towel user, thoughtlessly, selfishly and violently wipes his hands on the guest towel under the mistaken notion that that is what guest towels are for.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A LETTER tells me: "We are just getting settled in our newly built house and immediately all our friends are asking, 'When is the housewarming?' The truth is that I had no idea of giving a housewarming at all. We naturally expected to invite our friends in turn, and we also expected that they would come to see us without waiting to be asked. Now I feel as if I have been put on the spot and should give a housewarming. As this type of party is new to me I would appreciate any information you can give me concerning it."

A "housewarming" is simply a name rather aptly used for the first party house owners choose to give in their new house. An afternoon tea and cocktail party, as a rule, or an evening at home, or perhaps a buffet supper or whatever else you like. The only detail in which a housewarming differs from every other party of its kind is that you are expected to let every one inspect the house from attic to cellar. If you don't choose a particular time to put the house on display, then you will certainly find that you will have to take each person who goes to see you for the first time in your new house on a personally conducted tour of inspection.

Boiled Beef Is a Gastronomic Treat

It's Especially Good With Horseradish Sauce, and Here's How

By Hoyt Alden

IT'S A FUNNY thing about boiled beef. Cooked with the proper seasoning and served with a good sauce, it can be a gastronomic treat and, as such, it is highly respected in other parts of the world. But few Americans know the joys of boiled beef and, say, horseradish sauce, and not many American cook books even bother to include it.

Among people who do know what boiled beef can be, it's a highly prized dish with a number of variations. One of the best is boiled brisket of beef served with horseradish sauce, like this:

Get five or six pounds of beef brisket and then ask the butcher for a veal knuckle and a cracked beef bone. There was a time when he would throw these things in, but the odds are he won't any more.

Put the bones in a kettle, put the meat on top of the bones and then cover it all with water. When it begins to boil, reduce the heat, cover it and let it just simmer for about three hours.

Then add a tablespoon of salt, 12 peppercorns, a stalk of celery including the leaves, a couple of quartered onions, a sliced carrot and a few sprigs of parsley. Cover it and let it cook until it's tender, which probably will take another hour.

Beat some heavy cream until it's about half whipped. Add a little salt and pepper to taste and a teaspoon of lemon juice. More if it doesn't taste tart enough to suit you. Then fold in fresh-grated horseradish to taste.

I personally prefer a hot horseradish sauce of the cream sauce variety, which is made with a cup of Bechamel sauce as a base. Into the hot Bechamel blend two tablespoons of cream and a fourth of a teaspoon of dry mustard. Take it off the fire and blend in a fourth of a cup of freshly grated horseradish and a tablespoon of lemon juice. Mix it thoroughly, but never cook horseradish in a sauce. Just keep it warm. Thin it, if you have to, with hot meat stock.

Now slice your hot boiled beef in thin slices and spoon the sauce over it, and it's an excellent experience.

SHORT ribs of beef are also excellent when boiled and served with a sauce made simply of cream and salt. Melt three tablespoons of butter in a pan, stir in four tablespoons of flour, and then add half a cup of milk and a whole cup of the More subtle than horseradish sauce, and preferred by many, is chive sauce. It's particularly good with boiled short ribs, when cooked as follows:

Wipe three pounds of short ribs with a damp cloth and put them in a kettle with eight cups of boiling water, two sliced onions, six sliced carrots. If you like herbs, add also a bay leaf, a teaspoon of celery salt and a half a teaspoon of powdered thyme. Let the meat simmer for a couple of hours and then put in salt and pepper to taste. Then cut a cabbage into quarters and add that also. Cook it for another three quarters of an hour or so, with the top off.

Put the meat on a platter and surround it with the vegetables. Then make chive sauce like the hot horseradish sauce, with three tablespoons of butter, the same of flour and a cup of meat stock. When it thickens, stir in three tablespoons of chopped chives and cook it some more, and then stir in a cup of sour cream, salt and pepper to taste, and serve it over the meat while it's still hot.

TO change the subject somewhat in closing, I don't know what it is that confuses some cooks when they set out to cook chicken fried steak. Maybe it's the name, or something, but a man just doesn't know what to expect. Sometimes you go in a restaurant and order chicken fried steak and you get something that looks a little like breaded veal cutlets, but tastes more like used rubber heels which have been dipped in batter and fried.

There's nothing mysterious about chicken fried steak. You use either sirloin or top of the round. You have it sliced real thin and you cut it into serving size pieces. Then you pound it a little, sprinkle it with salt and pepper, dredge it in flour and dip it in well beaten egg to which a little water has been added.

Now melt some butter in the skillet and let it get real hot. Then put in the meat and let it cook over a pretty hot fire for about a minute and a half on each side, depending on how thin the meat was sliced. Take them out when they are good and brown. They make good eating.

How Husband Can Build Up Initiative

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

OF all marriages in the educated part of the American population, one-fourth are very definitely dominated by the wife. Such marriages do not provide as great happiness as others—in fact, only one-half of them are happy. Some husbands are so lacking in aggressiveness that even in self-respect that they will make no steps to change the situation. Others quite properly want to approach nearer to the equality of a 50-50 marriage.

"Tell me how to do it," Mr. N. urges. "My wife seems to assume that she will run things single-handed and that I married her merely to carry out her orders. Is there any way to correct this?"

IT'S A SLOW JOB, Mr. N., but you should certainly make a beginning at once, and keep going. Here are a few lines most often followed with some success:

Build up your own self-confidence. Join a Toastmasters' Club, if you can find one; or take a course in public speaking.

Increase your physical activity. Not merely boxing, but bowling, folk dancing, and a dozen other ways of building up your initiative may be available to you.

Get some new accomplishments; find new ways to increase your belief in yourself, your status in the community.

AVOID OVER-FATIGUE. Keep up to concert pitch. Associate more with men. Take an active part in club or organization affairs.

Depend on facts, not argument, to hold your own in family discussions.

Let your wife discover that the suggestions you make, the decisions you propose, are advantageous to her as well as to yourself—that she will gain rather than lose by following out your ideas.

Finally, don't expect rapid

1. A MAN CAN FALL IN LOVE WITH A PICTURE OF A WOMAN. TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

Answer to Question 1.

TRUE. This often happens. Men frequently see some woman's picture, "fall" for her on the spot, hunt her up and marry her. We have no statistics as to the happiness of these marriages. There is historical evidence that several men have committed suicide because of falling in love with the famous Mona Lisa. I suspect the truth of such stories, but love is a strange thing, and its absurdities seem to have no limits.

Answer to Question 2.

Yes. Researches show that many people are embarrassed when they take their shoes off, says psychologist Ernest E. Dichter. The salesman also knows that once a customer is induced to take off his shoes, a sale is almost certain. When we remove our shoes, we are, in a sense, undressing in the presence of a stranger. In ancient times, walking barefoot or in stockings, was a symbol of servitude or humiliation. When I was 12 and got my first pair of shoes, I was both proud and embarrassed.

Answer to Question 3.

To some extent. Human beings—also animals—use about the same muscles to express special emotions—joy, hate, love, anger, etc. For this reason an actor can, by make-up and expression, depict these emotions pretty clearly. However, he concentrates, and produces a "type." We see these "characteristic" lines and expressions only when people "let go" or explode.

Undersize Heating Systems.

WE find that there are a lot of home heating systems that work just fine when the weather isn't too cold outside but just can't seem to keep the house comfortable when the temperature gets real cold.

These are what we call "undersize" systems. The problem is that it takes more heating capacity to keep a house at 70 degrees when the outside temperature is, say, zero than it does to maintain that same indoor temperature when the outside temperature is around 20 or 30 degrees.

The ideal solution to this problem is to have a larger heating system installed but this doesn't happen to be the ideal time of year for this little chore and it may involve more money than you can afford even with installment plans and so forth. Well, then, if you can't put in a larger size heating system the next best thing is to shrink the amount of space that the system has to heat during very cold weather.

In the average home it's usually possible to close off a room or two for the short period of a bad cold spell. The more space you can get along without, the better. To avoid the chance of pipes in the walls of these rooms freezing, don't let the temperature of the closed off sections get any lower than 50 degrees. This will still be saving you a lot of heat.

Even if it is possible to make an undersize heating plant carry the entire house by forcing the heater to go full blast all the time, it's still worth while to cut down the heating load whenever possible. A heating plant that must run full tilt all winter isn't going to last very long—it will burn itself out in a matter of a few years.

Yappian Way

By Stan Delaplane

STAN DELAPLANE

THE ONLY MAN I KNOW in Hollywood who used to be a newspaper man himself and still talks like one is Rufus Blair. Blair is a big man with snow-white hair and a perpetual rousing anger at Hollywood. Blair is noted in the movie colony for his refusal to read the trade papers "Daily Variety" and "Hollywood Reporter," the daily scriptures of the movie colony. He is also noted as an exceedingly able press agent for Paramount.

Blair doggedly reads "Editor & Publisher," the newspaper guide, and will have none of the film fare.

Even though he has been in Hollywood long enough to go with the fixtures, Blair maintains a fresh attitude of shocked indignation. He is credited with tagging Hollywood as "Double Dubuque," and Hollywood boulevard as the "Yappian Way." He knows every newspaper man in the United States and is a valuable Paramount property.

ONCE HE TOLD ME of the lady shoppers of Hollywood boulevard.

"The costume for the course is shorts, a halter bra and a seakins cloth," said Blair with a raucous laugh. "Plus a pair of dark glasses so somebody may think they're a movie star while they are shopping the five and dime. What a town."

We had lunch at the commissary at the studio. "Watch the secretaries," said Blair. "Soon as the place fills up they start acting." He put his voice up falsetto. "Can you IMAGINE whom I was out with last NIGHT?"

"No."
"Joe."
"Oh."

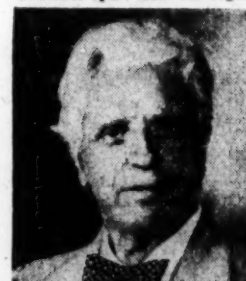

Blair said the commissary did not make money but it was considered a good investment to keep the actors from going downtown, where they might fall under the influence of a martini.

Blair confines his work to the newspapers and regards all actors as suspicious characters. Once his hair was golden. Overexposure to stars bleached him white as a weasel in winter. But he isn't palsied.

Crowded Schedules

By Angelo Patri

THE children and young people who attend schools are very busy indeed. Their days are full to the point of crowding. The many outside activities, that is, the activities apart from the regular school session, have multiplied so that many of the pupils are trying to do too much and do not get the full values out of what they are trying to do.

ANGELO PATRI

It is very easy to do this, especially when the pupil is quick, adept and talented. Everybody wants that sort of helper on his team. Very soon he is carrying too big a load. He will protest vigorously against any suggestion that he drop some of it, so the best way is to begin at the start and make sure the program elected is not too heavy. Children and all young people need time for just living, just for being happy that they are alive.

LOOKING OVER the activities offered to the students of the junior and senior high schools, one is astonished at the lengthening list, every item of which offers opportunity of one sort or another. There are the school clubs, the school paper, the team, the dramatic group, the art club, the nature club. Then there are the drives, the proms, the shows and the special occasions such as graduations.

Coming after these are the community activities. There are the Scouts, the Campfire Girls, the music and dancing lessons, the church clubs and their events such as the suppers and the fairs. Sunday school and church duties must be counted in, too. Added to the school day and its homework requirements, the list is staggering.

WHAT TO CHOOSE and what to leave out must be decided according to the personality of the child in question. His health must come first. Then his abilities. Then his preferences. Then the possibilities of the situation. These activities must fit into the child's daily routine and that of his family. A conference with the child concerned must come first and his wishes decided, the possibilities surveyed. A conference with the teachers concerned also is in order.

Some outside school activities are essential to the well-rounded education and growth of every child. To be left out, to lose touch with classmates, is to feel unfit—and that is a bad feeling for any child, any young person, to have. And remember: one question asked of all aspirants for college entrance and for employment is, "What outside activity did you engage in while in school?"

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

ART CARNEY tells one of those stories about the smart young brother who always was underfoot when his pretty sister wanted to pitch a little woo with her boy friend. To get rid of him one afternoon the boy friend suggested, "Why don't you go down to the street, Willie, and count the men who are wearing red hats. I'll give you a quarter for every one that goes by."

To the surprise of both love birds, Willie, usually very cagey, fell in with this suggestion. Fifteen minutes later, however, they heard his triumphant voice from below. "I don't know how you two are doing up there," he bellowed, "but my ship is about to come in. Here comes the Shriners' parade!"

A Spare-Time Driftwood-Hunter

St. Louisan Makes Lamp Bases Out of Formations From Missouri Waters—Gift for Eisenhowers

By Mary Kimbrough

DESTINED perhaps to shed light on a document of state as it is read by President Eisenhower in his Gettysburg farm home is a patiently-sanded and highly-polished lamp created from driftwood washed up on the banks of Missouri's Black river.

The lamp was made by Frank J. Karl of Pine Lawn, and sent to Mrs. Eisenhower as a gift for the presidential farm. Noting that the wood formation seemed to resemble an eagle hovering over a nest, he named the lamp, "On Guard."

And now, nestled among Karl's cherished possessions in his home at 6517 Myron avenue, is Mrs. Eisenhower's letter of thanks. It reads:

"How very kind of you to send me the attractive driftwood lamp which you have named, 'On Guard.' The significance of the title is most understandable and I am delighted to have the gift for our new house. Thank you immensely for your generous thought and you may be sure that I am most appreciative of your friendly gesture. With best wishes, Mamie Doud Eisenhower."

Rescuing driftwood and turning it into lamp bases became a hobby with Karl, all owing a trip to Florida two years ago.

"My wife and I noticed the pieces of wood called cypress knees in all the curio shops," he said. "I thought then I should like to try to change those pieces of wood into attractive articles for a home."

"I brought back some wood and made lamps from those pieces, but my wife and I weren't satisfied with stopping there. We became so interested that we started going out to explore the various streams and rivers here in Missouri and bringing back all the odd-shaped pieces of driftwood we could find."

Since then Karl has made about 25 lamps, of various shapes and sizes and types of wood. Most of them suggest the silhouette of some object, or an animal. Some he chose simply for the beauty and symmetry of the formation.

"You'll be tramping along by the river and all of a sudden you'll see a piece that looks like something to you," said Karl. "Then you saw off a twig or so and gradually it begins to take shape as you had imagined it."

He pointed to a lamp by the living-room door.

"Now look at that. Doesn't it remind you of a horse's head? We call it the Palomino. And notice, there are two marks on the wood on either side of the head which would be the horse's eyes.

"And over here is one I call the Madonna. It seems to suggest the figure of a Madonna and child."

ALTHOUGH she does little of the actual work on the lamps, Mrs. Karl is as interested as her husband in his new hobby. She has gladly taken all her old lamps to the attic and has driftwood lamps throughout the pretty brick bungalow.

"The only time I object is when he starts to sand a piece of wood down in the basement and all the dust comes up through the registers," she laughed. "Especially when I've just finished cleaning house."

However, she doesn't let that bother her too much. In fact, whenever Karl has a vacation or holiday from his work as a mechanical engineer with P. E. Chapman Electrical Works, Inc., and wants to go driftwood-hunting, she's in the car before he is.

"I wear my blue jeans and sweater and old shoes so I can get out in the wilds and look, she said. "Once I tripped over a branch and fell flat on my face but he was too far away to help so I had to pick myself up. Fortunately I wasn't hurt, just scratched a little."

When they have collected the wood, Karl takes it to his well-equipped basement workshop where he spends practically all his leisure hours. The first step is to clean the wood of all loose dirt, then boil it in a 50-gallon tank of water to kill insects. Then comes the sanding, the wiring and, finally, the polishing.

Most of the work is done with handtools, and the original shape is not changed drastically. Karl's patient workmanship merely refines the contour and the shape he saw in it originally when the wood was lying on the side of a stream. There is no carving of a profile, for instance. If nature has created a silhouette in wood which resembles a human face, Karl merely smooths the surface to make the natural formation more intriguing. He then polishes it to a high gloss and stains it, adding a plastic base as a finishing touch.

A few of the lamp bases didn't turn out well so I just chopped 'em up for kindling wood," he said. "But when I look at the ones that have been finished I can feel that I've accomplished something. That's why it's an interesting hobby to me. I don't see much sense in working with wood if you don't create something beautiful from it."

"But sometimes it takes a lot of imagination to see something beautiful in the driftwood as you find it scattered on the ground."

"In fact," he laughed, "when the neighbors see me with all these pieces that I have loaded in the car on our trips, they call me the 'beachcomber of the middle west.'"

Contract Bridge

The following column is prepared by experts using the bridge system developed by the late Ely Culbertson.

A NEW BOOK, "Bridge Play from A to Z," by George S. Coffin, presents a great many interesting hands, one of which is the following:

South, dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

4♣ Pass Pass Pass

As Mr. Coffin points out, West might have opened his trump as a waiting lead, but he happened to hit upon a much better choice, the ace of hearts followed up by the heart queen.

The question is then put to the reader: what should declarer do—cover or not cover the heart queen with dummy's king?

The correct answer—also made clear by the author—is that it depends on what form of bridge South is playing, rubber bridge or match-points.

At match-points, South can scarcely refuse to make the cover play. He does not know that East is prepared to ruff the heart king; that card might easily hold the trick and South would then make five odd, giving up another heart trick but establishing his long cards in hearts for a club pitch from dummy.

If, however, South is playing rubber bridge, he must not cover the heart queen. If he does, a ruff by East will beat him, whereas he could have made the contract by ducking at Trick 2. Let's follow both lines. First, suppose the heart king is played. East ruffs and returns a club. South must then lose a club trick and another heart.

Now see the safety-play effect of not covering. West collects his second trick then and there, but the best he can do is to lead a third heart for East to ruff. As before, East erases the heart king, but South is now in full control of the situation. He wins the club return with the ace, ruffs out West's last heart with a high trump in dummy, draws trumps, and discards dummy's club queen on the set-up fifth heart.

A Change For Better In Celery

By Edith M. Barber

SOMETIMES our food tastes change for the better. Usually the reason lies in the availability of new products or new forms of old products. Appeal to the palate is more effective than "educational" articles relating to food values.

One of the best examples of this theory is demonstrated by the preference for green celery known as Pascal. We like this because it has so much flavor and is so crisp from inside to outside, that there is no waste. Sometimes the outer stalks may need a little scraping as the outer coating may be slightly tough.

The inner stalks, cut in finger length, may be served as a relish, plain or stuffed with a savory mixture. Perhaps you have noted, as I have, that stuffed celery is a favorite with almost every one. Often canapés are passed by when a choice is given among appetizers.

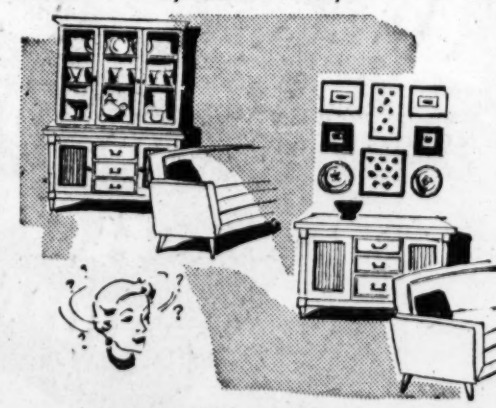

Both the flavor and crispness of celery when it is finely diced makes it popular in a French dressing designed for tossed green salad. It adds just the right touch to a fish or meat salad dressed with mayonnaise. It goes just as well with fruit.

Diced apples with celery and tart mayonnaise with which nuts are sometimes blended are the ingredients of the well-known Waldorf salad. Perhaps this famous New York hotel actually initiated the use of a fruit salad long ago, when the hotel was a landmark on Fifth avenue, instead of on Park avenue.

WHEN everything in the room seems too nearly the same height, there's good reason for a feeling that something tall is needed to break the monotony.

Mrs. A. I have in mind a low piece, but I wonder if it should be a tall cabinet instead to provide height. Am I right in thinking the room needs it, and would

It is wise to keep a color continuity throughout adjoining rooms like these, and it's effectively done by using the same wall color and draperies, although there are other possibilities such as using wallpaper in the dining room in the scheme colors. Of the several possibilities for wall color and draperies, the simplest and often best is wall color that matches the rugs and draperies that combine two or more of the scheme colors.

Find out what's wrong with a room and you've taken a big stride toward improving it. You can so easily with Elizabeth Hillyer's booklet "What's Wrong With That Room?" For your copy, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 15c to Miss Hillyer at the Post-Dispatch.

The newly married pair are expected here the middle of next month to make their home. They met on a skiing trip last March in Zurs, Austria.

Dr. Arthur S. Greditzer, of the Montclair Apartments, was the only St. Louisian who attended the wedding. He served as best man for Dr. Post and returned home Tuesday night.

Miss Felicity Dunwoody, maid of honor, wore white silk organza and a circlet of flowers in her hair to match her bouquet, delphinium and Cecilbrunner roses. Similarly attired was Miss Margaret Hallam, bridesmaid.

As is customary in Church of England weddings, but an unusual feature to Americans, the bride and her father preceded the wedding party to the altar. Her attendants, who are considered her handmaids, followed. In the meantime Dr. Post with his best man and groomsmen, the bride's brother-in-law, Haddon Storey, stood at the front of the church facing the altar, and unlike American weddings, did not watch as the bridal party proceeded down the aisle.

Winter Meeting Set For Women's Group

Comment on Situation in Middle East

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

T HE dinner in San Antonio last weekend for Bonds for Israel was a particularly successful one. George W. Rice, San Antonio city manager, was very kind and even made me an honorary mayor, which is a distinction I had never before achieved. He also presented me with a memorial plate showing scenes of San Antonio.

SOMEbody HANDED me the other day a column written by Dorothy Thompson, headed, "Israeli Concessions Needed for Peace in the Middle East."

That seems to me a most-misleading statement, for no concessions would satisfy either the Soviets, who do most of the instigation of the trouble there, or the Arabs, who state quite frankly and demonstrate in all their dealings with Israeli delegates at the United Nations that they will never recognize Israel as a nation.

We must remember that after the United Nations had set the partition the Arabs did not accept it. It was the Israeli fighting that extended the boundaries originally granted and it was only because they won that the armistice lines set the boundaries where the soldiers actually were. Today the influx of immigrants into Israel and the extraordinary amount of work, which is gradually reclaiming the Negev, would make it impossible to ask Israel to change its boundaries.

Israel is beginning to look as the Biblical descriptions of the country describe it. That had not come about in all the years that the British had a mandate there or that the Arabs controlled the land.

MISS THOMPSON writes of the Palestine refugees. No one who has seen them in their miserable camps could help feeling a deep sympathy for them, but that must not obscure for us what actually happened in Israel. In a war there are always atrocities on both sides, but it was the Mufti in Jerusalem who called upon the Arabs to leave their country and promised them that the Arab armies would soon reconquer their country. He told them to leave everything behind because on their return they would recover not only their own possessions but would gain everything the Israelis ever had. The British furnished the lorries to take those poor people out of their country and the Arab armies never did bring them back.

It seems to me the fair way to handle the situation today is for Great Britain and the United States to ask the U.N. to see that there will be no more aggression in the area and that all borders remain as they are. They could also ask the U.N. to call for volunteers for enforcement of peace if it becomes necessary to do so, and promise their support.

Martha Carr's OPINION—

Dear Martha:

DON'T you think that by the time a girl is 23 she should be able to make her own decisions and run her own life? I live at home with my parents. My two brothers are married and have their own homes. I have been dating a man who was married before and has one little girl. He has to contribute to their support. He does have one fault, and that is his drinking. He has told me he will quit when we marry. He says he drinks because he has been worried over his divorce and since he and his wife split up, he hasn't had a real home so he just drops into a tavern usually in the evening. I want to marry him but my parents are very much against it. I love them but I think I'm mature enough to live my own life, don't you?

NANCY.

At 23 you should be Nancy, but it looks as though you've made a poor decision here. What broke up his first marriage, anyway? Undoubtedly, he was partly to blame, so is the same trouble going to come up in the second marriage? Does he earn enough to support his former family in addition to a new wife, or will you have to sacrifice constantly so he can meet those alimony payments? Don't let him fool you about that drinking. Maybe he was driven to it by loneliness but let him prove he can quit before you take a chance on having to try to reform him later. You'll have to make your own decision between him and your parents, but if you're going to fight with them over someone you love and they don't, make sure that someone is worth it.

Dear Martha:

A NEIGHBOR CHILD comes to our home every day to play with my little girl. But the other child is rough and mean-tempered and has hit my child several times. When I correct her she loses her temper and talks back. What shall I do?

MOTHER.

Don't let a child intimidate you. Your own child can't be protected from all the rough spots, but don't force her to play with someone who hurts her and can only teach her rough ways. You'll just have to tell the child she must behave or go home. A frank talk with her mother might help.

Little Signposts

By Ruth Millett

"EXACTLY how old are you when you get to be middle-aged?" my daughter asked me once. I was hesitant to set an exact time—as are most women. As a matter of fact, it probably isn't any one birthday that makes a woman feel middle-aged. It's a series of little signposts that tell her she is well along the road.

Her children begin to say, "But Mother, you just don't understand," as though they were trying to get a thought through to someone on another planet. Her husband innocently says, "Why she doesn't look that old" about a woman who just happens to be about the same age as the wife.

SHE OVERHEARS a young married woman refer to her crowd as "the older crowd." She notices how often saleswomen try to sell her by saying, "It is so youthful." They never said it when she was.

In the middle of a gay party she catches herself thinking, "We really ought to go home before long. We've got to get up early tomorrow morning." In going through some old snapshots she comes across a picture of herself and her husband when they were first married and thinks "why we were just kids."

She goes shopping for an evening dress and after being shown dozens of dresses with yards and yards of ruffles, says with a trace of exasperation in her voice, "Haven't you anything more suitable for a woman my age?"

Once those words are out it's not so bad. She has admitted to herself and someone else that she is middle-aged—and what of it?

Marathon Hints

By Josephine Lowman

LAST week I offered my eight-week self-improvement Marathon. Thousands of women wrote in for the Marathon booklet, and we are getting these out just as rapidly as is possible. As soon as you receive your Marathon booklet start right in on your eight-week program. Count the eight weeks from the day you begin.

Today I would like to give a few suggestions to those women who already have begun Marathon and to those who will do so soon.

Study the self-analysis department carefully before beginning. Also read the general directions for reducing. Follow the directions about how to measure yourself. Then write the facts down on the weight and measurement Progress Chart.

DO NOT SHOOT for impossible goals. You can lose 20 pounds in eight weeks if you stick to your calorie counting. You also can make great improvement in your proportions. You can increase your energy and improve your hair and skin.

However, not many women can have identical bust and hip measurements. In fact few can. But these measurements can be brought closer to perfection and proper proportion with the rest of the body with specialized exercises.

DO NOT BECOME DISCOURAGED if you fail to lose after a few days of calorie counting. Most women have to diet for several days before the scales show a loss. This is why it is best to weigh only once each week. Stay right in there pitching and you soon will be happily rewarded.

If you would like to join Marathon for a loss in weight or general improvement in physical appearance, and wish to have the Marathon booklet, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for Eight-Week Self-Improvement Marathon Booklet. Address Josephine Lowman in care of the Post-Dispatch.

New Furniture Is Longer and Lower

It Also Is More Rounded and Graceful, Chicago Exhibit Discloses

By Sheldon Garber

CHICAGO, Jan. 19 (UP).

THE new look in home furniture for 1956 is longer, lower, and racier, but at the same time softer, more rounded and more graceful.

Low, low couches, big wide seats, round tables, and curved arrangements appear to be setting the trend at the international home furnishings winter market.

The market is one of two held every year in Chicago. They are the world's biggest wholesale home furnishings events. Before the two-week run ends tomorrow, more than 40,000 exhibitors and buyers will have attended.

Los Angeles designer Barney Flagg, looking over some of the 4000 exhibits, said the "mechanical look" appears to be dying out and an increasing variety showing up.

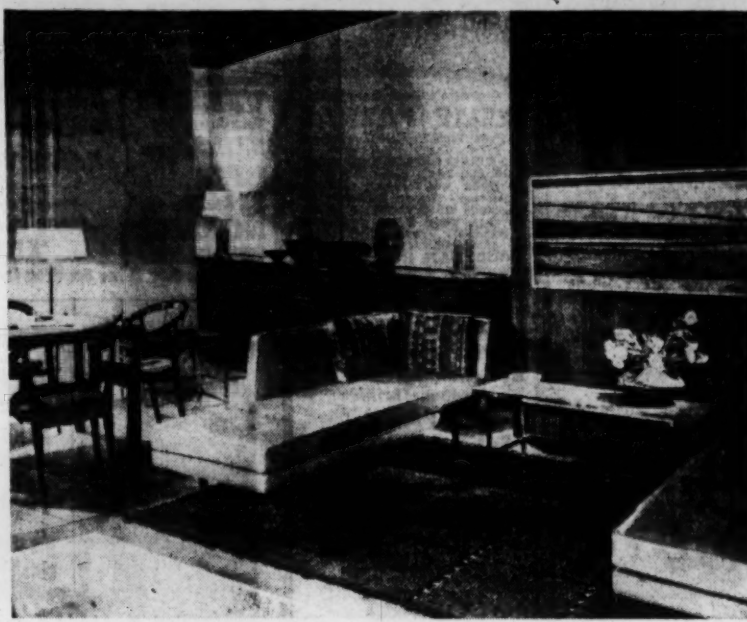

"There's a longer, lower, racier appearance to the new furniture," Flagg said. "It is a light line look, achieved by attention to details without sacrificing comfort."

F. R. Houlihan, Cambridge, Mass., president of the National Retail Furniture Association, said he found traditional styles are being worked into modern forms.

"There are more rounded and curved effects this year," Houlihan said. "We're getting away from the straight, severe modern."

CHICAGO designer Henry Glass agreed. He said that "on one hand, there is more simplicity, and on the other more curved lines giving a note of elegance."

Decorative Dorothy Draper also shopped the market. She reported she found "new trends of elegance, charm of detail."

and beauty of woods" without the loss of practicality.

Miss Draper and other designers were impressed by the new uses of materials to relieve straight modern lines. She pointed to new combinations using leather mosaics, brass, pewter, straw and different color woods for contrast.

Beverly Hills designer Paul Lazo, who won a prize for using leather in a new room setting, said that leather provides a natural texture and has deep color that can produce a feeling of richness in an otherwise barren modern room.

COLORS getting new emphasis this year include shades of brown and gray. Chicago designer C. E. Waltman said that turquoise blue appears to be challenging the popularity of pink.

Price increases at the wholesale level may serve to improve styles, according to designer Sanford Wallach of Fairfield, Conn.

"In order to reduce costs," Wallach said, "a lot of stuff will be taken off furniture that didn't belong there in the first place."

The result, Wallach said, will be to create furniture with both "a sense of elegance and of simplicity."

Child Who Is Easily Frustrated

By Frances Ilg, M.D., and Louise Ames, Ph.D.

Of the Gesell Institute of Child Development

"I HAVE three children, ages ranging from 8 years to 3 years," a mother writes. "My middle child is a boy, 5½ years old. His problem is, that of frustration. If things do not go right, he cries immediately."

"For example, building with blocks or playing with his simple electric train, if for some reason things don't go right, he does not try to remedy the situation, but will get angry and cry. We have pointed out on innumerable occasions that he should spare the tears and concentrate on fixing the damage. We have attempted to have him play with toys suitable for his age."

"This crying so easily is noticeable, too, in playing with other children. If, for example, he has given up a toy to be shared or has given another child a turn and it has not been reciprocated, he will cry. "We would greatly appreciate whatever help you could give us on this most bothersome problem—frustration over simple situations resulting in tears."

WE'RE AFRAID that your son's problem is one which has no easy or ready solution. Nursery school or kindergarten attendance often helps out in a case like this. Teachers are especially skilled in helping children to stand frustration, and to gear their efforts to what they can do successfully.

Your boy sounds a little immature in his reactions. However, it is true that many, around 5½ to 6, behave in just this way. Most are a little better able to stand frustration even by 7.

In the meantime, explaining to him that he should spare the tears and concentrate on fixing the damage isn't (as you have doubtless discovered) going to do much good. His response is an emotional one, not an intellectual one. So the situation can't be helped much by words. You are going to have to get right in there and help him to manage situations more adequately. First, try to keep him in fairly simple situations. When things go wrong, you join in and say, "Now how can we fix this?" He will cry for a while and then, usually, stop in his interest to see what you are doing.

YOU HAVE TRIED to get him toys suitable for his age. He may need toys, a little younger than his age. He apparently needs quite simple social situations. Maybe he needs to play with younger children, or not to play so long, or to play with only one child at a time.

Instead of thinking how he "ought" to behave, just try to take him for what he is and start where he is. And if he behaves like a younger child, give him the extra support and help which you normally give a younger child. Of course, these children who get frustrated so easily are often poor at accepting help. So that, all in all, you will have to use great skill. Fortunately, time is on your side.

Slice a loaf of rye bread but do not cut all the way through to the bottom. Cream a quarter cup of butter or margarine and a quarter cup of firmly-packed soft cheddar cheese together. Spread the cut surfaces of the bread with the cheese mixture. Just before serving, heat the bread in a moderate or hot oven. Worcestershire sauce, celery salt or other seasonings may be added to the cheese mixture.

Chapter Twenty-Four

HE boy stared intently at Jan. "I asked you where am I?" Jan repeated. Then the boy began to whine, she felt and sank to the ground. The boy hurried to her side. "You look awful pale. Are you sick?" he asked kindly. "I guess I am."

"Maybe you're hungry. I've got a sandwich here you can eat."

He unwrapped the package hastily, and offered Jan a sandwich of thick white bread. "Thank you," she said. "I am hungry."

He sat down beside her while she ate. "My name's Casey," he said. "What's yours?"

Jan thought for a moment as she ate the sandwich. "Janice Jones," she said. "You can call me Jan."

"O.K. Jan. Well, you're in late Park."

"How far is that from New York?" Jan asked.

"About 150 miles if you take the ferry."

"It is? That far? What state are we in?" Jan cried in panic. The boy laughed. "I guess you must have had a night of it in Pennsylvania. Didn't you know that?"

Jan shook her head.

"Boy, you must have a hang-over! What happened to your friends?" he asked.

"I—I don't know," Jan said, hesitating and wondering how much she should tell him. "They left me."

"They sure did. Fine friends you have. How are you going to get home?"

"I wish I knew," Jan exclaimed. "In Pennsylvania! That's terrible. I must get home and I'll have to telephone my father as quickly as I can. He'll be terribly worried. Where can I get a phone?"

"Not around here," the boy replied. "You got a long walk to get to one."

JAN was on the verge of tears. "Well, I don't feel like walking now," she said. "Is there water in that canteen? Could I have a drink?"

"Sure can, Jan," Casey said generously. "Help yourself."

Jan took the canteen and unscrewed the cap. "I never drank out of one of these things," she confessed.

"Hold the side of your mouth open as you drink. That lets in the air," Casey advised. After the sandwich, Jan felt better.

"You live in New York?" Casey asked.

"Yes."

"I've always wanted to see New York. Never been there. Must be a sight. I was in Philadelphia once," the boy said.

"That's a nice city, too," Jan told him.

The boy looked at the distant hills. "Sure always wanted to see New York."

Suddenly he jumped to his feet. "You know what?" he asked. "I'll drive you to New York. That way I'll get to see the place."

"Have you got a car?" Jan asked in surprise.

"Nope. But I can borrow my uncle's truck. It's up there in the woods where I been chopping trees. I'll get it and we'll take off," he added enthusiastically.

"Will your uncle loan the truck?" Jan asked anxiously.

"Sure," the boy said. "He's a good scout. He'll let me use it. We can make the trip in no time."

"How long will it take?"

"Oh, three hours, maybe, or four."

"That's wonderful!" Jan exclaimed. "You're sure it's all right, though?"

"Sure. I'll go fetch the truck now. You stay here."

"I'll pay you for the gas and everything," Jan promised.

THEN she remembered. She had no money. She wondered if Casey had enough gas for the trip. He didn't seem to be worried about it.

"Feeling better?" he asked.

"I'm feeling fine. But we'll stop at the first place there's a telephone. I must call my father. He'll be worried sick."

"Maybe you better be more careful picking your friends next time," Casey suggested.

Casey walked down the lane, in the direction Jan had come. She watched him, taking long strides and whistling merrily. Casey was about 17, she judged, an athletic young man with broad shoulders and long legs. She watched him until he disappeared at a curve in the lane.

"I hope he doesn't change his mind. I hope he comes back. If he doesn't, I don't know what I'll do."

A little later she heard the sound of a starter, and then the chug-chug of a motor. It was strange how far sound carried in the stillness of the woods.

A MAN who once worked for the Howard Thurston show had this to say about the famous magician:

"Howard Thurston was the most successful of all magicians in reaching the hearts of the public. He treated children with special attention. He was fond of them and knew that they would later become his grown audience."

About 25 years ago, I had the pleasure of a long talk with Thurston. In answer to my questions, he told me many facts about his life.

I ASKED THURSTON whether his tricks ever had "gone wrong" and he replied: "Oh, yes, that has happened now and then. I was giving a magic show at the White House, and borrowed a watch from President Coolidge. The trick called for a cheap imitation watch to be smashed with a hammer. I was about to strike when my assistant whispered, 'You've got the wrong watch!' I was able to hold back the blow, and the President's watch was saved."

At another time things went wrong while Thurston was on the stage performing the trick of "sawing a lady in half." He had done this trick dozens of times, and always had been able to put the two halves of the lady together, so she could step from the box and prove to everyone that she remained alive.

THAT NIGHT someone forgot to turn a hidden crank. Thurston wanted to start sawing, but George Boston, his assistant, refused to hand him the big saw. "Hurry up, George, and give me the saw!" exclaimed the magician. "I want to saw this woman in half!"

"You will do exactly that unless you are careful!" replied Boston.

"What do you mean?"

"Someone has forgotten to work the gimmick!"

Happily for the lady, the "gimmick" was worked before the sawing started.

Cold Weather to Stay Several Days

Jan peered down the lane, as the truck came in sight. It was a small one-ton truck, painted red. She arose to her feet, stood unsteadily for a moment and then got hold of herself.

"Taxi, lady?" Casey cried triumphantly, as he drove up to her.

Jan got in the seat beside him. "I don't know what I'd have done if you hadn't come up this lane," she told the boy. "I'm very grateful to you."

"Skip it," he told her. "One look at that Empire State building and I'll be satisfied to go back to Pennsylvania for good."

"Maybe you'll like it and stay there," Jan said. "I mean, you'll come back after you've returned your uncle's truck."

"Maybe I will," the boy said.

The lane was bumpy and Jan slid around in the seat helplessly. "Take it a little easy until we get on a good road," she begged.

Casey slowed down. "Excuse me," he said. "Never thought about you. I'm used to riding this old jalopy. I take right off across the cleared land, no road, no nothing."

It was two miles before they struck a good dirt road. Then Casey stepped on it. The speedometer went up to 65.

"Take it easy here, too," Jan repeated. "We don't want to get a ticket."

"You mean speed ticket?" Casey laughed. "There isn't a state trooper within 15 miles."
